LOVE-MELANCHOLY.

THE FIRST { SECTION.
MEMBER.
SUBSECTION.

The Preface.

THERE will not be wanting, I presume, one or other that will much discommend some part of this Treatise of Love-Melancholy, and object (which <sup>1</sup>Erasmus in his Preface to Sir Thomas More suspects of his) that it is too light for a Divine, too Comical a subject to speak of Love-Symptoms, too phantastical, and fit alone for a wanton Poet, a feeling young love-sick gallant, an effeminate Courtier, or some such idle person. And 'tis true they say: for by the naughtiness of men it is so come to pass, as <sup>2</sup>Caussin observes, ut castis auribus vox amoris suspecta sit, et invisa, the very name of Love is odious to chaster ears. And therefore some again out of an affected gravity, will dislike all for the name's sake before they read a word; dissembling with him in <sup>3</sup>Petronius,<sup>4</sup> and seem to be angry that their ears are violated with such obscene speeches, that so they may be admired for grave Philosophers, and staid carriage. They cannot abide to hear talk of Love-toys, or amorous discourses, vultu, gestu, oculis, in their outward actions averse, and yet in their cogitations they are all out as bad, if not worse than others.

Sed coram Bruto; Brute recede, leget.

But let these cavillers and counterfeit Catos<sup>2</sup> know, that, as the Lord John answered the Queen in that Italian <sup>3</sup>Guazzo, an old, a grave, discreet man, is fittest to discourse of Love matters, because he hath likely more experience, observed more, hath a more staid judgement, can better discern, resolve, discuss, advise, give better cautions, and more solid precepts, better inform his auditors in such a subject, and by reason of his riper years sooner divert. Besides, nihil in hac amoris voce subtimendum, there is nothing here to be excepted at; Love is a species of melancholy, and a necessary part of this my Treatise, which I may not omit; operi suscepto inserviendum fuit; so Jacobus Micyllus pleadeth for himself in his translation of Lucian's Dialogues, and so do I; I must and will perform my task. And that short excuse of Mercerus for his edition of Aristænetus shall be mine, ‘If I have spent my time ill to write, let not them be so idle as to read. But I am persuaded it is not so ill spent. I ought not to excuse or repent myself of this subject, on which many grave and worthy men have written whole volumes, Plato, Plutarch, Plotinus, Maximus Tyrius, Alcinous, Avicenna, Leon Hebraeus in three large Dialogues, Xenophon, sympos. Theophrastus, if we may believe Athenæus, lib. 13. cap. 9, Picus Mirandula, Marius Æquicola, both in Italian, Kornmannus, de linea Amoris, lib. 3, Petrus Godefridus hath handled in three books, P. Hædus, and which almost every Physician, as Arnoldus, Villanovanus, Valleriola, observat. med. lib. 2. observ. 7, Ælian Montaltus, and Laurentius, in their Treatises of Melancholy, Jason Pratensis, de morb. cap. Valescus de Taranta, Gordonius, Hercules de Saxoniâ, Savanarola, Langius, &c. have treated of apart, and in their works. I excuse myself therefore with Peter Godefridus, Valleriola, Ficinus, and in <sup>5</sup>Langius's words: Cadmus Milesius writ fourteen books of Love, and why should I be ashamed to write an Epistle in favour of young men, of this subject? A company of stern Readers dislike the second of the Æneids, and Virgil's gravity, for inserting such amorous passions in an heroical subject; but <sup>1</sup>Servius, his Commentator, justly vindicates the Poet's worth, wisdom, and discretion, in doing as he did. Castaltio would not have young men read the <sup>2</sup>Canticles, because to his thinking it was too light and amorous a tract, a Ballad of Ballads, as our old English translation hath it. He might as well forbid the reading of Genesis, because of the loves of Jacob and Rachel, the stories of Shechem and Dinah, Judah and Tamar; reject the book of Numbers, for the fornications of the people of Israel with the Moabites; that of Judges, for Samson and Delilah's embracings; that of the Kings, for David and Bathsheba's adulteries, the incest of Amnon and Tamar, Solomon's Concubines, &c. the stories of Esther, Judith, Susanna, and many such. Dicæarchus, and some other, carp at Plato's majesty, that he would vouchsafe to indite such Love toys; amongst the rest, for that dalliance with Agatho,

Ægra etenim properans tanquam abitura fuit.<sup>3</sup>

For my part, saith <sup>4</sup>Maximus Tyrias, a great Platonist himself, me non tantum admiratio habet, sed etiam stupor, I do not only admire, but stand amazed to read that Plato and Socrates both should expel Homer from their City,<sup>5</sup> because he writ of such light and wanton subjects, quod Junonem cum Jove in Idæ concumbentes inducit, ab immortalī nube contextos,<sup>6</sup> Vulcan's net, Mars's and Venus's fopperies before all the Gods,<sup>7</sup> because Apollo fled, when he was persecuted by Achilles, the <sup>8</sup>Gods were wounded and ran whining away, as Mars that roared louder than Stentor, and covered nine acres of ground with his fall; Vulcan was a Summer's day falling down from Heaven, and in Lemnos Isle brake his leg, &c. with such ridiculous passages; when as both Socrates and Plato by his testimony writ lighter themselves: quid enim tam distat (as he follows it) quam amans à temperante, formarum admirator à demente, what can be more absurd than for grave Philosophers to treat of such fooleries, to admire Autolycus,<sup>9</sup> Alcibiades, for their beauties as they did, to run after, to gaze, to dote on fair Phædrus, delicate Agatho, young Lysis, fine Charmides? Hæcine Philosophum

decent? Doth this become grave Philosophers? Thus peradventure Callias, Thrasymachus, Polus, Aristophanes, or some of his adversaries and emulators might object; but neither they nor <sup>1</sup>Anytus and Meletus, his bitter enemies, that condemned him for teaching Critias to tyrannize, his impiety for swearing by dogs and planetrees, for his juggling sophistry, &c. never so much as upbraided him with impure Love, writing or speaking of that subject; and therefore without question, as he concludes, both Socrates and Plato in this are justly to be excused. But suppose they had been a little overseen, should divine Plato be defamed? No, rather, as he said of Cato's drunkenness, if Cato were drunk, it should be no vice at all to be drunk. They reprove Plato then, but without cause (as <sup>2</sup>Ficinus pleads) for all Love is honest and good, and they are worthy to be loved that speak well of Love. Being to speak of this admirable affection of Love (saith <sup>3</sup>Valleriolla) there lies open a vast and philosophical field to my discourse, by which many lovers become mad: let me leave my more serious meditations, wander in these Philosophical fields, and look into those pleasant Groves of the Muses, where with unspeakable variety of Flowers we may make Garlands to ourselves, not to adorn us only, but with their pleasant smell and juice to nourish our souls, and fill our minds desirous of knowledge, &c. After an harsh and displeasing discourse of Melancholy, which hath hitherto molested your patience, and tired the author, give him leave with <sup>4</sup>Godefridus the Lawyer, and Laurentius (cap. 5.) to recreate himself in this kind after his laborious studies, since so many grave Divines and worthy men have without offence to manners, to help themselves and others, voluntarily written of it. Heliodorus, a Bishop, penned a Love story of Theagenes and Chariclea,<sup>5</sup> and when some Catos<sup>6</sup> of his time reprehended him for it, chose rather, saith <sup>7</sup>Nicephorus, to leave his Bishoprick than his book. Aeneas Sylvius, an ancient Divine, and past 40 years of age (as <sup>1</sup> he confesseth himself) after <sup>2</sup> Pope Pius Secundus indited that wanton history of Euryalus and Lucretia. And how many Superintendents of learning could I reckon up, that have written of light phantastical subjects! Beroaldus, Erasmus, Alpheratius, twenty-four times printed in Spanish, &c. Give me leave then to refresh my Muse a little, and my weary Readers, to expatiate in this delightsome field; hoc deliciarum campus, as Fonseca terms it, to <sup>3</sup> season a surly discourse with a more pleasing aspersion of Love matters. Eduicare vitam convenit, as the Poet invites us, curas nugis, <sup>4</sup> &c. 'tis good to sweeten our life with some pleasing toys to relish it, and, as Pliny <sup>5</sup> tells us, magna pars studiosorum amenitates quærimus, most of our students love such pleasant <sup>6</sup> subjects. Though Macrobius teach us otherwise, <sup>7</sup> that those old Sages banished all such light tracts from their studies to nurses' cradles, to please only the ear, yet out of Apuleius I will oppose as honourable Patrons, Solon, Plato, <sup>8</sup> Xenophon, Adrian, &c. that as highly approve of these Treatises. On the other side methinks they are not to be disliked, they are not so unfit. I will not peremptorily say, as one did, <sup>9</sup> tam suavia dicam facinora, ut male sit ei qui talibus non delectetur, I will tell you such pretty stories, that foul befall him that is not pleased with them; neque dicam ea quæ vobis usuui sit audivisse, et voluptati meminisse, with that confidence, as Beroaldus doth his enarrations on Propertius. I will not expect or hope for that approbation, which Lipsius gives to his Epictetus, pluris facio quum relego: semper ut novum, et quum repetivi, repetendum; the more I read, the more shall I covet to read. I will not press you with my pamphlets, or beg attention, but if you like them you may. Pliny holds it expedient, and most fit, severitatem jucunditate etiam in scriptis condire, to season our works with some pleasant discourse; Synesius approves it, licet in ludicris ludere, the <sup>10</sup> Poet admires it,

And there be those, without question, that are more willing to read such toys than <sup>1</sup>I am to write. Let me not live, saith Aretine's Antonia, if I had not rather hear thy discourse <sup>2</sup>than see a play ! No doubt but there be more of her mind, ever have been, ever will be, as <sup>3</sup>Hierome bears me witness. A far greater part had rather read Apuleius than Plato : Tully himself confesseth he could not understand Plato's Timæus, and therefore cared less for it ; but every school-boy hath that famous testament of Grunnius Corocotta Porcellus at his finger's ends.<sup>4</sup> The Comical Poet, made this his only care and sole study to please the people, tickle the ear, and to delight ; but mine earnest intent is as much to profit as to please ; non tam ut populo placerem quam ut populum juvarem ; and these my writings, I hope, shall take like gilded pills, which are so composed, as well to tempt the appetite, and deceive the palate, as to help, and medicinally work upon the whole body ; my lines shall not only recreate but rectify the mind. I think I have said enough ; if not, let him that is otherwise minded, remember that of [Apulcius]<sup>6</sup> Madaurensis, he was in his life a Philosopher (as Ausonius<sup>7</sup> apologizeth for him ; ) in his Epigrams a Lover, in his precepts most severe, in his Epistle to Cærellia a wanton. Annianus, Sulpicius, Evenus, Menander, and many old Poets besides, did in scriptis prurire, write Fescennines, Atellanæ, and lascivious songs ; lætam materiam ; yet they had in moribus censuram et severitatem, they were chaste, severe, and upright livers.

—— Id sibi negoti credidit solum dari, Populo ut placerent, quas fecisset fabulas,<sup>5</sup>

Castum esse decet pium poetam
Ipsam, versiculos nihil necesse est,
Qui tum denique habent salem et leporem.<sup>8</sup>

I am of Catullus' opinion, and make the same apology in mine own behalf: hoc etiam quod scribo, pendet plerumque ex aliorum sententiâ et auctoritate; nec ipse forsâ insano, sed insanientes sequor. Atqui detur hoc insanire me; semel insanivimus omnes,<sup>1</sup> et tute ipse opinor insanis aliquando, et is, et ille, et ego scilicet.<sup>2</sup>

Homo sum, humani à me nihil alienum puto :<sup>3</sup>

[I am a man and deem in human nature
Nothing unworthy of my sympathy.]

And, which he urgeth for himself, accused of the like fault, I as justly plead,

<sup>4</sup> Lasciva est nobis pagina, vita proba est;

howsoever my lines err, my life is honest,

But I presume I need no such apologies. I need not, as Socrates in Plato,<sup>6</sup> cover his face when he spake of Love, or blush and hide mine eyes, as Pallas did in her hood, when she was consulted by Jupiter about Mercury's marriage, quod super nuptiis virgo consulitur, it is no such lascivious, obscene, or wanton discourse; I have not offended your chaster ears with any thing that is here written, as many French and Italian Authors in their modern language of late have done, nay some of our Latin Pontifical writers, Zanchius, Asorius, Abulensis, Burchardus, &c. whom <sup>7</sup>Rivet accuseth to be more lascivious than Virgil in Priapeis, Petronius in Catalectis, Aristophanes in Lysistrata, Martial, or any other Pagan profane writer, qui tam atrociter (<sup>8</sup> one notes) hoc genere peccârunt, ut multa ingeniosissime scripta obscenitatum gratiâ castæ mentes abhorreant.<sup>9</sup> 'Tis not scurrile this, but chaste, honest, most part serious, and even of religion itself. <sup>10</sup>Incensed (as he said) with the love of finding love, we have sought it, and found it. More yet, I have augmented and added something to this light Treatise (if light) which was not in the former Editions, I am not ashamed to confess it, with a good <sup>1</sup>Author, quod extendi et locupletari hæc subjectum plerique postulabant, et eorum importunitate victus, animum utcunque renitentem ed adeg, ut jam sexta vice calamum in manum sumerem, scripti-onique longè et à studiis et professione me alienæ me accingerem, horas a iquis à seriis meis occupationibus interim suffura us, easque veluti ludo cuidam ac recreationi destinans ;

And thus much I have thought good to say by way of preface, lest any man (which <sup>4</sup>Godfridus feared in his book) should blame in me lightness, wantonness, rashness, in speaking of Love's causes, enticements, symptoms, remedies, lawful and unlawful Loves, and lust itself. <sup>5</sup>I speak it only to tax and deter others from it, not to teach, but to shew the vanities and fopperies of this heroical or Herculean Love, <sup>6</sup>and to apply remedies un'o it. I will treat of this with like liberty as of the rest.

Condemn me not, good Reader, then, or censure me hardly, if some part of this Treatise to thy thinking as yet be too light, but consider better of it. Omnia munda mundis,<sup>8</sup> <sup>9</sup>a naked man to a modest woman is no otherwise than a picture, as Augusta Livia

SUBJECT. 2.—Love's Beginning, Object, Definition, Division.

Love's limits are ample and great, and a spacious walk it hath, beset with thorns, and for that cause, which <sup>9</sup>Scaliger reprehends in

Love, universally taken, is defined to be a Desire, as a word of more ample signification: and though Leon Hebræus, the most copious writer of this subject, in his third Dialogue make no difference, yet in his first he distinguisheth them again, and defines Love by desire. <sup>3</sup>Love is a voluntary affection, and desire to enjoy that which is good. <sup>4</sup>Desire wisheth, Love enjoys: the end of the one is the beginning of the other: that which we love is present; that which we desire is absent. <sup>5</sup>It is worth the labour, saith Plotinus, to consider well of Love, whether it be a God or a Devil, or passion of the mind, or partly God, partly Devil, partly passion. He concludes Love to participate of all three, to arise from desire of that which is beautiful and fair, and defines it to be an action of the mind desiring that which is good. <sup>6</sup>Plato calls it the great Devil, for its vehemency, and sovereignty over all other passions, and defines it an appetite, <sup>7</sup>by which we desire some good to be present. Ficinus in his comment adds the word fair to this definition, Love is a desire of enjoying that which is good and fair. Austin dilates this common definition, and will have love to be a delectation of the heart <sup>1</sup> for something which we seek to win, or joy to have, coveting by desire, resting in joy. <sup>2</sup> Scaliger, Exerc. 301, taxeth these former definitions, and will not have love to be defined by Desire or Appetite: for when we enjoy the things we desire, there remains no more appetite: as he defines it, Love is an affection by which we are either united to the thing we love, or perpetuate our union; which agrees in part with Leon Hebræus.

Now this Love varies as its object varies, which is always good, amiable, fair, gracious, and pleasant. <sup>3</sup> All things desire that which is good, as we are taught in the Ethicks, or at least that which to them seems to be good; quid enim vis mali (as Austin well infers) dic mihi? puto nihil in omnibus actionibus; thou wilt wish no harm I suppose, no ill in all thine actions, thoughts or desires, nihil mali vis; <sup>4</sup> thou wilt not have bad corn, bad soil, a naughty tree, but all good; a good servant, a good horse, a good son, a good friend, a good neighbour, a good wife. From this goodness comes Beauty; from Beauty, Grace, and Comeliness, which result as so many rays from their good parts, make us to love, and so to covet it: for were it not pleasing and gracious in our eyes, we should not seek [it]. <sup>5</sup> No man loves, saith Aristotle, 9. Mor. cap. 5, but he that was first delighted with comeliness and beauty. As this fair object varies, so doth our Love; for, as Proclus holds, omne pulchrum amabile, every fair thing is amiable, and what we love is fair and gracious in our eyes, or at least we do so apprehend and still esteem of it. <sup>6</sup> Amiability is the object of Love, the scope and end is to obtain it, for whose sake we love, and which our mind covets to enjoy. And it seems to us especially fair and good; for good, fair, and unity, cannot be separated. Beauty shines, Plato saith, and by reason of its splendour and shining causeth admiration; and the fairer the object is, the more eagerly it is sought. For, as the same Plato defines it, <sup>1</sup> Beauty is a lively shining or glittering brightness, resulting from effused good, by ideas, seeds, reasons, shadows, stirring up our minds, that by this good they may be united and made one. Others will have beauty to be the perfection of the whole composition, <sup>2</sup> caused out of the congruous symmetry, measure, order and manner of parts; and that comeliness which proceeds from this beauty is called grace, and from thence all fair things are gracious. For grace and beauty are so wonderfully annexed, <sup>3</sup> so sweetly and gently win our souls, and strongly allure, that they confound our judgement and cannot be distinguished. Beauty and Grace are like those beams and shinings that come from the glorious and divine Sun, which are diverse, as they proceed from the diverse objects, to please and affect our several senses. As the species of beauty are taken at our eyes, ears, or conceived in our inner soul, as Plato disputes at large in his Dialogue de Pulchro, Phædrus, Hippias, and, after many sophistical errors confuted, concludes that beauty is a grace in all things, delighting the eyes, ears and soul itself; so that, as Valesius infers hence, whatsoever pleaseth our ears, eyes, and soul. must needs be beautiful, fair, and delightful to us. <sup>4</sup> And nothing can more please our ears than musick, or pacify our minds. Fair houses, pictures, orchards, gardens, fields, a fair hawk, a fair horse is most acceptable unto us; whatsoever pleaseth our eyes and ears, we call beautiful and fair; <sup>5</sup> pleasure belongeth to the rest of the senses, but grace and beauty to these two alone. As the objects vary and are diverse, so they diversely affect our eyes, ears, and soul itself; which gives occasion to some to make so many several kinds of Love as there be objects: one beauty ariseth from God, of which and divine Love S. Dionysius,<sup>6</sup> with many Fathers and Neotericks, have written just volumes, De amore Dei, as they term it, many parænetical discourses; another from his creatures; there is a beauty of the body, a beauty of the soul, a beauty from virtue, formam martyrum <sup>1</sup> Austin calls it, quam videmus oculis animi,<sup>2</sup> which we see with the eyes of our mind ; which beauty, as Tully saith,<sup>3</sup> if we could discern [it] with these corporeal eyes, admirabiles sui amores excitaret, would cause admirable affections, and ravish our souls. This other beauty, which ariseth from those extreme parts, and graces which proceed from gestures, speeches, several motions, and proportions of creatures, men and women (especially from women, which made those old Poets put the three Graces still in Venus' company, as attending on her, and holding up her train<sup>4</sup>) are infinite almost, and vary their names with their objects, as love of money, covetousness, love of beauty, lust, immoderate desire of any pleasure, concupiscence, friendship, love, good will, &c. and is either virtue or vice, honest, dishonest, in excess, defect, as shall be shewed in his place ; heroical love, religious love, &c. which may be reduced to a twofold division, according to the principal parts which are affected, the brain and liver : amor et amicitia,<sup>5</sup> which Scaliger, exercitat. 301, Valesius and Melancthon, warrant out of Plato, φιλεῖν and ἐρᾶν from that speech of Pausanias, [ix. 16.] belike, that makes two Veneres and two loves. <sup>6</sup> One Venus is ancient, without a mother, and descended from heaven, whom we call celestial ; the younger begotten of Jupiter and Dione, whom commonly we call Venus. Ficinus in his comment upon this place, cap. 8, following Plato, calls these two loves two Devils, or good and bad Angels according to us, which are still hovering about our souls. <sup>7</sup> The one rears to heaven, the other depresseth us to hell ; the one good, which stirs us up to the contemplation of that divine beauty, for whose sake we perform Justice, and all godly offices, study Philosophy, &c. the other base, and, though bad, yet to be respected ; for indeed both are good in their own natures ; procreation of children is as necessary as that finding out of truth, but therefore called bad because it is abused, and withdraws our soul from the speculation of that other to viler objects ; so far Ficinus. S. Austin, lib. 15. de civ. Dei, et sup. Psal. 64, hath delivered as much in effect. <sup>1</sup> Every creature is good, and may be loved well or ill: and <sup>2</sup> two Cities make two Loves, Jerusalem and Babylon, the Love of God the one, the Love of the world the other; of these two cities we all are Citizens, as by examination of ourselves we may soon find, and of which: the one Love is the root of all mischief, the other of all good. So, in his 15th cap. lib. de amor. Ecclesie, he will have those four cardinal virtues to be nought else but Love rightly composed; in his 15th Book de civ. Dei, cap. 22, he calls virtue the order of Love, whom Thomas following, 1. part. 2. quæst. 55. art. 1. and quæst. 56. 3. quæst 62. art. 2, confirms as much, and amplifies in many words. <sup>3</sup> Lucian to the same purpose hath a division of his own, one love was born in the sea, which is as various and raging in young men's breasts as the sea itself, and causeth burning lust: the other is that golden chain which was let down from heaven, and with a divine Fury ravisheth our souls, made to the image of God, and stirs us up to comprehend the innate and incorruptible beauty, to which we were once created. Beroaldus hath expressed all this in an Epigram of his.

Dogmata divini memorant si vera Platonis,
Sunt geminæ Veneres, et geminatus amor.
Cœlestis Venu est nullo generata parente,
Quæ casto sanctos nectit amore viros.
Altera sed Venus est totum vulgata per orbem,
Quæ divûm mentes alligat, atque hominum;
Improbâ, seductrix, petulans, &c.

If divine Plato's tenents they be true,
Two Veneres, two loves there be;
The one from heaven, unbegotten still,
Which knits our souls in unity.
The other famous over all the world,
Binding the hearts of gods and men;
Dishonest, wanton, and seducing, she Rules whom she will, both where and when.

This twofold division of Love Origen likewise follows in his Comment on the Canticles, one from God, the other from the Devil, as he holds, (understanding it in the worser sense) which many others repeat and imitate. Both which (to omit all subdivisions) in excess or defect, as they are abused, or degenerate, cause melancholy in a particular kind, as shall be shewed in his place. Austin, in another Tract, makes a threefold division of this Love, which we may use well or ill: 'God, our neighbour, and the world: God above us, our neighbour next us, the world beneath us. In the course of our desires God hath three things, the world one, our neighbour two. Our desire to God is either from God, with God, or to God, and ordinarily so runs. From God, when it receives from him, whence, and for which it should love him: with God, when it contradicts his will in nothing: to God, when it seeks to him, and rests itself in him. Our Love to our neighbour may proceed from him, and run with him, not to him; from him, as when we rejoice of his good safety, and well doing; with him when we desire to have him a fellow and companion of our journey in the way of the Lord; not in him, because there is no aid, hope, or confidence, in man. From the world our Love comes, when we begin to admire the Creator in his works, and glorify God in his creatures; with the world it should run, if, according to the mutability of all temporalities, it should be dejected in adversity, or over elevated in prosperity; to the world, if it would settle itself in its vain delights and studies. Many such partitions of Love I could repeat, and Subdivisions, but lest (which Scaliger objects to Cardan, Exercitat. 501,) <sup>2</sup> I confound filthy burning lust with pure and divine Love, I will follow that accurate Division of Leon Hebræus, dial. 2, betwixt Sophia and Philo, where he speaks of Natural, Sensible, and Rational Love, and handleth each apart. Natural Love or Hatred is that Sympathy or Antipathy which is to be seen in animate and inanimate creatures, in the four Elements, Metals, Stones, gravia tendunt deorsum, as a Stone to his Centre, Fire upward, and rivers to the Sea. The Sun, Moon, and Stars go still round, <sup>3</sup> amantes naturæ debita exercere, for love of perfection. This Love is manifest, I say, in inanimate creatures. How comes a load-stone to draw iron to it? jet chaff? the ground to covet showers, but for Love? No creature, S. Hierom concludes, is to be found, quod non aliquid amat,<sup>4</sup> no stock, no stone, that hath not some feeling of love. 'Tis more eminent in

Plants, Herbs, and is especially observed in vegetals; as betwixt the Vine and Elm a great Sympathy, betwixt the Vine and the Cabbage, betwixt the Vine and Olive, <sup>1</sup>Virgo fugit Bromium, betwixt the Vine and Bays a great antipathy, the Vine loves not the Bay <sup>2</sup>nor his smell, and will kill him, if he grow near him; the Burr and the Lintle cannot endure one another, the Olive <sup>3</sup> and the Myrtle embrace each other, in roots and branches, if they grow near. Read more of this in Piccolomineus, grad. 7. cap. 1, Crescentius, lib. 5. de agric. Baptista Porta, de mag. lib. 1. cap. de plant. odio et Element. sym. Fracastorius de sym. et antip. Of the Love and Hatred of Planets consult with every Astrologer: Leon Hebræus gives many fabulous reasons, and moralizeth them withal.

Sensible Love is that of brute beasts, of which the same Leon Hebræus, dial. 2, assigns these causes. First for the pleasure they take in the Act of Generation, male and female love one another. Secondly for the preservation of the species, and desire of young brood. Thirdly for the mutual agreement, as being of the same kind: Sus Sui, Canis Cani, Bos Bovi, et Asinus Asino pulcherrimus videtur,<sup>4</sup> as Epicharmus held, and according to that Adage of Diogenianus,

Adsidet usque graculus apud graculum,<sup>5</sup>

they much delight in one another's company,

and birds of a feather will gather together. Fourthly for custom, use, and familiarity, as if a dog be trained up with a Lion and a Bear, contrary to their natures, they will love each other. Hawks, dogs, horses, love their masters and keepers: many stories I could relate in this kind, but see Gillius, de hist. anim. lib. 3. cap. 14, those two Epistles of Lipsius, of dogs and horses, A. Gellius, &c. Fifthly, for bringing up, as if a bitch bring up a kid, a hen ducklings, an hedge-sparrow a cuckoo, &c.

The third kind is amor cognitionis, as Leo calls it, Rational Love, intellectivus amor, and is proper to men, on which I must insist. This appears in God, Angels, Men. God is love itself, Ipse sibi mundum subjicit atque Deum.

<sup>3</sup> By this Love (saith Gerson) we purchase Heaven, and buy the Kingdom of God. This <sup>4</sup> Love is either in the Trinity itself, for the Holy Ghost is the Love of the Father and the Son, &c. Joh. 3. 35, and 5. 20, and 14. 31, or towards us his creatures, as in making the world. Amor mundum fecit, Love built Cities, mundi anima, invented Arts, Sciences, and all <sup>6</sup> good things, incites us to virtue and humanity, combines and quickens ; keeps peace on earth, quietness by sea, mirth in the winds and elements, expels all fear, anger, and rusticity : circulus à bono in bonum, [is] a round circle still from good to good ; for Love is the beginner and end of all our actions, the efficient and instrumental cause, as our Poets in their Symbols, Impresses, <sup>6</sup> Emblems of rings, squares, &c. shadow unto us.

Not that we are fair, nor for any merit or grace of ours, for we are most vile and base ; but out of his incomparable love and goodness, out of his divine Nature. Love proper to mortal men is the third Member of this subdivision, and the subject of my following discourse.

MEMB. II.

SUBSECT. I.—Love of Men, which varies as his objects, profitable, pleasant, honest.

Valesius, lib. 3. contr. 13, defines this love which is in men, to be <sup>5</sup> an affection of both powers, Appetite, and Reason. The rational resides in the Brain, the other in the Liver (as before hath been said out of Plato and others) the heart is diversely affected of both, and carried a thousand ways by consent. The sensitive faculty most part over-rules reason, the Soul is carried hood-winkt, and the understanding captive like a beast. <sup>6</sup> The heart is variously inclined, sometimes they are merry, sometimes sad, and from Love arise Hope and Fear, Jealousy, Fury, Desperation. Now this Love of men is diverse, and varies, as the object varies, by which they are enticed, as virtue, wisdom, eloquence, profit, wealth, money, fame, honour, or comeliness of person, &c. Leon Hebræus, in his first Dialogue, educeth them all to these three, Utile, Jucundum, Honestum, Profitable, Pleasant, Honest; (out of Aristotle, belike, 8. moral.) of which he discourseth at large, and whatsoever is beautiful and fair, is referred to them, or any way to be desired. <sup>1</sup> To profitable, is ascribed health, wealth, honour, &c. which is rather Ambition, Desire, Covetousness, than Love. Friends, Children, Love of women, <sup>2</sup> all delightful and pleasant objects, are referred to the second. The love of honest things consists in virtue and wisdom, and is preferred before that which is profitable and pleasant: Intellectual about that which is honest. <sup>3</sup> St. Austin calls profitable, worldly; pleasant, carnal; honest, spiritual. <sup>4</sup> Of and from all three result Charity, Friendship, and true Love, which respects God and our neighbour. Of each of these I will briefly dilate, and shew in what sort they cause melancholy.

Amongst all these fair enticing objects, which procure Love, and bewitch the Soul of man, there is none so moving, so forcible, as profit; and that which carrieth with it a shew of commodity. Health indeed is a precious thing, to recover and preserve which we will undergo any misery, drink bitter potions, freely give our goods: restore a man to his health, his purse lies open to thee, bountiful he is, thankful and beholding to thee; but give him wealth and honour, give him gold, or what shall be for his advantage and preferment, and thou shalt command his affections, oblige him eternally to thee, heart, hand, life and all, is at thy service, thou art his dear and loving friend, good and gracious Lord and Master, his Mæcenas; he is thy slave, thy vassal, most devote, affectioned, and bound in all duty: tell him good tidings in this kind, there spoke an Angel, a blessed hour that brings in gain, he is thy creature, and thou his creator, he hugs and admires thee; he is thine for ever. No Loadstone so attractive as that of profit, none so fair an object as this of gold: <sup>5</sup> nothing wins a man sooner than a good turn; bounty and liberality command body and soul.

Austin, and we had rather see it than the Sun. Sweet and pleasant in getting, in keeping; it seasons all our labours, intolerable pains we take for it, base employments, endure bitter flouts and taunts, long journeys, heavy burdens, all are made light and easy by this hope of gain; At mihi plaudo ipse domi, simul ac nummos contemplor in arca.<sup>1</sup> The sight of gold refresheth our spirits, and ravisheth our hearts, as that Babylonian garment and <sup>2</sup>golden wedge did Achan in the camp, the very sight and hearing sets on fire his soul with desire of it. It will make a man run to the Antipodes, or tarry at home and turn parasite, lie, flatter, prostitute himself, swear and bear false witness; he will venture his body, kill a king, murder his father, and damn his soul to come at it. Formosior auri massa, as <sup>3</sup>he well observed, the mass of gold is fairer than all your Grecian pictures, that Apelles, Phidias, or any doting painter could ever make: we are enamoured with it.

Diva potens rerum, domitrixque pecunia fati.

This is the great Goddess we adore and worship, this is the sole object of our desire. If we have it, as we think, we are made for ever, thrice happy, Princes, Lords, &c. If we lose it, we are dull, heavy, dejected, discontent, miserable, desperate, and mad. Our estate and bonè esse<sup>6</sup> ebbs and flows with our commodity; and, as we are endowed or enriched, so are we beloved and esteemed: it lasts no longer than our wealth; when that is gone, and the object removed, farewell friendship: as long as bounty, good cheer, and rewards were to be hoped, friends enough; they were tied to thee by the teeth, and would follow thee as Crows do a Carcass: but when thy goods are gone and spent, the lamp of their Love is out, and thou shalt be contemned, scorned, hated, injured. <sup>7</sup>Lucian's Timon, when he lived in prosperity, was the sole spectacle of Greece, only admired; who but Timon? Everybody loved, honoured, applauded him, each man offered him his service, and sought to be kin to him; but when his gold was spent, his fair possessions gone, farewell Timon: none so ugly, none so deformed, so odious an object as Timon, no man so ridiculous on a sudden, they gave him a penny to buy a rope; no man would know him.

'Tis the general humour of the world, commodity steers our affections throughout, we love those that are fortunate and rich, that thrive, or by whom we may receive mutual kindness, hope for like courtesies, get any good, gain, or profit; hate those, and abhor, on the other side, which are poor and miserable, or by whom we may sustain loss or inconvenience. And even those that were now familiar and dear unto us, our loving and long friends, neighbours, kinsmen, allies, with whom we have conversed and lived as so many Geryons<sup>1</sup> for some years past, striving still to give one another all good content and entertainment, with mutual invitations, feastings, disports, offices, for whom we would ride, run, spend ourselves, and of whom we have so freely and honourably spoken, to whom we have given all those turgent titles, and magnificent eulogiums, most excellent and most noble, worthy, wise, grave, learned, valiant, &c. and magnified beyond measure: if any controversy arise betwixt us, some trespass, injury, abuse, some part of our goods be detained, a piece of Land come to be litigious, if they cross us in our suit, or touch the string of our commodity, we detest and depress them upon a sudden: neither affinity, consanguinity, or old acquaintance, can contain us, but <sup>2</sup>rupto jecore exierit caprificus. A golden apple sets all together by the ears, as if a marrow-bone, or honey-comb, were flung amongst Bears: Father and Son, Brother and Sister, kinsmen are at odds: and look what malice, deadly hatred can invent, that shall be done, Terribile, dirum, pestilens, atrox, ferum,<sup>3</sup> mutual injuries, desire of revenge, and how to hurt them, him and his, are all our studies. If our pleasures be interrupt, we can tolerate it: our bodies hurt, we can put it up and be reconciled: but touch our commodities, we are most impatient: fair becomes foul, the Graces are turned to Harpies, friendly salutations to bitter imprecations, mutual feastings to plotting villainies, minings and counterminings; good words to Satires and invectives, we

The Scene is altered on a sudden, Love is turned to hate, mirth to melancholy: so furiously are we most part bent, our affections fixed, upon this object of commodity, and upon money, the desire of which in excess is covetousness. Ambition tyrannizeth over our souls, as <sup>2</sup>I have shewed, and in defect crucifies as much, as if a man by negligence, ill husbandry, improvidence, prodigality, waste and consume his goods and fortunes, beggary follows, and melancholy, he becomes an abject, <sup>3</sup>odious and worse than an Infidel, in not providing for his family.

SUBJECT. 2.—Pleasant Objects of Love.

PLEASANT Objects are infinite, whether they be such as have life, or be without life. Inanimate are Countries, Provinces, Towers, Towns, Cities, as he said, <sup>4</sup>Pulcherrimam insulam videmus, etiam cum non videmus, we see a fair Island by description, when we see it not. The <sup>5</sup>Sun never saw a fairer City, Thessala Tempe,<sup>6</sup> Orchards, Gardens, pleasant walks, Groves, Fountains, &c. The heaven itself is said to be <sup>7</sup>fair or foul: fair buildings,<sup>8</sup> fair pictures, all artificial, elaborate and curious works, clothes, give an admirable lustre: we admire, and gaze upon them, ut pueri Junonis avem,<sup>9</sup> as children do on a Peacock: a fair Dog, a fair Horse and Hawk, &c. <sup>10</sup>Thessalus amat equum pullinum, buculum Aegyptius, Lacedæmonius catulum,<sup>11</sup> &c. such things we love, are most gracious in our sight, acceptable unto us, and whatsoever else may cause this passion, if it be superfluous or immoderately loved, as Guianerius observes. These things in themselves are pleasing and good, singular ornaments, necessary, comely, and fit to be had ; but when we fix an immoderate eye, and dote on them over much, this pleasure may turn to pain, bring much sorrow, and discontent unto us, work our final overthrow, and cause melancholy in the end. Many are carried away with those bewitching sports of gaming, hawking, hunting, and such vain pleasures, as <sup>1</sup> I have said : some with immoderate desire of fame, to be crowned in the Olympicks, knighted in the field, &c. and by these means ruinate themselves. The lascivious dotes on his fair mistress, the glutton on his dishes, which are infinitely varied to please the palate, the epicure on his several pleasures, the superstitious on his idol, and fats himself with future joys, as Turks feed themselves with an imaginary persuasion of a sensual Paradise : so several pleasant objects diversely affect divers men. But the fairest objects and enticings proceed from men themselves, which most frequently captivate, allure, and make them dote beyond all measure upon one another, and that for many respects. First, as some suppose, by that secret force of stars, (quod me tibi temperat astrum?<sup>2</sup>) They do singularly dote on such a man, hate such again, and can give no reason for it. <sup>3</sup>Non amo te, Sabidi, &c. Alexander admired Hephæstio, Adrian Antinous, Nero Sporus, &c. The physicians refer this to their temperament, Astrologers to trine and sextile Aspects, or opposite of their several Ascendants, Lords of their genitures, love and hatred of Planets ; <sup>4</sup>Cicogna, to concord and discord of Spirits ; but most to outward Graces. A merry companion is welcome and acceptable to all men, and therefore, saith <sup>5</sup>Gomesius, Princes and great men entertain Jesters and Players commonly in their Courts. But <sup>6</sup>Pares cum paribus facillime congregantur,<sup>7</sup> 'tis that <sup>8</sup>similitude of manners which ties most men in an inseparable link, as if they be addicted to the same studies or disports, they delight in one another's companies, birds of a feather will gather together : if they be of diverse inclinations, or opposite in manners, they can seldom agree. Secondly, <sup>9</sup>affability, custom, and familiarity, may convert nature many times, though they be different in manners, as if they be Country-men, fellow students, colleagues, or have been fellow-soldiers, <sup>1</sup>brethren in affliction, (<sup>2</sup>acerba calamitatum societas diversi etiam ingenii homines conjungit) affinity, or some such accidental occasion, though they cannot agree amongst themselves, they will stick together like burrs, and hold against a third: so after some discontinuance, or death, enmity ceaseth; or in a foreign place.

Et cecidere odia, et tristes mors obruit iras.

A third cause of Love and hate may be mutual offices, acceptum beneficium, <sup>4</sup>commend him, use him kindly, take his part in a quarrel, relieve him in his misery, thou winnest him for ever; do the opposite, and be sure of a perpetual enemy. Praise and dispraise of each other do as much, though unknown, as <sup>5</sup>Scioppius by Scaliger and Casaubonus: mulus mulum scabit; <sup>6</sup>who but Scaliger with him? what Encomiums, Epithets, Elogiums! Antistes sapientiæ, perpetuus Dictator, literarum ornamentum, Europæ miraculum, noble Scaliger, <sup>7</sup>incredibilis ingenii præstantia, &c. diis potius quam hominibus per omnia comparandus, scripta ejus aurea ancilia de cælo delapsa, poplitibus veneramur flexis, <sup>8</sup>&c. but when they began to vary, none so absurd as Scaliger, so vile and base, as his books de Burdonum familiâ, and other Satirical invectives, may witness. Ovid in [his] Ibis, Archilocus himself, <sup>9</sup>was not so bitter. Another great tie or cause of Love is consanguinity; parents are dear to their children, children to their parents, brothers and sisters, cousins of all sorts, as an hen and chickens, all of a knot: every crow thinks her own bird fairest. Many memorable examples are in this kind, and 'tis portenti simile, <sup>10</sup>if they do not: <sup>11</sup>a mother cannot forget her child; Solomon so found out the true owner: <sup>12</sup>love of parents may not be concealed, 'tis natural, descends, and they that are inhuman in this kind, are unworthy of that air they breathe, and of the four elements; yet many unnatural examples we have in this rank, of hard-hearted parents, disobedient children, of <sup>1</sup>disagreeing brothers, nothing so common. The love of kinsmen is grown cold, <sup>2</sup>many kinsmen, (as the saying is) few friends; if thine estate be good, and thou able par pari referre,<sup>3</sup> to requite their kindness, there will be mutual correspondence, otherwise thou art a burden, most odious to them above all others. The last object that ties man and man, is comeliness of person, and beauty alone, as men love women with a wanton eye: which κατ' ἐξοχήν<sup>4</sup> is termed Heroical, or Love-melancholy. Other Loves (saith Piccolomineus) are so called with some contraction, as the Love of wine, gold, &c. but this of women is predominant in an higher strain, whose part affected is the liver, and this Love deserves a longer explication, and shall be dilated apart in the next Section.

SUBSECT. 3.—Honest objects of Love.

BEAUTY is the common object of all Love, <sup>5</sup>as jet draws a straw, so doth beauty love: virtue and honesty are great motives, and give as fair a lustre as the rest, especially if they be sincere and right, not fucate, but proceeding from true form, and an incorrupt judgement; those two Venus twins, Eros and Anteros, are then most firm and fast. For many times otherwise men are deceived by their flattering Gnathos,<sup>6</sup> dissembling Chamæleons, out-sides, hypocrites, that make a shew of great love, learning, pretend honesty, virtue, zeal, modesty, with affected looks and counterfeit gestures: feigned protestations often steal away the hearts and favours of men, and deceive them, specie virtutis et umbra,<sup>7</sup> when as revera and indeed there is no worth or honesty at all in them, no truth, but mere hypocrisy, subtilty, knavery, and the like. As true friends they are, as he that Cælius Secundus met by the highway side; and hard it is in this temporising age to distinguish such companions, or to find them out. Such Gnathos as these for the most part belong to great men, and by this glozing flattery, affability, and such like philters, so dive and insinuate into their favours, that they are taken for men of excellent worth, wisdom, learning, demi-Gods, and so screw themselves into dignities, honours, offices: but these men cause harsh confusion often, and as many stirs as Rehoboam's Counsellors in a common-wealth, overthrow themselves and others. Tandlerus, and some authors, make a doubt whether Love and Hatred may be compelled by philters or characters; Cardan, and Marbodius, by precious stones and amulets; Astrologers by election of times, &c. as <sup>1</sup>I shall elsewhere discuss. The true objects of this honest Love is virtue, wisdom, honesty, <sup>2</sup>real worth, interna forma, and this Love cannot deceive or be compelled, ut amcris amabilis esto,<sup>3</sup> Love itself is the most potent philtrum, virtue and wisdom, gratia gratum faciens, the sole and only grace, not counterfeit, but open, honest, simple, naked, <sup>4</sup>descending from heaven, as our Apostle hath it, an infused habit from God, which hath given several gifts, as wit, learning, tongues, for which they shall be amiable and gracious, Eph. 4. 11, as to Saul stature and a goodly presence, 1 Sam. 9. 2. Joseph found favour in Pharaoh's court, Gen. 39. for <sup>5</sup>his person; and Daniel with the Princes of the Eunuchs, Dan. i. 9. Christ was gracious with God and men, Luke 2. 52. There is still some peculiar grace, as of good discourse, eloquence, wit, honesty, which is the primum mobile, first mover and a most forcible load-stone to draw the favours and good wills of men's eyes, ears, and affections, unto them. When Jesus spake, they were all astonished at his answers, (Luke 2. 47,) and wondered at his gracious words which proceeded from his mouth. An Orator steals away the hearts of men, and as another Orpheus, quo vult, unde vult, he pulls them to him by speech alone: a sweet voice causeth admiration; and he that can utter himself in good words, in our ordinary phrase, is called a proper man, a divine spirit. For which cause belike, our old Poets, senatus populusque poetarum, made Mercury the Gentleman-usher to the Graces, Captain of eloquence, and those Charites to be Jupiter and Eurymone's daughters,<sup>6</sup> descended from above. Though they be otherwise deformed, crooked, ugly to behold, those good parts of the mind denominate them fair. Plato commends the beauty of Socrates; yet who was more grim of countenance, stern and ghastly to look upon? So are and have been many great Philosophers, as <sup>1</sup>Gregory Nazianzen observes, deformed most part in that which is to be seen with the eyes, but most elegant in that which is not to be seen. Sæpe sub attritâ latitat sapientia veste. Æsop, Democritus, Aristotle, Politianus, Melancthon, Gesner, &c. withered old men, Sileni Alcibiadis,<sup>2</sup> very harsh and impolite to the eye; but who were so terse, polite, eloquent, generally learned, temperate and modest? No man then living was so fair as Alcibiades, so lovely quoad superficiem, to the eye, as <sup>3</sup>Boethius observes, but he had corpus turpissimum interne, a most deformed soul. Honesty, virtue, fair conditions, are great enticers to such as are well given, and much avail to get the favour and good will of men. Abdolonimus in Curtius [iv. i. 19.] a poor man (but, which mine Author notes, the cause of this poverty was his honesty) for his modesty and continency from a private person (for they found him digging in his garden) was saluted King, and preferred before all the Magnificoes of his time, injecta ei vestis purpurâ auroque distincta, a purple embroidered garment was put upon him,<sup>4</sup> and they bade him wash himself, and, as he was worthy, take upon him the style and spirit of a King, continue his continency and the rest of his good parts. Titus Pomponius Atticus, that noble Citizen of Rome, was so fair conditioned, of so sweet a carriage, that he was generally beloved of all good men, of Cæsar, Pompey, Antony, Tully, of divers sects, &c. multas hæreditates (<sup>5</sup>Cornelius Nepos writes) *soldâ bonitate consecutus. <sup>1</sup> excellent virtues: their memory is yet fresh, sweet, and we love them many ages after, though they be dead: suavem memoriam sui reliquit, saith Lipsius of his friend, living and dead they are all one. <sup>2</sup> I have ever loved as thou knowest (so Tully wrote to Dolabella) Marcus Brutus for his great wit, singular honesty, constancy, sweet conditions; and believe it, <sup>3</sup> there is nothing so amiable and fair as virtue. I <sup>4</sup> do mightily love Calvisinus (so Pliny writes to Sossius) a most industrious, eloquent, upright man, which is all in all with me: the affection came from his good parts. And, as S. Austin comments on the 84th Psalm, <sup>5</sup> there is a peculiar beauty of justice, and inward beauty, which we see with the eyes of our hearts, love, and are enamoured with, as in Martyrs, though their bodies be torn in pieces with wild beasts, yet this beauty shines, and we love their virtues. The <sup>6</sup> Stoicks are of opinion that a wise man is only fair; and Cato, in Tully 3. de Finibus [22. 75], contends the same, that the lineaments of the mind are far fairer than those of the body, incomparably beyond them: wisdom and valour, according to <sup>7</sup> Xenophon, especially deserve the name of beauty, and denominate one fair, et incomparabiliter pulchrior est (as Austin holds) veritas Christianorum quam Helena Græcorum.<sup>8</sup> Wine is strong, the King is strong, women are strong, but truth overcometh all things, 1 Esd. 3. 10, 11, 12. Blessed is the man that findeth wisdom, and getteth understanding; for the merchandise thereof is better than silver, and the gain thereof better than gold; it is more precious than pearls, and all the things thou canst desire are not to be compared to her. Prov. 3. 13, 14, 15. those admirable rays that come from it, those enchanting rays that enamour posterity, those everlasting rays that continue to the world's end. Many, saith Favorinus, that loved and admired Alcibiades in his youth, knew not, cared not, for Alcibiades a man, nunc [non?] intuentes quærebant Alcibiadem: but the beauty of Socrates is still the same; <sup>1</sup>virtue's lustre never fades, is ever fresh and green, semper viva, to all succeeding ages, and a most attractive loadstone, to draw and combine such as are present. For that reason, belike, Homer feigns the three Graces to be linked and tied hand in hand, because the hearts of men are so firmly united with such graces. <sup>2</sup>O sweet bands (Seneca exclaims) which so happily combine, that those which are bound by them love their binders, desiring withal much more harder to be bound, and, as so many Geryons, <sup>3</sup>to be united into one. wax, in brass, in ivory, in marble, gold and silver, (as Pliny reports of a Citizen in Rome) and, in a great Auditory not long since, recited a just volume of his life. In another place, 'speaking of an Epigram which Martial had composed in praise of him, <sup>2</sup>he gave me as much as he might, and would have done more if he could; though what can a man give more than honour, glory, and eternity? But that which he wrote, peradventure, will not continue; yet he wrote it to continue. 'Tis all the recompence a poor scholar can make his well deserving Patron, Mæcenas, friend, to mention him in his works, to dedicate a book to his name, to write his life, &c. as all our Poets, Orators, Historiographers, have ever done, and the greatest revenge such men take of their adversaries, to persecute them with Satires, Invectives, &c. <sup>3</sup>and 'tis both ways of great moment, as <sup>4</sup>Plato gives us to understand. Paulus Jovius in the Fourth book of the Life and Deeds of Pope Leo Decimus, his noble Patron, concludes in these words; <sup>5</sup>Because I cannot honour him as other rich men do, with like endeavour, affection, and piety, I have undertaken to write his life; since my fortunes will not give me leave to make a more sumptuous monument, I will perform those rites to his sacred ashes, which a small, perhaps, but a liberal wit can afford. But I rove. Where this true love is wanting, there can be no firm peace, friendship from teeth outward, counterfeit, or from some by-respects, so long disssembled, till they have satisfied their own ends, which upon every small occasion breaks out into enmity, open war, defiance, heart-burnings, whispering, calumnies, contentions, and all manner of bitter melancholy discontents. And those men which have no other object of their Love than greatness, wealth, authority, &c. are rather feared than beloved; nec amant quemquam, nec amantur ab ullo.<sup>6</sup> and howsoever borne with for a time, yet for their tyranny and oppression, griping, covetousness, currish hardness, folly, intemperance, imprudence, and such

Or put case they escape, and rest unmasked to their lives' end, yet, after their death, their memory stinks as a snuff of a candle put out, and those that durst not so much as mutter against them in their lives, will prosecute their name with Satires, Libels, and bitter imprecations, they shall malè audire<sup>6</sup> in all succeeding ages, and be odious to the world's end.

MEMB. III.

Charity composed of all three kinds, Pleasant, Profitable, Honest.

BESIDES this Love that comes from Profit, pleasant, honest, (for one good turn asks another in equity) that which proceeds from the law of nature, or from discipline and Philosophy, there is yet another Love compounded of all these three, which is Charity, and includes

Fifty thousand Englishmen lost their lives willingly near Battle Abbey in defence of their Country. <sup>2</sup>P. Æmilius, l. 6, speaks of six Senators of Calais, that came with halters in their hands to the King of England, to die for the rest. This love makes so many writers take such pains, so many Historiographers, Physicians, &c. or at least as they pretend, for common safety, and their country's benefit. <sup>3</sup>Sanctum nomen amicitiae, sociorum communio sacra; friendship is an holy name, and a sacred communion of friends. 'As the Sun is in the Firmament, so is friendship in the world, a most divine and heavenly band. As nuptial Love makes, this perfects mankind, and is to be preferred (if you will stand to the judgement of <sup>4</sup>Cornelius Nepos, [cap. 5]) before affinity or consanguinity; plus in amicitia valet similitudo morum quam affinitas, &c. the cords of Love bind faster than any other wreath whatsoever. Take this away, and take all pleasure, joy, comfort, happiness, and true content, out of the world; 'tis the greatest tie, the surest indenture, strongest band, and, as our modern Maro<sup>6</sup> decides it, is much to be preferred before the rest.

When all three kinds of Love together meet;
And do dispart the heart with power extreme,
Whether shall weigh the balance down; to wit,
The dear affection unto kindred sweet,
Or raging fire of Love to women kind,
Or zeal of friends, combin'd by virtues meet;
But of them all, the band of virtuous mind,
Methinks the gentle heart should most assurèd bind.

For natural affection soon doth cease,
And quenched is with Cupid's greater flame;
But faithful friendship doth them both suppress,
And them with mastering discipline doth tame,
Through thoughts aspiring to eternal fame.
For as the soul doth rule the earthly mass,
And all the service of the body frame,
So Love of soul doth Love of body pass,
No less than perfect gold surmounts the meanest brass.

<sup>1</sup> A faithful friend is better than <sup>2</sup> gold, a medicine or misery, <sup>3</sup> an only possession ; yet this Love of friends, nuptial, heroical, profitable, pleasant, honest, all three Loves put together, are little worth, if they proceed not from a true Christian illuminated soul, if it be not done in ordine ad Deum, for God's sake. Though I had the gift of Prophecy, spake with tongues of men and Angels, though I feed the poor with all my goods, give my body to be burned, and have not this love, it profiteth me nothing, 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2, 3. 'tis splendidum peccatum without charity. This is an all-apprehending love, a deifying love, a refined, pure, divine love, the quintessence of all love, the true Philosopher's stone, non potest enim, as <sup>4</sup> Austin infers, veraciter amicus esse hominis, nisi fuerit ipsius primitus veritatis, he is no true friend that loves not God's truth. And therefore this is true Love indeed, the cause of all good to mortal men, that reconciles all creatures, and glues them together in perpetual amity and firm league, and can no more abide bitterness, hate, malice, than fair and foul weather, light and darkness, sterility and plenty, may be together. As the Sun in the Firmament, (I say) so is Love in the world ; and for this cause 'tis Love without an addition, Love κατ' ἐξοχήν, Love of God, and Love of men. <sup>5</sup> The Love of God begets the Love of man ; and by this Love of our neighbour the Love of God is nourished and increased. By this happy union of Love <sup>6</sup> all well governed families and Cities are combined, the heavens annexed, and divine souls complicated, the world itself composed, and all that is in it conjoined in God, and reduced to one. <sup>7</sup> This Love causeth true and absolute virtues, the life, spirit and root of every virtuous action, it finisheth prosperity, easeth adversity, corrects all natural incumbrances, inconveniences, sustained by Faith and Hope, which with this our Love make an indissoluble twist, a Gordian knot, an Æquilateral Triangle, and yet the greatest of them is Love, 1 Cor. 13. 13, <sup>8</sup> which inflames our souls with a divine heat, and being so inflamed, purgeth, and so purged, elevates to God, makes an atonement, and reconciles us unto him.

That other Love infects the soul of man, this cleanseth; that depresses, this rears; that causeth cares and troubles, this quietness of mind; this informs, that deforms, our life; that leads to repentance, this to heaven. For if once we be truly link'd and touched with this charity, we shall love God above all, our neighbour as ourself, as we are enjoined, Mark. 12. 29-31; Matt. 19. 19; perform those duties and exercises, even all the operations of a good Christian.

This Love suffereth long, it is bountiful, envieth not, boasteth not itself, is not puffed up, it deceiveth not, it seeketh not his own things, is not provoked to anger, it thinketh not evil, it rejoiceth not in iniquity, but in truth. It suffereth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, 1 Cor. 13. 4, 5, 6, 7, it covereth all trespasses, Prov. 10. 12. a multitude of sins, 1 Pet. 4. as our Saviour told the woman in the Gospel, that washed his feet, many sins were forgiven her, for she loved much, Luke 7. 47. it will defend the fatherless and the widow, Isa. 1. 17. will seek no revenge, or be mindful of wrong, Levit. 19. 18. will bring home his brother's ox if he go astray, as 'tis commanded, Deut. 22. 1. will resist evil, give to him that asketh, and not turn from him that borroweth, bless them that curse him, love his enemy, Matthew, 5. bear his brother's burden, Galathians, 6. 2. He that so loves will be hospitable, and distribute to the necessities of the Saints; he will, if it be possible, have peace with all men, feed his enemy, if he be hungry, if he be athirst, give him drink, he will perform those seven works of mercy, he will make himself equal to them of the lower sort, rejoice with them that rejoice, weep with them that weep, Rom. 12. he will speak truth to his neighbour, be courteous and tender-hearted, forgiving others for Christ's sake, as God forgave him, Eph. 4. 32. he will be like minded, Phil. 2. 2; of one judgement; be humble, meek, long-suffering, Colos. 3, forbear, forget and forgive, vv. 12, 13, 23, and what he doth, shall be heartily done to God, and not to men; be pitiful and courteous, 1 Pet. 3. [8, 11,] seek peace and follow it. He will love his brother, not in word and tongue, but in deed and truth, [1] Joh. 3. 18, and he that loves God, Christ will love him that is begotten of him, [1] Joh. 5. 1. &c. Thus should we willingly do, if we had a true touch of this charity, of this divine Love, if we would perform this which we are enjoined, forget and forgive, and compose ourselves to those Christian Laws of Love.

Si vestros animos amor
Quo cœlum regitur regat !

Angelical souls, how blessed, how happy should we be, so loving, how might we triumph over the devil, and have another heaven upon earth !

But this we cannot do ; and which is the cause of all our woes, miseries, discontent, melancholy, <sup>2</sup>want of this charity. We do invicem angariare,<sup>3</sup> insult, contemn, vex, torture, molest, and hold one another's noses to the grind-stone hard, provoke, rail, scoff, calumniate, challenge, hate, abuse (hard-hearted, implacable, malicious, peevish, inexorable as we are) to satisfy our lust or private spleen, for <sup>4</sup>toys, trifles, and impertinent occasions, spend ourselves, goods, friends, fortunes, to be revenged on our adversary, to ruin him and his. 'Tis all our study, practice, and business, how to plot mischief, mine, counter mine, defend and offend, ward ourselves, injure others, hurt all ; as if we were born to do mischief ; and that with such eagerness and bitterness, with such rancour, malice, rage and fury, we prosecute our intended designs, that neither affinity or consanguinity, love or fear of God or men can contain us : no satisfaction, no composition will be accepted, no offices will serve, no submission ; though he shall upon his knees, as Sarpedon did to Glaucus in Homer, acknowledging his error, yield himself with tears in his eyes, beg his pardon, we will not relent, forgive, or forget, till we have confounded him and his, made dice of his bones, as they say, see him rot in prison, banish his friends, followers, et omne invisum genus,<sup>5</sup> rooted him out and all his posterity. Monsters of men as we are, Dogs, Wolves, <sup>6</sup>Tigers, Fiends, incarnate Devils, we do not only contend, oppress, and tyrannize ourselves, but, as so many fire-brands, we set on, and animate others : our whole life is a perpetual combat, a conflict, a set battle, a snarling fit : Eris dea<sup>7</sup> is settled in our tents, <sup>8</sup>Omnia de lite, opposing wit to wit, wealth to wealth, strength to strength, fortunes to fortunes, friends to friends, as at a sea-fight, we turn our broad sides, or two millstones with continual attrition, we fire ourselves, or break one another's backs, and both are ruined and consumed in the end. Miserable wretches, to fat and enrich ourselves, we care not how we get it, quocunque modo rem,<sup>1</sup> how many thousands we undo, whom we oppress, by whose ruin and downfall we arise, whom we injure, fatherless children, widows, common societies, to satisfy our own private lust. Though we have myriads, abundance of wealth and treasure, (pitiless, merciless, remorseless, and uncharitable in the highest degree) and our poor brother in need, sickness, in great extremity, and now ready to be starved for want of food, we had rather, as the Fox told the Ape, his tail should sweep the ground still, than cover his buttocks; rather spend it idly, consume it with dogs, hawks, hounds, unnecessary buildings, in riotous apparel, ingurgitate, or let it be lost, than he should have part of it; <sup>2</sup>rather take from him that little which he hath than relieve him.

Like the dog in the manger, we neither use it ourselves, let others make use of, or enjoy it; part with nothing while we live: for want of disposing our household, and setting things in order, set all the world together by the ears after our death. Poor Lazarus lies howling at his gates for a few crumbs, he only seeks chippings, offals; let him roar and howl, famish, and eat his own flesh, he respects him not. A poor decayed kinsman of his sets upon him by the way in all his jollity, and runs begging bareheaded by him, conjuring by those former bonds of friendship, alliance, consanguinity, &c. uncle, cousin, brother, father,

Put up a supplication to him in the name of a thousand Orphans, an Hospital, a Spittle, a Prison as he goes by, they cry out to him for aid, ride on, surdo narras,<sup>1</sup> he cares not, let them eat stones, devour themselves with vermin, rot in their own dung, he cares not. Shew him a decayed haven, a bridge, a school, a fortification, &c. or some publick work, ride on ; good your Worship, your Honour, for God's sake, your country's sake, ride on. But shew him a roll wherein his name shall be registered in golden letters, and commended to all posterity, his arms set up, with his devices to be seen, and then peradventure he will stay and contribute ; or if thou canst thunder upon him, as Papists do, with satisfactory and meritorious works, or persuade him by this means he shall save his soul out of Hell, and free it from Purgatory (if he be of any religion) then in all likelihood he will listen and stay ; or that he have no children, no near kinsman, heir, he cares for at least, or cannot well tell otherwise how or where to bestow his possessions (for carry them with him he cannot) it may be then he will build some School or Hospital in his life, or be induced to give liberally to pious uses after his death. For, I dare boldly say, vain glory, that opinion of merit, and this enforced necessity, when they know not otherwise how to leave, or what better to do with them, is the main cause of most of our good works. I will not urge this to derogate from any man's charitable devotion, or bounty in this kind, to censure any good work ; no doubt there be many sanctified, heroical, and worthy-minded men, that in true zeal, and for virtue's sake (divine spirits) that out of commiseration and pity extend their liberality, and, as much as in them lies, do good to all men, clothe the naked, feed the hungry, comfort the sick and needy, relieve all, forget and forgive injuries, as true charity requires ; yet most part there is simulatum quid, a deal of hypocrisy in this kind, much default and defect. <sup>2</sup> Cosmo de Medici, that rich citizen of Florence, ingenuously confessed to a near friend of his, that would know of him why he built so many publick and magnificent palaces, and bestowed so liberally on Scholars, not that he loved learning more than others, but to <sup>3</sup> eternize his own name, to be immortal by the benefit of Scholars ; for when his friends were dead, walls decayed, and all Inscriptions gone, books would remain to the world's end. The lanthorn in <sup>1</sup> Athens was built by Xenodes, the Theatre by Pericles, the famous port Piræus by Themicles, Pallas Palladium by Phidias, the Parthenon by Calliocrates; but these brave monuments are decayed all, and ruined long since, their builders' names alone flourish by mediation of writers. And as <sup>2</sup> he said of that Marian oak, now cut down and dead, nullius Agricolaë manu culta stirps tam diuturna, quam quæ poetæ versu seminari potest, no plant can grow so long as that which is ingenio sata, set and manured by those ever-living wits. <sup>3</sup> Allon bacuth that weeping oak, under which Deborah, Rebecca's nurse, died, and was buried, may not survive the memory of such everlasting monuments. Vain glory and emulation (as to most men) was the cause efficient, and to be a trumpeter of his own fame, Cosmo's sole intent so to do good, that all the world might take notice of it. Such for the most part is the charity of our times, such our Benefactors, Mæcenases and Patrons. Nay more, 'tis justly to be feared, which <sup>1</sup>Josephus once said of his Countrymen Jews, if the Romans had not come when they did to sack their City, surely it had been swallowed up with some earthquake, deluge, or fired from Heaven as Sodom and Gomorrah: their desperate malice, wickedness, and peevishness, was such. 'Tis to be suspected, if we continue these wretched ways, we may look for the like heavy visitations to come upon us. ## SECT. II. MEMB. I.

SUBJECT. I.—Heroical love causing Melancholy. His Pedigree, Power, and Extent.

IN the precedent Section mention was made, amongst other pleasant objects, of the comeliness and beauty which proceeds from women, that causeth Heroical, or Love-melancholy, is more eminent above the rest, and properly called Love. The part affected in men is the liver,<sup>3</sup> and therefore called Heroical, because commonly Gallants, Noblemen, and the most generous spirits are possessed with it. His power and extent is very large,<sup>4</sup> and in that twofold division of Love, φιλεῖν and ἐρᾶν,<sup>5</sup> those two Veneres which Plato and some other make mention of, it is most eminent, and κατ' ἐξοχήν [par excellence] called Venus, as I have said, or Love itself. Which, although it be denominated from men, and most evident in them, yet it extends and shews itself in vegetal and sensible creatures, those incorporeal substances (as shall be specified) and hath a large dominion of sovereignty over them. His pedigree is very ancient, derived from the beginning of the world, as Phædrus contends, and his<sup>7</sup> parentage of such antiquity, that no Poet could ever find it out. Hesiod<sup>8</sup> makes Terra and Chaos to be Love's parents, before the Gods were born:

in Plut. of that fiction. [Plut. On Love, § xiii.]

Some think it is the self same fire Prometheus fetched from heaven. Plutarch, amator. libello, [§ xx.] will have Love to be the son of Iris and Favonius, but Socrates in that pleasant Dialogue of Plato,<sup>1</sup> when it came to his turn to speak of Love, (of which subject Agatho, the Rhetorician, magniloquus Agatho, that Chanter Agatho, had newly given occasion) in a poetical strain, telleth this tale. When Venus was born, all the Gods were invited to a banquet, and, amongst the rest, <sup>2</sup>Porus the God of bounty and wealth; Penia or poverty came a begging to the door; Porus well whittled with Nectar (for there was no wine in those days) walking in Jupiter's garden, in a Bower met with Penia, and in his drink got her with child, of whom was born Love; and, because he was begotten on Venus's birth day, Venus still attends upon him. The moral of this is in <sup>3</sup>Ficinus. Another tale is there,<sup>4</sup> borrowed out of Aristophanes. <sup>5</sup>In the beginning of the world, men had four arms, and four feet, but for their pride, because they compared themselves with the Gods, were parted into halves, and now peradventure by love they hope to be united again and made one. Otherwise thus; <sup>6</sup>Vulcan met two lovers, and bid them ask what they would, and they should have it; but they made answer, O Vulcane, faber Deorem, &c. O Vulcan the Gods' great Smith, we beseech thee to work us anew in thy furnace, and of two make us one; which he presently did, and ever since true lovers are either all one, or else desire to be united. Many such tales you shall find in Leon Hebræus, dial. 3, and their moral to them. The reason why Love was still painted young, (as Phornutus<sup>7</sup> and others will) <sup>8</sup>is because young men are most apt to love; soft, fair, and fat, because such folks are soonest taken: naked, because all true affection is simple and open: he smiles, because merry and given to delights: hath a quiver, to shew, his power none can escape: is blind, because he sees not where he strikes, whom he hits, &c. His power and sovereignty is expressed by the <sup>9</sup>poets, in that he is held to be a God, and a great commanding God, above Jupiter himself; Magnus Dæmon, as Plato calls him,<sup>1</sup> the strongest and merriest of all the Gods according to Alcinous and Athenæus. Amor virorum rex, Amor rex et Deûm,<sup>2</sup> as Euripides,<sup>3</sup> the God of Gods and governor of men; for we must do all homage to him, keep an holy day for his Deity, adore in his Temples, worship his image, (numen enim hoc non est nudum nomen) sacrifice to his altar, that conquers all, and rules all:<sup>4</sup>

Cum Anteo et Stympthalicis avibus luctari
Quam cum amore——

I had rather contend with Bulls, Lions, Bears, and Giants, than with Love; he is so powerful, enforceth all to pay tribute to him, domineers over all, and can make mad and sober whom he list; insomuch that Cæcilius, in Tully's Tusculans [iv. 32, 68.] holds him to be no better than a fool, or an idiot, that doth not acknowledge Love to be a great God,

Quem sapere, quem sanari, quem in morbum injici, &c.<sup>8</sup>

That can make sick and cure whom he list. Homer and Stesichorus were both made blind, if you will believe Leon Hebræus, for speaking against his god-head. And though Aristophanes degrade him, and say that he was <sup>10</sup> scornfully rejected from the counsel of the Gods, had his wings clipped besides, that he might come no more amongst them, and to his farther disgrace banished heaven for ever, and confined to dwell on earth, yet he is of that <sup>11</sup> power, majesty, omnipotency, and dominion, that no creature can withstand him.

shower, and what not, for love; that as <sup>1</sup>Lucian's Juno right well objected to him, ludus amoris tu es, thou art Cupid's whirligig: how did he insult over all the other Gods, Mars, Neptune, Pan, Mercury, Bacchus, and the rest! <sup>2</sup>Lucian brings in Jupiter complaining of Cupid that he could not be quiet for him; and the Moon lamenting that she was so impotently besotted on Endymion, even Venus herself confessing as much, how rudely and in what sort her own son Cupid had used her, being his <sup>3</sup>mother, now drawing her to mount Ida for the love of that Trojan Anchises, now to Libanus for that Assyrian youth's sake. And although she threatened to break his bow and arrows, to clip his wings, and whipped him besides on the bare buttocks with her pantophle, [slipper] yet all would not serve, he was too head-strong and unruly. That monster-conquering Hercules was tamed by him:

Quem non mille feræ, quem non Stheneleius hostis,
Nec potuit Juno vincere, vicit amor.<sup>5</sup>

Whom neither beasts nor enemies could tame,
Nor Juno's might subdue, Love quell'd the same.

Your bravest soldiers and most generous spirits are enervated with it, <sup>6</sup>ubi muliebribus blanditiis permittunt se, et inquinantur amplexibus. Apollo, that took upon him to cure all diseases, <sup>7</sup>could not help himself of this; and therefore <sup>8</sup>Socrates calls Love a tyrant, and brings him triumphing in a Chariot, whom Petrarch imitates in his triumph of Love, and Fracastorius in an elegant Poem expresseth at large, Cupid riding, Mars and Apollo following his Chariot, Psyche weeping, &c.

In vegetal creatures what sovereignty Love hath by many pregnant proofs and familiar examples may be proved, especially of palm trees, which are both he and she, and express not a sympathy but a love-passion, as by many observations have been confirmed.

If such fury be in vegetals, what shall we think of sensible creatures ? how much more violent and apparent shall it be in them !

<sup>3</sup> Cupid in Lucian bids Venus his mother be of good cheer, for he was now familiar with Lions, and oftentimes did get on their backs, hold them by the mane, and ride them about like horses, and they would fawn upon him with their tails. Bulls, Bears, and Boars, are so furious in this kind, they kill one another: but especially Cocks, <sup>4</sup> Lions, and Harts, which are so fierce that you may hear them fight half a mile off, saith <sup>5</sup> Turberville, and many times kill each other, or compel them to abandon the rut, that they may remain masters in their places; and when one hath driven his corival away, he raiseth his nose up into the air, and looks aloft, as though he gave thanks to nature, which affords him such great delight. How Birds are affected in this kind, appears out of Aristotle, he will have them to sing ob futuram venerem, for joy or in hope of their venery which is to come.<sup>6</sup> natural for one beast to dote upon another of the same kind ; but what strange fury is that, when a Beast shall dote upon a man ! Saxo Grammaticus, lib. 10. Dan. Hist. hath a story of a Bear that loved a woman, kept her in his den a long time, and begot a son of her, out of whose loins proceeded many Northern Kings : this is the original belike of that common tale of Valentine and Orson. Ælian, Pliny, Peter Gellius are full of such relations. A Peacock in Leucadia loved a maid, and when she died the Peacock pined. <sup>1</sup>A Dolphin loved a boy called Hernias, and when he died, the fish came on land, and so perished. The like adds Gellius, lib. 10, cap. 22, out of Apion, Egypt. lib. 15. a Dolphin at Puteoli loved a child, would come often to him, let him get on his back, and carry him about, <sup>2</sup>and when by sickness the child was taken away, the Dolphin died. <sup>3</sup>Every book is full (saith Busbequius, the Emperor's Orator with the grand Seignior, not long since, ep. 3. legat. Turc.) and yields such instances, to believe which I was always afraid, lest I should be thought to give credit to fables, until I saw a Lynx, which I had from Assyria, so affected towards one of my men, that it cannot be denied but that he was in love with him. When my man was present, the beast would use many notable enticements, and pleasant motions, and when he was going, hold him back, and look after him when he was gone, very sad in his absence, but most jocund when he returned : and when my man went from me, the beast expressed his love with continual sickness, and after he had pined away some few days, died. Such another story he hath of a Crane of Majorca, that loved a Spaniard, that would walk any way with him, and in his absence seek about for him, make a noise that he might hear her, and knock at his door, <sup>4</sup>and when he took his last farewell, famished herself. Such pretty pranks can love play with Birds, Fishes, Beasts :

Air, and Devils of Hell themselves, who are as much enamoured and dote (if I may use that word) as any other creatures whatsoever. For if those stories be true that are written of Incubi and Succubi, of Nymphs, lascivious Fauns, Satyrs, and those Heathen gods which were Devils, those lascivious Telchines,<sup>1</sup> of whom the Platonists tell so many fables ; or those familiar meetings in our days, and company of Witches and Devils, there is some probability for it. I know that Biarmannus, Wierus, lib. 3. cap. 19, et 24, and some others stoutly deny it, that the Devil hath any carnal copulation with women, that the Devil takes no pleasure in such facts, they be mere phantasies, all such relations of Incubi, Succubi, lies and tales : but Austin, lib. 15, de civit. Dei, doth acknowledge it ; Erastus, de Lamiis, Jacobus Sprenger and his colleagues, &c. <sup>2</sup>Zanchius, cap. 16, lib. 4, de oper. Dei ; Dandinus, in Arist. de Animâ, lib. 2, Text. 29, com. 30, Bodine, lib. 2. cap. 7, and Paracelsus, a great champion of this Tenent amongst the rest, which give sundry peculiar instances, by many testimonies, proofs, and confessions, evince it. Hector Boethius, in his Scottish History, hath three or four such examples, which Cardan confirms out of him, lib. 16. cap. 43, of such as have had familiar company many years with them, and that in the habit of men and women. Philostratus, in his Fourth Book de vita Apollonii, hath a memorable instance in this kind, which I may not omit, of one Menippus Lycius a young man 25 years of age, that going betwixt Cenchreæ and Corinth, met such a phantasm in the habit of a fair gentlewoman, which, taking him by the hand, carried him home to her house in the suburbs of Corinth, and told him she was a Phœnician by birth, and if he would tarry with her, <sup>3</sup>he should hear her sing and play, and drink such wine as never any drank, and no man should molest him ; but she being fair and lovely would live and die with him, that was fair and lovely to behold. The young man, a Philosopher, otherwise staid and discreet, able to moderate his passions, though not this of love, tarried with her a while to his great content, and at last married her, to whose wedding, among other guests, came Apollonius, who by some probable conjectures found her out to be a Serpent, a Lamia, and that all her furniture was like Tantalus' gold described by Homer, no substance, but mere illusions.<sup>1</sup> When she saw herself descried, she wept, and desired Apollonius to be silent, but he would not be moved, and thereupon she, plate, house, and all that was in it, vanished in an instant: <sup>2</sup>many thousands took notice of this fact, for it was done in the midst of Greece. Sabine, in his Comment on the 10th. of Ovid's Metamorphoses, at the tale of Orpheus, telleth us of a Gentleman of Bavaria, that for many months together bewailed the loss of his dear wife; at length the Devil in her habit came and comforted him, and told him, because he was so importunate for her, that she would come and live with him again, on that condition he would be new married, never swear and blaspheme as he used formerly to do; for if he did, she should be gone: <sup>3</sup>he vowed it, married, and lived with her, she brought him children, and governed his house, but was still pale and sad, and so continued, till one day falling out with him, he fell a swearing; she vanished thereupon, and was never after seen. This I have heard, saith Sabine, from persons of good credit, which told me that the Duke of Bavaria did tell it for a certainty to the Duke of Saxony. One more I will relate out of Florilegus, ad annum 1058, an honest Historian of our nation, because he telleth it so confidently, as a thing in those days talked of all over Europe. A young Gentleman of Rome, the same day that he was married, after dinner with the Bride and his friends went a walking into the fields, and towards evening to the Tennis Court to recreate himself; whilst he played, he put his ring upon the finger of Venus' statua,<sup>4</sup> which was thereby, made in brass; after he had sufficiently played, and now made an end of his sport, he came to fetch his ring, but Venus had bowed her finger in, and he could not get it off. Whereupon loath to make his company tarry at present, there he left it, intending to fetch it the next day, or at some more convenient time, went thence to supper, and so to bed. In the night, when he should come to perform those nuptial rites, Venus steps between him and his wife, (unseen or felt of her) and told him that she was his wife, that he had betrothed himself unto her by that ring, which he put upon her finger: she troubled him for some following nights. He, not knowing how to help himself, made his moan to one Palumbus, a learned Magician in those days, who gave him a letter, and bid him at such a time of the night, in such a crossway, at the Town's end, where old Saturn would pass by, with his associates in procession, as commonly he did, deliver that script with his own hands to Saturn himself; the young man, of a bold spirit, accordingly did it; and when the old fiend had read it, he called Venus to him, who rode before him, and commanded her to deliver his ring, which forthwith she did, and so the gentleman was freed. Many such stories I find in several 'Authors to confirm this which I have said: as that more notable among the rest, of Philinium and Machates in Phlegon's Tract de rebus mirabilibus, and, though many be against it, yet I for my part will subscribe to Lactantius, lib. 14. cap. 15, 'God sent Angels to the tuition of men; but whilst they lived amongst us, that mischievous all-commander of the Earth, and hot in lust, enticed them by little and little to this vice, and defiled them with the company of women. And Anaxagoras, de resurrect. 'Many of those spiritual bodies overcome by the love of Maids, and lust, failed, of whom those were born we call Giants. Justin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus, Sulpicius Severus, Eusebius, &c. to this sense make a twofold fall of Angels, one from the beginning of the world, another a little before the deluge, as Moses teacheth us, 'openly professing that these Genii can beget, and have carnal copulation with women. At Japan in the East Indies, at this present (if we may believe the relation of 'travellers) there is an Idol called Teuchedy, to whom one of the fairest virgins in the country is monthly brought, and left in a private room, in the Fotoqui, or Church, where she sits alone to be deflowered. At certain times the Teuchedy (which is thought to be the Devil) appears to her, and knoweth her carnally. Every month a fair Virgin is taken in, but what becomes of the old, no man can tell.<sup>7</sup> In that goodly temple of Jupiter Belus in Babylon, there was a fair Chapel, 'saith Herodotus, [i. 181, 182.] an eye-witness of it, in

So that you see this is no news, the Devils themselves, or their juggling Priests, have played such pranks in all ages. Many Divines stiffly contradict this; but I will conclude with <sup>1</sup>Lipsius, that since examples, testimonies, and confessions, of those unhappy women are so manifest on the other side, and many, even in this our Town of Louvain, that it is likely to be so. <sup>2</sup>One thing I will add, that I suppose that in no age past, I know not by what destiny of this unhappy time, there have never appeared or showed themselves so many lecherous Devils, Satyrs, and Genii, as in this of ours, as appears by the daily narrations, and judicial sentences upon record. Read more of this question in *Plutarch, vit. wrought such stupend and prodigious effects, such foul offences. Love indeed (I may not deny) first united provinces, built Cities, and by a perpetual generation makes and preserves mankind, propagates the Church ; but if it rage, it is no more Love, but burning Lust, a Disease, Phrensy, Madness, Hell. <sup>1</sup> Est orcus ille, vis est immedicabilis, est rabies insana ; 'tis no virtuous habit this, but a vehement perturbation of the mind, a monster of nature, wit, and art, as Alexis in <sup>2</sup> Athenæus sets it out, viriliter audax, muliebriter timidum, furore præceps, labore infractum, mel felleum, blanda percussio, &c. It subverts kingdoms, overthrows cities, towns, families ; mars, corrupts, and makes a massacre of men ; thunder and lightning, wars, fires, plagues, have not done that mischief to mankind, as this burning lust, this brutish passion. Notwithstanding they know these and many such miseries, threats, tortures, will surely come upon them ; rewards, exhortations, à contra ;<sup>6</sup> yet either out of their own weakness, a depraved nature, or love's tyranny, which so furiously rageth, they suffer themselves to be led like an ox to the slaughter ; [Prov. vii. 22.] (facilis descensus Averni)<sup>7</sup> they go down headlong to their own perdition, they will commit folly with beasts, men leaving the natural use of women, as <sup>8</sup> Paul saith, burned in lust one towards another, and man with man wrought filthiness.

I come at last to that Heroical Love, which is proper to men and women, is a frequent cause of melancholy, and deserves much rather to be called burning lust, than by such an honorable title. There is an honest love, I confess, which is natural, laqueus occultus captivans corda hominum, ut à mulieribus non possint separari, a secret snare to captivate the hearts of men, as <sup>3</sup>Christopher Fontana proves, a strong allurements, of a most attractive, occult, adamantine property, and powerful virtue, and no man living can avoid it. <sup>4</sup>Et qui vim non sensit amoris, aut lapis est, aut bellua. He is not a man, but a block, a very stone, aut <sup>5</sup>Numen, aut Nebuchadnezzar, <sup>6</sup>he hath a gourd for his head, a pepon<sup>7</sup> for his heart, that hath not felt the power of it, and a rare creature to be found, one in an age, rest, his arrows could not pierce them. But this nuptial love is a common passion, and honest, for men to love in the way of marriage; ut materia appetit formam, sic mulier virum.<sup>1</sup> You know marriage is honourable, a blessed calling, appointed by God himself in Paradise, it breeds true peace, tranquillity, content and happiness, qua nulla est aut fuit unquam sanctior conjunctio,<sup>2</sup> as Daphnæus in <sup>3</sup>Plutarch could well prove, et quæ generi humano immortalitatem parat,<sup>4</sup> when they live without jarring, scolding, lovingly as they should do.

As Seneca lived with his Paulina, Abraham and Sarah, Orpheus and Eurydice, Arria and Pætus, Artemisia and Mausolus, Rubenius Celer, that would needs have it engraven on his tomb, he had led his life with Ennea, his dear wife forty three years eight months, and never fell out. There is no pleasure in this world comparable to it, 'tis summum mortalitatis bonum — <sup>6</sup>hominum divûmque voluptas, Alma Venus — latet enim in muliere aliquid majus potentiusque omnibus aliis humanis voluptatibus, as <sup>7</sup>one holds, there's something in a woman beyond all human delight; a magnetick virtue, a charming quality, an occult and powerful motive. The husband rules her as head, but she again commands his heart, he is her servant, she his only joy and content: no happiness is like unto it, no love so great as this of man and wife, no such comfort, as <sup>8</sup>placens uxor, a sweet wife;

Servantes nomen sumpsimus in thalamo:
Nec ferat ulla dies ut commutemur in ævo,
Quin tibi sim juvenis, tuque puella mihi.

Dear wife, let's live in love and die together,
As hitherto we have in all good will:
Let no day change or alter our affections,
But let's be young to one another still.

Such should conjugal love be, still the same, and as they are one flesh, so should they be of one mind, as in an Aristocratical government, one consent, <sup>3</sup> Geryon-like, coalescere in unum, have one heart in two bodies, will and nill the same. A good wife, according to Plutarch,<sup>4</sup> should be as a looking-glass, to represent her husband's face and passion. If he be pleasant, she should be merry; if he laugh, she should smile; if he look sad, she should participate of his sorrow, and bear a part with him, and so they should continue in mutual love one towards another.

No age shall part my love from thee, sweet wife,
Though I live Nestor or Tithonus' life.

And she again to him, as the <sup>6</sup> Bride saluted the Bridegroom of old in Rome, Ubi tu Caius, ego semper Caia, be thou still Caius, I'll be Caia.

'Tis an happy state this indeed, when the fountain is blessed (saith Solomon, Prov. 5. 10.) and he rejoiceth with the wife of his youth, and she is to him as the loving Hind, and pleasant Roe, and he delights in her continually. [19.] But this love of ours is immoderate, inordinate, and not to be comprehended in any bounds. It will not contain itself within the union of marriage, or apply to one object, but is a wandering, extravagant, a domineering, a boundless, an irrefragable, a destructive passion: sometimes this burning lust rageth after marriage, and then it is properly called Jealousy;

sometimes before, and then it is called Heroical Melancholy; it extends sometimes to corrivals, &c. begets rapes, incests, murders: Marcus Antonius compressit Faustinam sororem, Caracalla Juliam novercam, Nero matrem, Caligula sorores, Cinyras Myrrham filiam, &c.<sup>1</sup> But it is confined within no terms of blood, years, sex, or whatsoever else. Some furiously rage before they come to discretion or age.<sup>2</sup> Quartilla in Petronius never remembered she was a maid: and the wife of Bath in Chaucer cracks,

*Since I was twelve years old, belicve,
Husbands at Kirk-door had I five.*<sup>3</sup>

'Aretine's Lucretia sold her Maiden-head a thousand times before she was twenty-four years old, plus millies vendideram virginitatem, &c. neque te celabo, non deerant qui ut integram ambirent. Rahab that harlot began to be a professed quean at ten years of age, and was but fifteen when she hid the spies, as <sup>5</sup>Hugh Broughton proves, to whom Serrarius the Jesuit, quæst. 6. in cap. 2. Josue, subscribes. Generally women begin pubescere as they call it, or catulire, as Julius Pollux cites, lib. 2. cap. 3. onomast. out of Aristophanes,<sup>6</sup> at fourteen years old, then they do offer themselves, and some plainly rage. <sup>7</sup>Leo Afer saith, that in Africa a man shall scarce find a Maid at fourteen years of age, they are so forward, and many amongst us after they come into the teens, do not live without husbands, but linger. What pranks in this kind the middle age have played, is not to be recorded.

Human, divine laws, precepts, exhortations, fear of God and men, fair, foul means, fame, fortunes, shame, disgrace, honour, cannot oppose, stave off, or withstand the fury of it, omnia vincit amor,<sup>1</sup> &c. No cord, nor cable, can so forcibly draw, or hold so fast, as Love can do with a twin'd thread. The scorching beams under the Æquinocial, or extremity of cold within the circle Arctick, where the very Seas are frozen, cold or torrid zone cannot avoid, or expel this heat, fury and rage of mortal men.

Of women's unnatural, <sup>3</sup> unsatiable lust, what Country, what Village doth not complain? Mother and daughter sometimes dote on the same man, father and son, master and servant on one woman.

Quid castum in terris intentatumque reliquit?

What breach of vows and oaths, fury, dotage, madness, might I reckon up! Yet this is more tolerable in youth, and such as are still in their hot blood; but for an old fool to dote, to see an old lecher, what more odious, what can be more absurd? and yet what so common? Who so furious?

Some dote then more than ever they did in their youth. How many decrepit, hoary, harsh, writhen, bursten-bellied, crooked, toothless, bald, blear-eyed, impotent, rotten, old men shall you see flickering still in every place! One gets him a young wife, another a courtesan, and when he can scarce lift his leg over a sill, and hath one foot already in Charon's boat, when he hath the trembling in his joints, the gout in his feet, a perpetual rheum in his head, a continue cough, <sup>6</sup> his sight fails him; thick of hearing, his breath stinks, all his moisture is dried up and gone, may not spit from him, a very child again, that cannot dress himself, or cut his own meat, yet he will be dreaming of, and honing after wenches, what can be more unseemly? Worse it is in women than in men, when she is ætate declivis, diu vidua, mater olim, parum decorè matrimonium sequi videtur, an old widow, a mother so long since (<sup>1</sup> in Pliny's opinion) she doth very unseemly seek to marry, yet whilst she is <sup>2</sup> so old a crone, a beldam, she can neither see, nor hear, go nor stand, a mere <sup>3</sup> carcass, a witch, and scarce feel; she catterwauls, and must have a stallion, a champion, she must and will marry again, and betroth herself to some young man, <sup>4</sup> that hates to look on her but for her goods, abhors the sight of her, to the prejudice of her good name, her own undoing, grief of friends, and ruin of her children.

But to enlarge or illustrate this power and effects of love is to set a candle in the Sun. <sup>5</sup> It rageth with all sorts and conditions of men, yet is most evident among such as are young and lusty, in the flower of their years, nobly descended, high fed, such as live idly, and at ease; and for that cause (which our Divines call burning lust) this <sup>6</sup> ferinus insanus amor, this mad and beastly passion, as I have said, is named by our Physicians Heroical Love, and a more honourable title put upon it, amor nobilis, as <sup>7</sup> Savonarola styles it, because Noble men and women make a common practice of it, and are so ordinarily affected with it. Avicenna, lib. 3. Fen. 1. tract. 4. cap. 23, calleth this passion Ilishi, and defines it <sup>8</sup> to be a disease or melancholy vexation, or anguish of mind, in which a man continually meditates of the beauty, gesture, manners of his Mistress, and troubles himself about it: desiring (as Savonarola adds) with all intentions and eagerness of mind to compass or enjoy her, as commonly Hunters trouble them- selves about their sports, the covetous about their gold and goods, so is he tormented still about his Mistress. Arnoldus Villanovanus, in his book of Heroical Love, defines it <sup>1</sup> a continual cogitation of that which he desires, with a confidence or hope of compassing it: which definition his Commentator cavils at. For continual cogitation is not the genus, but a symptom of Love; we continually think of that which we hate and abhor as well as that which we love; and many things we covet and desire without all hope of attaining. Carolus à Lorme, in his Questions, makes a doubt, an amor sit morbus, whether this heroical love be a disease: Julius Pollux Onomast. lib. 6. cap. 44. determines it. They that are in love are likewise <sup>2</sup> sick; lascivius, salax, lasciviens, et qui in venerem furit vere est ægrotus. Arnoldus will have it improperly so called, and a malady rather of the body than mind. Tully in his Tusculans [iv. 35. 75.] defines it a furious disease of the mind, Plato madness itself,<sup>3</sup> Ficinus, his Commentator, cap. 12, a species of madness, for many have run mad for women, 1 Esdr. 4. 26. but <sup>4</sup> Rhasis a melancholy passion, and most Physicians make it a species or kind of melancholy (as will appear by the Symptoms) and treat of it apart: whom I mean to imitate, and to discuss it in all his kinds, to examine his several causes, to shew his symptoms, indications, prognosticks, effects, that so it may be with more facility cured.

The part affected in the mean time, as <sup>5</sup> Arnoldus supposeth, is the former part of the head for want of moisture, which his Commentator rejects. Langius, med. epist. lib. 1. cap. 24. will have this passion sited in the liver, and to keep residence in the heart, <sup>6</sup> to proceed first from the eyes, so carried by our spirits, and kindled with imagination in the liver and heart; cogit amare jecur, as the saying is.<sup>7</sup> Medium ferit per hepar,<sup>8</sup> as Cupid in Anacreon. Sect. prob. 27. Arist.* But <sup>3</sup>properly it is a passion of the brain, as all other melancholy, by reason of corrupt imagination, and so doth Jason Pratensis, c. 19. de morb. cerebri (who writes copiously of this Erotical love), place and reckon it amongst the affections of the brain. <sup>4</sup>Melanthon, de animâ, confutes those that make the liver a part affected, and Guianerius, Tract. 15. cap. 13. & 17, though many put all the affections in the heart, refers it to the brain. Ficinus, cap. 7. in Convivium Platonis, will have the blood to be the part affected. Jo. Frietagus, cap. 14. noct. med. supposeth all four affected, heart, liver, brain, blood; but the major part concur upon the brain, <sup>5</sup>'tis imaginatio læsa; and both imagination and reason are misaffected; because of his corrupt judgement, and continual meditation of that which he desires, he may truly be said to be melancholy. If it be violent, or his disease inveterate, as I have determined in the precedent partitions, both imagination and reason are mis-affected, first one, then the other.

By virtue of my constellation.*<sup>2</sup>

But of all those Astrological Aphorisms which I have ever read, that of Cardan is most memorable, for which, howsoever he be bitterly censured by <sup>3</sup>Marinus Marcennus, a malapert Friar, and some others (which <sup>4</sup>he himself suspected) yet methinks it is free, downright, plain and ingenuous. In his <sup>5</sup>eighth Geniture or example, he hath these words of himself. ♂ ♀ & ♄ in ♄ dignitatibus assiduam mihi Venereorum cogitationem præstabunt, ita ut nunquam quiescam. Et paulo post, Cogitatio Venereorum me torquet perpetuò, et quam facto implere non licuit, aut fecisse potentem pudit, cogitatione assiduâ mentitus sum voluptatem. Et alibi, ob ☿ & ♄ dominium et radiorum mixtionem, profundum fuit ingenium, sed lascivum, egoque turpi libidini deditus et obscænus. So far Cardan of himself, quod de se fatetur ideo <sup>6</sup>ut utilitatem adferat studiosis hujusce disciplinæ, and for this he is traduced by Marcennus, when as in effect he saith no more than what Gregory Nazianzen of old to Chilo his scholar, offerebant se mihi visendæ mulieres, quarum præcellenti elegantia et decore spectabili tentabatur meæ integritas pudicitia. Et quidem flagitium vitavi fornicationis, at munditiæ virginalis florem arcanâ cordis cogitatione fœdavi. Sed ad rem. Veneris, de quorum decretis, Taisnerum, Johan. de Indagine, Goclenium, cæterosque si lubet, inspicias. Physicians divine wholly from the temperature and complexion; phlegmatick persons are seldom taken, according to Ficinus, Comment. cap. 9, naturally melancholy less than they, but once taken they are never freed; though many are of opinion flatuous or hypochondriacal melancholy are most subject of all others to this infirmity. Valescus assigns their strong imagination for a cause, Bodine abundance of wind, Gordonius of seed, and spirits, or atomi in the seed, which cause their violent and furious passions. Sanguine thence are soon caught, young folks most apt to love, and by their good wills, saith <sup>1</sup>Lucian, would have a bout with every one they see: the colt's evil <sup>2</sup> is common to all complexions. Theomnestus a young and lusty gallant acknowledgeth (in the said Author) all this to be verified in him, *I am so amorously given, you may sooner number the Sea sands, and Snow falling from the skies, than my several loves. Cupid hath shot all his arrows at me, I am deluded with various desires, one love succeeds another, and that so soon, that before one is ended, I begin with a second; she that is last is still fairest, and she that is present pleaseth me most: as an Hydra's head my loves increase, no Iolaus can help me. Mine eyes are so moist a refuge and sanctuary of love, that they draw all beauties to them, and are never satisfied. I am in a doubt what fury of Venus this should be. Alas, how have I offended her so to vex me, what Hippolytus am I! What Telchin is my Genius? Or is it a natural imperfection, an hereditary passion? Another in <sup>3</sup>Anacreon confesseth that he had twenty sweet-hearts in Athens at once, fifteen at Corinth, as many at Thebes, at Lesbos, and at Rhodes, twice as many in Ionia, thrice in Caria, twenty thousand in all: or in a word, ἐν φύλλα πάντα, &c.*

His eyes are like a balance, apt to propend each way, and to be weighed down with every wench's looks; his heart a weathercock, his affection tinder, or naphtha itself, which every fair object, sweet smile, or mistress' favour sets on fire. Guianerius, tract. 15. cap. 14, refers all this <sup>1</sup>to the hot temperature of the testicles; Ferandus, a Frenchman, in his Erotique Mel. (which <sup>2</sup>book came first to my hands after the Third Edition) to certain atomi in the seed, such as are very spermatick and full of seed. I find the same in Aristot. sect. 4. prob. 17. si non secernatur semen, cessare tentigines non possunt, as Guastavinus, his Commentator, translates it, for which cause these young men that be strong set, of able bodies, are so subject to it. Hercules de Saxonidâ hath the same words in effect. But most part, I say, such are aptest to love that are young and lusty, live at ease, stall-fed, free from cares, like cattle in a rank pasture, idle and solitary persons, they must needs hirquitallire, as Guastavinus recites out of Censorinus.

The mind is apt to lust, and hot or cold,

The place itself makes much wherein we live, the clime, air, and discipline if they concur. In our Mysia, saith Galen, near to Pergamus, thou shalt scarce find an adulterer, but many at Rome, by reason of the delights of the seat. It was that plenty of all things which made <sup>4</sup>Corinth so infamous of old, and the opportunity of the place to entertain those foreign comers; every day strangers came in at each gate from all quarters. In that one Temple of Venus a thousand whores did prostitute themselves, as Strabo writes,<sup>5</sup> beside Lais, and the rest of better note. All nations resorted thither as to a school of Venus. Your hot and Southern countries are prone to lust, and far more incontinent, than those that live in the North, as Bodine discourseth at large, *Method. hist. cap. 5. fruitful, plentiful, and delicious, as Valentia in Spain, Capua in Italy, domicilium luxus, Tully<sup>1</sup> terms it, and (which Hannibal's soldiers can witness<sup>2</sup>) Canopus in Egypt, Sybaris, Phæacia, Baia,<sup>3</sup> Cyprus, Lampsacus. In Naples the fruits of the soil and pleasant air enervate their bodies, and alter constitutions: insomuch, that Florus<sup>4</sup> calls it Certamen Bacchi et Veneris, but Foliet admires it. In Italy and Spain they have their stew<sup>5</sup> in every great City, as in Rome, Venice, Florence, wherein some say dwell ninety thousand inhabitants of which ten thousand are Courtisans; and yet for all this, every Gentleman almost hath a peculiar Mistress; fornications, adulteries are nowhere so common: urbs est jam tota lupanar; how should a man live honest among so many provocations? now if vigour of youth, greatness, liberty I mean, and that impunity of sin which Grandeess take unto themselves in this kind shall meet, what a gap must it needs open to all manner of vice, with what fury will it rage! For, as Maximus Tyrius the Platonist observes, "libido consecuta quum fuerit materiam improbam, et præruptam licentiam, et effrenatam audaciam, &c." what will not lust effect in such persons? For commonly Princes and great men make no scruple at all of such matters, but with that whore in Spartian,<sup>6</sup> quicquid libet licet, they think they may do what they list, profess it publicly, and rather brag with Proculus (that writ to a friend of his in Rome,<sup>7</sup> what famous exploits he had done in that kind) than any way be abashed at it. <sup>8</sup>Nicholas Sanders relates of Henry the 8th (I know not how truly) quod paucus vidit pulchriores quas non concupierit, et paucissimas non concupierit quas non violarit, he saw very few [pretty] maids that he did not desire, and desired fewer whom he did not enjoy: nothing so familiar amongst them, 'tis most of their business. Sardanapalus, Messalina, and Joan of Naples,<sup>9</sup> are not comparable to <sup>10</sup>meaner

We may conclude that, if they be young, fortunate, rich, high-fed, and idle withal, it is almost impossible they should live honest, not rage, and precipitate themselves into those inconveniences of burning lust.

Diet alone is able to cause it: a rare thing to see a young man or a woman that lives idly, and fares well, of what condition soever, not to be in love. <sup>4</sup>Alcibiades was still dallying with wanton young women, immoderate in his expenses, effeminate in his apparel, ever in love, but why? he was over-delicate in his diet, too frequent and excessive in banquets. Ubi cunque securitas, ibi libido dominatur; lust and security domineer together, as *S. SUBJECT. 2.—Other Causes of Love-Melancholy, Sight, Beauty from the Face, Eyes, other parts, and how it pierceth.

MANY such causes may be reckoned up, but they cannot avail, except opportunity be offered of time, place, and those other beautiful objects, or artificial enticements, as kissing, conference, discourse, gestures concur, with such like lascivious provocations. Kornmannus, in his book de linea amoris, makes five degrees of lust, out of <sup>1</sup>Lucian belike, which he handles in five Chapters,

Sight, of all other, is the first step of this unruly love, though sometimes it be prevented by relation or hearing, or rather incensed. For there be those so apt, credulous and facile to love, that if they hear of a proper man, or woman, they are in love before they see them, and that merely by relation, as Achilles Tatius observes. <sup>3</sup>Such is their intemperance and lust, that they are as much maimed by report as if they saw them. Callisthenes, a rich young Gentleman of Byzantium in Thrace, hearing of <sup>4</sup>Leucippe, Sostratus' fair daughter, was far in love with her, and out of fame and common rumour so much incensed that he would needs have her to be his wife. And sometimes by reading they are so affected, as he in <sup>5</sup>Lucian confesseth of himself, I never read that place of Panthea in Xenophon, but I am as much affected as if I were present with her. Such persons commonly <sup>6</sup>feign a kind of beauty to themselves; and so did those three Gentlewomen, in <sup>7</sup>Ballhasar Castilio, fall in love with a young man, whom they never knew, but only heard him commended: or by reading of a letter; for there is a grace cometh from hearing, <sup>8</sup>as a moral Philosopher informeth us, as well as from sight; and the species of love are received into the phantasy by relation alone; <sup>1</sup>ut cupere ab aspectu, sic velle ab auditu, both senses affect. Interdum et absentes amamus, sometimes we love those that are absent, saith Philostratus, and gives instance in his friend Athenodorus, that loved a Maid at Corinth whom he never saw; non oculi, sed mens videt, we see with the eyes of our understanding.

But the most familiar and usual cause of Love is that which comes by sight, which conveys those admirable rays of beauty and pleasing graces to the heart. Plotinus derives love from sight, ἔργω quasi ὁρασις.

the eyes are the harbingers of love, and the first step of love is sight, as <sup>3</sup>Lilius Giraldus proves at large, hist. deor. syntag. 13. they as two sluices let in the influences of that divine, powerful, soul-ravishing, and captivating beauty, which, as <sup>4</sup>one saith, is sharper than any dart or needle, wounds deeper into the heart, and opens a gap through our eyes to that lovely wound, which pierceth the soul itself. Through it love is kindled like a fire (Eccles. ix. 18). This amazing, confounding, admirable, amiable Beauty, <sup>5</sup>than which in all Nature's treasure (saith Isocrates) there is nothing so majestic and sacred, nothing so divine, lovely, precious, 'tis nature's Crown, gold and glory; bonum si non summum, de summis tamen non infrequentè triumphans, whose power hence may be discerned; we condemn and abhor generally such things as are foul and ugly to behold, account them filthy, but love and covet that which is fair. 'Tis <sup>6</sup>beauty in all things, which pleaseth and allureth us, a fair hawk, a fine garment, a goodly building, a fair house, &c. That Persian Xerxes, when he destroyed all those Temples of the Gods in Greece, caused that of Diana in integrum servari, to be spared alone for that excellent beauty and magnificence of it. Inanimate beauty can so command. 'Tis that which Painters, Artificers, Orators, all aim at, as Erixy-machus, the Physician in Plato,<sup>7</sup> contends, <sup>8</sup>It was beauty first that ministered occasion to art, to find

Whiteness in the Lily, red in the Rose, purple in the Violet, a lustre in all things without life, the clear light of the Moon, the bright beams of the Sun, splendour of Gold, purple, sparkling Diamond, the excellent feature of the Horse, the Majesty of the Lion, the colour of Birds, Peacocks' tails, the silver scales of Fish, we behold with singular delight and admiration. <sup>1</sup>And which [what?] is rich in plants, delightful in flowers, wonderful in beasts, but most glorious in men, doth make us affect and earnestly desire it, as when we hear any sweet harmony, an eloquent tongue, see any excellent quality, curious work of man, elaborate art, or ought that is exquisite, there ariseth instantly in us a longing for the same. We love such men, but most part for comeliness of person; we call them Gods and Goddesses, divine, serene, happy, &c. And of all mortal men they alone (<sup>2</sup>Calcagninus holds) are free from calumny; qui divitiis, magistratu et gloria florent, injuriâ lacessimus, we backbite, wrong, hate, renowned, rich, and happy men, we repine at their felicity, they are undeserving, we think, fortune is a step-mother to us, a parent to them. We envy (saith <sup>3</sup>Isocrates)<sup>4</sup> wise, just, honest men, except with mutual offices and kindnesses, some good turn or other, they extort this [their] love from us; only fair persons we love at first sight, desire their acquaintance, and adore them as so many Gods: we had rather serve them than command others, and account ourselves the more beholding to them, the more service they enjoin us: though they be otherwise vicious, dishonest, we love them, favour them, and are ready to do them any good office for their <sup>5</sup>beauty's sake, though they have no other good quality beside. Dic igitur, ô formose adolescens (as that eloquent Phavorinus breaks out in <sup>6</sup>Stobæus) dic Autolyce, suavius nectare loqueris; dic, ô Telemache, vehementius Ulysse dicis; dic, Alcibiades, utcumque ebrius, libentius tibi licet ebrio auscultabimus. Speak, fair youth, speak Autolyce,<sup>1</sup> thy words are sweeter than Nectar; speak O Telemachus, thou art more powerful than Ulysses; speak Alcibiades, though drunk, we will willingly hear thee as thou art. Faults in such are no faults. For when the said Alcibiades had stolen Anytus his gold and silver plate, he was so far from prosecuting so foul a fact (though every man else condemned his impudence and insolency) that he wished it had been more, and much better (he loved him dearly) for his sweet sake.<sup>2</sup> No worth is eminent in such lovely persons, all imperfections hid; non enim facile de his quos plurimum diligimus, turpitudinem suspicamur, for hearing, sight, touch, &c. our mind and all our senses are captivated, omnes sensus formosus delectat. Many men have been preferred for their person alone, chosen Kings, as amongst the Indians, Persians, Æthiopians of old; the properest man of person the country could afford was elected their Sovereign Lord; gratior est pulchro veniens à corpore virtus,<sup>3</sup> and so have many other nations thought and done, as 'Curtius' observes; ingens enim in corporis majestate veneratio est, for there is a majestical presence in such men; and so far was beauty adored amongst them. that no man was thought fit to reign that was not in all parts complete and supereminent. Archidamus, King of Lacedæmon, had like to have been deposed, because he married a little wife; they would not have their royal issue degenerate. Who would ever have thought that Adrian the Fourth, an English Monk's Bastard (as 'Papirius Massovius' writes in his life) inops à suis relictus, squalidus et miser, a poor forsaken child should ever come to be Pope of Rome? But why was it? Erat acri ingenio, facundiâ expeditâ, elegantî corpore, facieque lætâ ac hilari, (as he follows it out of 'Nubrigensis', for he ploughs with his heifer,<sup>4</sup>) he was wise, learned, eloquent, of a pleasant, a promising countenance. a goodly proper man; he had, in a word, a winning look of his own, and that carried it, for that he was especially advanced. beautiful woman, in so much, saith Athenæus,<sup>1</sup> that Apelles and Praxiteles drew Venus' picture from her. Thus young men will adore and honour beauty; nay, Kings themselves, I say, will do it, and voluntarily submit their sovereignty to a lovely woman. Wine is strong, Kings are strong, but a woman strongest, 1 Esd. 4. 10, as Zorobabel proved at large to King Darius, his Princes and Noblemen. Kings sit still and command Sea and Land, &c. all pay tribute to the King; but women make Kings pay tribute, and have dominion over them. When they have got gold and silver, they submit all to a beautiful woman, give themselves wholly to her, gaze and gaze on her, and all men desire her more than gold or silver, or any precious thing: they will leave Father and Mother, and venture their lives for her, labour and travel to get, and bring all their gains to women, steal, fight, and spoil, for their Mistress' sakes. And no King so strong, but a fair woman is stronger than he is. All things (as <sup>2</sup>he proceeds) fear to touch the King; yet I saw him, and Apame his Concubine, the Daughter of the famous Bartacus, sitting on the right hand of the King, and she took the Crown off his head, and put it on her own, and struck him with her left hand; yet the King gaped and gazed on her, and when she laughed, he laughed, and when she was angry, he flattered to be reconciled to her. So beauty commands even Kings themselves; nay whole Armies and Kingdoms are captivated together with their Kings. 'Forma vincit armatos, ferrum pulchritudo captivat; vincentur specie, qui non vincentur prælio. And 'tis a great matter, saith <sup>4</sup>Xenophon, and of which all fair persons may worthily brag, that a strong man must labour for his living, if he will have ought, a valiant man must fight and endanger himself for it, a wise man speak, shew himself, and toil; but a fair and beautiful person doth all with ease, he compasseth his desire without any pains-taking: God and men, Heaven and Earth, conspire to honour him; every one pities him above other, if he be in need, <sup>5</sup>and all the world is willing to do him good. <sup>6</sup>Chariclea fell into the hands of Pirates, but when all the rest were put to the edge of the sword, she alone was preserved for her person. <sup>7</sup>When Constantinople was sacked by the Turk, Irene escaped, and was so far from being made a captive, that she even captivated the grand Seignior himself. So did Rosamond insult over King Henry the Second.

——<sup>1</sup> I was so fair an object ;
Whom fortune made my king, my love made subject ;
He found by proof the privilege of beauty,
That it had power to countermand all duty.

It captivates the very Gods themselves, morosiora numina,<sup>2</sup>

And those mali genii are taken with it, as<sup>4</sup> I have already proved. Formosam Barbari verentur, et ad aspectum pulchrum immanis animus mansuescit (Heliodor. lib. 5. [§ vii.]) The Barbarians stand in awe of a fair woman, and at a beautiful aspect a fierce spirit is pacified. For when as Troy was taken, and the wars ended (as Clemens<sup>5</sup> Alexandrinus quotes out of Euripides) angry Menelaus, with rage and fury armed, came with his sword drawn to have killed Helena with his own hands, as being the sole cause of all those wars and miseries: but when he saw her fair face, as one amazed at her divine beauty, he let his weapon fall, and embraced her besides, he had no power to strike so sweet a creature. Ergo hebetantur enses pulchritudine, the edge of a sharp sword (as the saying is) is dulled with a beautiful aspect, and severity itself is overcome. Hyperides the Orator, when Phryne his Client was accused at Athens for her lewdness, used no other defence in her cause, but tearing her upper garment, disclosed her naked breast to the Judges, with which comeliness of her body, and amiable gesture, they were so moved and astonished, that they did acquit her forthwith, and let her go.<sup>6</sup> O noble piece of Justice! mine Author exclaims, and who is he that would not rather lose his seat and robes, forfeit his office, than give sentence against the majesty of beauty? Such prerogatives have fair persons, and they alone are free from danger. Parthenopæus was so lovely and fair, that when he fought in the Theban wars, if his face had been by chance bare, no enemy would offer to strike at, or hurt him. Such immunities hath beauty; beasts themselves are moved with it. Sinalda was a woman of such excellent feature,<sup>1</sup> and a Queen, that when she was to be trodden on by wild horses for a punishment, the wild beasts stood in admiration of her person (Saxo Grammaticus lib. 8. Dan. Hist.) and would not hurt her. Wherefore did that royal Virgin in <sup>2</sup>Apuleius, when she fled from the thieves' den, in a desert, made such an Apostrophe to her Ass on whom she rode : (for what knew she to the contrary but that he was an Ass ?) Si me parentibus et proco formoso reddideris, quas tibi gratias, quos honores habeo, quos cibos exhibebo ?<sup>3</sup> She would comb him, dress him, feed him, and trick him every day herself, and he should work no more, toil no more, but rest and play, &c. And besides, she would have a dainty picture drawn, in perpetual remembrance, a Virgin riding upon an Ass's back with this motto, Asino vectore regia virgo fugiens captivitatem. Why said she all this ? why did she make such promises to a dumb beast ? but that she perceived the poor Ass to be taken with her beauty ; for he did often obliquo collo pedes puellæ decoros basiare, kiss her feet as she rid, et ad delicatulas vocularum tentabat adhinnire, offer to give consent as much as in him was to her delicate speeches, and besides he had some feeling as she conceived of her misery.<sup>4</sup> And why did Theagenes' horse in Heliodorus'<sup>5</sup> curvet, prance, and go so proudly, exultans alacriter et superbiens, &c. but that sure, as mine Author supposeth, he was in love with his Master ? dixisses ipsum equum pulchrum intelligere pulchram domini formam ! A fly lighted on 'Malthius' cheek as he lay asleep, but why ? Not to hurt him, as a parasite of his standing by well perceived, non ut pungeret, sed ut oscularetur, but certainly to kiss him, as ravished with his divine looks. Inanimate creatures, I suppose, have a touch of this. When a drop of <sup>7</sup>Psyche's Candle fell on Cupid's shoulder, I think, sure, it was to kiss it. When Venus ran to meet her rose-cheeked Adonis, as an elegant <sup>8</sup>Poet of ours sets her out,

—— the bushes in the way
Some catch her [by the] neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her legs to make her stay,
And all did covet her for to embrace.

Though I no sense at all of feeling have,
Yet your sweet looks do animate and save;
And when your speaking eyes do this way turn,
Methinks my wounded members live and burn.

I could tell you such another story of a spindle that was fired by a fair Lady's<sup>2</sup> looks, or fingers, some say, I know not well whether, but fired it was by report, and of a cold bath that suddenly smoked, and was very hot, when naked Calia came into it,

Miramur quis sit tantus et unde vapor,<sup>3</sup> &c.

But of all the tales in this kind, that is the most memorable of <sup>4</sup> Death himself, when he should have stroken a sweet young Virgin with his dart, he fell in love with the object. Many more such could I relate, which are to be believed with a poetical faith. So dumb and dead creatures dote, but men are mad, stupified many times at the first sight of beauty, amazed, <sup>5</sup> as that fisherman in Aristænetus, that espied a Maid bathing herself by the Sea side,

Many will condemn these men that are so enamoured for fools; but some again commend them for it; many reject Paris' judgement, and yet Lucian approves of it; admiring Paris for his choice; he would have done as much himself, and by good desert in his mind; beauty is to be preferred <sup>3</sup>before wealth or wisdom. <sup>4</sup>Athenæus, Deipnosophist, lib. 13. cap. 7, holds it not such indignity for the Trojans and Greeks to contend ten years, to spend so much labour, lose so many men's lives for Helen's sake,<sup>5</sup> for so fair a Lady's sake;

But this is not the matter in hand, what prerogative this Beauty hath, of what power and sovereignty it is, and how far such persons that so much admire, and dote upon it, are to be justified; no man doubts of these matters; the question is how and by what means Beauty produceth this effect? By sight: the Eye betrays the soul, and is both Active and Passive in this business; it wounds and is wounded, is an especial cause and instrument, both in the subject, and in the object. <sup>4</sup>As tears, it begins in the eyes, descends to the breast, it conveys these beauteous rays, as I have said, unto the heart. Ut vidi, ut perii! <sup>5</sup> Mars videt hanc, visamque capit. Shechem saw Dinah, the daughter of Leah, and defiled her, Gen. 34. 3; Jacob [loved] Rachel, 29. 17, for she was beautiful and fair: David spied Bathsheba afar off, 2 Sam. 11. 2; the Elders Susanna, <sup>6</sup>as that Orthomenian Strato saw fair Aristoclea, the daughter of Theophanes, bathing herself at that Hercyne well in Lebadea; and were captivated in an instant. Viderunt oculi, rapuerunt pectora flammæ. Amnon fell sick for Tamar's sake, 2 Sam. 13. 2. <sup>6</sup> Clitiphon ingenuously confesseth, that he no sooner came in Leucippe's presence, but that he did corde tremere, et oculis lascivius intueri; <sup>7</sup> he was wounded at the first sight, his heart panted, and he could not possibly turn his eyes from her. So doth Calasiris in Heliodorus, lib. 2. [§§ xxiv, xxv.], Isis' Priest, a reverend old man complain, who, by chance at Memphis seeing that Thracian Rhodophis, might not hold his eyes off her: <sup>8</sup> I will not conceal it, she overcame me with her presence, and quite assaulted my continency, which I had kept unto mine old age; I resisted a long time my bodily eyes with the eyes of my understanding; at last I was conquered, and as in a tempest carried headlong. <sup>9</sup> Xenopeithes, a Philosopher, railed at women down-right for many years together, scorned, hated, scoffed at them; coming at last into Daphnis a fair maid's company (as he condoles his mishap to his friend Demaretus) though free before,

I could hold out no longer. Such another mishap, but worse, had Stratocles, the Physician, that blear-eyed old man, muco plenus<sup>2</sup> (so <sup>3</sup> Prodromus describes him); he was a severe woman-hater all his life, fæda et contumeliosa semper in fæminas profatus, a bitter persecutor of the whole sex, humanas aspides et viperas appellabat,<sup>4</sup> he forswore them all still, and mocked them wheresoever he came, in such vile terms, ut matrem et sorores odisses, that, if thou hadst heard him, thou wouldest have loathed thine own Mother and Sisters for his words' sake. Yet this old doting fool was taken at last with that celestial and divine look of Myrilla, the daughter of Anticles the gardener, that smirking wench, that he shaved off his bushy beard, painted his face, <sup>5</sup> curl'd his hair, wore a Laurel Crown to cover his bald pate, and for her love besides was ready to run mad. For the very day that he married, he was so furious, ut solis occasum minùs expectare posset (a terrible, a monstrous long day) he could not stay till it was night, sed omnibus insalutatis in thalamum festinus irrupit, the meat scarce out of his mouth, without any leave taking, he would needs go presently to bed. What young man therefore, if old men be so intemperate, can secure himself? Who can say, I will not be taken with a beautiful object, I can, I will contain? No, saith <sup>6</sup> Lucian of his Mistress, she is so fair, that if thou dost but see her, she will stupify thee, kill thee straight, and, Medusa-like, turn thee to a stone, thou canst not pull thine eyes from her, but as an Adamant doth Iron, she will carry thee bound headlong whither she will herself, infect thee like a Basilisk. It holds both in men and women. Dido was amazed at Aneas' presence;

If you desire to know more particularly what this Beauty is, how it doth influre<sup>5</sup> how it doth fascinate (for as all hold love is a fascination) thus in brief. <sup>6</sup> This comeliness or beauty ariseth from the due proportion of the whole, or from each severall part. For an exact delineation of which, I refer you to Poets, Historiographers, and those amorous Writers, to Lucian's Images and Charidemus, Xenophon's description of Panthea, Petronius' Catalecta, Heliodorus' Chariclea, Tatius' Leucippe, Longus Sophista's Daphnis and Chloe, Theodorus Prodrumus his Rhodanthe, Aristænetus' and Philostratus' Epistles, Balthasar Castilio, lib. 4. de aulico, Laurentius cap. 10. de melan., Æneas Sylvius his Lucretia, and every Poet almost, which have most accurately described a perfect beauty, an absolute feature, and that through every member, both in men and women. Each part must concur to the perfection of it ; for as Seneca saith, Ep. 33. lib. 4, non est formosa mulier cujus crus laudatur et brachium, sed illa cujus simul universa facies admirationem singulis partibus dedit ; she is no fair woman, whose arm, thigh, &c. are commended, except the face and all the other parts be correspondent. And the face especially gives a lustre to the rest : the Face is it that commonly denominates fair or foul ; arx formæ facies, the Face is Beauty's Tower ; and though the other parts be deformed, yet a good face carries it (facies non uxor amatur<sup>7</sup>) that alone is most part respected, principally valued, deliciis suis ferox, and of itself able to captivate.

Not one of a thousand falls in love, but there is some peculiar part or other which pleaseth most, and inflames him above the rest. <sup>7</sup>A company of young Philosophers on a time fell at variance, which part of a woman was most desirable, and pleased best? some said the forehead, some the teeth, some the eyes, cheeks, lip, neck, chin, &c., the controversy was referred to Lais of Corinth to decide; but she, smiling, said they were a company of fools; for suppose they had her where they wished, what would they <sup>8</sup>first seek? How vex they not? All this is true, and (which Athæneus, lib. 13. deip. cap. 5. and Tatius<sup>14</sup> hold) they are the chief seats of Love, and as James Lernutius<sup>15</sup> hath facetely expressed in an elegant Ode of his,

Now, last of all, I will shew you by what means beauty doth fascinate, bewitch, as some hold, and work upon the soul of a man by the eye. For certainly I am of the Poet's mind, Love doth bewitch, and strangely change us.

Love mocks our senses, curbs our liberties,
And doth bewitch us with his art and rings,
I think some devil gets into our entrails,
And kindles coals, and heaves our souls from th' hinges.

Heliodorus, lib. 3. [§ 7.] proves at large, <sup>8</sup> that Love is witchcraft, it gets in at our eyes, pores, nostrils, ingenders the same qualities, and affections in us, as were in the party whence it came. The manner of the fascination, as Ficinus, 10. cap. com. in Plat. declares it, is thus: *Mortal men are then especially bewitched, when as by often gazing one on the other, they direct sight to sight, join eye to eye, and so drink and suck in Love between them; for the beginning of this disease is the Eye. he be otherwise deformed, by often looking upon him, will make one mad, and tie him fast to him by the eye. Leonard. Varius lib. 1. cap. 2. de fascinat. telleth us, that by this interview,<sup>1</sup> the purer spirits are infected, the one Eye pierceth through the other with his rays, which he sends forth, and many men have those excellent piercing eyes, that, which Suetonius relates of Augustus,<sup>2</sup> their brightness is such, they compel their spectators to look off, and can no more endure them than the Sun beams. Barradius, lib. 6. cap. 10. de Harmonia Evangel. reports as much of our Saviour Christ, and <sup>3</sup>Peter Morales of the Virgin Mary, whom <sup>4</sup>Nicephorus describes likewise to have been yellow-hair'd, of a wheat colour, but of a most amiable and piercing eye. The rays, as some think, sent from the eyes, carry certain spiritual vapours with them, and so infect the other party, and that in a moment. I know, they that hold visio fit intra mittendo, will make a doubt of this; but Ficinus proves it from blear-eyes,<sup>5</sup> that by sight alone, make others blear-eyed: and it is more than manifest, that the vapour of the corrupt blood doth get in together with the rays, and so by the contagion the spectators' eyes are infected. Other arguments there are of a Basilisk, that kills afar off by sight, as that Ephesian did of whom <sup>6</sup>Philostratus speaks, of so pernicious an eye, he poisoned all he looked steadily on: and that other argument, menstruæ fœminæ, out of Aristotle's Problems,<sup>7</sup> morbosæ Captivaccius adds, and <sup>8</sup>Septalius the Commentator, that contaminate a looking-glass with beholding it. <sup>9</sup>So the beams that come from the Agent's heart, by the eyes infect the spirits about the patients, inwardly wound, and thence the spirits infect the blood. To this effect she complained in <sup>10</sup>Apuleius, Thou art the cause of my grief, thy eyes piercing through mine eyes to mine inner parts, have set my bowels on fire, and therefore pity me that am now ready to die for thy sake. Ficinus illustrates this with a familiar example of that Marrhusian Phædrus and Theban Lycias, <sup>1</sup> *Lycias he stares on Phædrus' face, and Phædrus fastens the balls of his eyes upon Lycias, and with those sparkling rays sends out his spirits. The beams of Phædrus' eyes are easily mingled with the beams of Lycias', and spirits are joined to spirits. This vapour begot in Phædrus' heart, enters into Lycias' bowels: and that which is a greater wonder, Phædrus' blood is in Lycias' heart, and thence come those ordinary love speeches, my sweetheart Phædrus, and mine own self, my dear bowels! And Phædrus again to Lycias, O my light, my joy, my soul, my life! Phædrus follows Lycias, because his heart would have his spirits; and Lycias follows Phædrus, because he loves the seat of his spirits; both follow, but Lycias the earnestest of the two: the river hath more need of the fountain than the fountain of the river; as iron is drawn to that which is touched with a loadstone, but draws not it again: so Lycias draws Phædrus. But how comes it to pass then, that the blind man loves, that never saw? We read, in the Lives of the Fathers, a story of a child that was brought up in the wilderness, from his infancy, by an old Hermit: now come to man's estate, he saw by chance two comely women wandering in the woods: he asked the old man what creatures they were, he told him Fairies; after awhile talking obiter,<sup>2</sup> the Hermit demanded of him, which was the pleasantest sight that ever he saw in his life? he readily replied, the two <sup>3</sup> Fairies he spied in the wilderness. So that, without doubt, there is some secret loadstone in a beautiful woman, a magnetick power, a natural inbred affection, which moves our concupiscence, as he sings,*

Methinks I have a mistress yet to come,
And still I seek, I love, I know not whom.

'Tis true indeed of natural and chaste love, but not of this Heroical passion, or rather brutish burning lust of which we treat; we speak of wandering, wanton, adulterous eyes, which, as <sup>4</sup> he saith, lie still in wait, as so many soldiers, and when they spy an innocent spectator fixed on them, shoot him through, and presently bewitch him: especially when they shall gaze and gloat, as wanton lovers do one upon another, and with a pleasant eye-conflict participate each other's souls. Hence you may perceive how easily, and how quickly, we may be taken in love, since at the twinkling of an eye, Phædrus' spirits may so perniciously infect Lycias' blood. <sup>1</sup> Neither is it any wonder, if we but consider how many other diseases closely and as suddenly, are caught by infection, Plague, Itch, Scabs, Flux, &c. The spirits taken in, will not let him rest that hath received them, but egg him on.

SUBJECT. 3.—Artificial Allurements of Love, Causes and Provocations to Lust, Gestures, Clothes, Dower, &c.

NATURAL Beauty is a strong loadstone of itself, as you have heard, a great temptation, and pierceth to the very heart; <sup>3</sup> forma verecundæ nocuit mihi visa puellæ; but much more when those artificial enticements and provocations of Gestures, Clothes, Jewels, Pigments, Exornations, shall be annexed unto it; those other circumstances, opportunity of time and place, shall concur, which of themselves alone were all sufficient, each one in particular, to produce this effect. It is a question much controverted by some wise men, forma debeat plus arti an naturæ? whether natural or artificial objects be more powerful? but not decided: for my part, I am of opinion, that, though Beauty itself be a great motive, and give an excellent lustre in sordibus, in beggary, as a Jewel on a dunghill will shine, and cast his rays, it cannot be suppressed, which Heliodorus feigns of Chariclea, though she were in beggar's weeds: <sup>4</sup> yet, as it is used, artificial is of more force, and much to be preferred.

*John Leri*us the Burgundian, cap. 8. hist. navigat. in Brasil. is altogether on my side. For whereas (saith he) at our coming to Brasil, we found both men and women naked as they were born, without any covering, so much as of their privities, and could not be persuaded, by our Frenchmen that lived a year with them, to wear any ; <sup>2</sup> many will think that our so long commerce with naked women must needs be a great provocation to lust ; but he concludes otherwise, that their nakedness did much less entice them to lasciviousness, than our women's clothes. And I dare boldly affirm (saith he) that those glittering attires, counterfeit colours, headgears, curled hairs, plaited coats, cloaks, gowns, costly stomachers, guarded and loose garments, and all those other accoutrements, wherewith our country-women counterfeit a beauty, and so curiously set out themselves, cause more inconvenience in this kind, than that barbarian homeliness, although they be no whit inferior unto them in beauty. I could evince the truth of this by many other arguments, but I appeal (saith he) to my companions at that present, which were all of the same mind. His country-man Montaigne, in his Essays,<sup>3</sup> is of the same opinion, and so are many others ;<sup>4</sup> out of whose assertions thus much in brief we may conclude : that beauty is more behold-ing to Art than Nature, and stronger provocations proceed from outward ornaments, than such as nature hath provided. It is true, that those fair sparkling eyes, white neck, coral lips, turgent paps, rose-coloured cheeks, &c. of themselves are potent enticers ; but when a comely, artificial, well-composed look, pleasing gesture, an affected carriage shall be added, it must needs be far more forcible than it was, when those curious needle-works, variety of colours, purest dyes, jewels, spangles, pendants, lawn, lace, tiffanies, fair and fine linen, embroideries, calamistrations, ointments, &c. shall be added, they will make the veriest dowdy otherwise a Goddess, when nature shall be furthered by Art. For it is not the eye of itself that enticeth to lust, but an adulterous eye as Peter terms it, 2. 2. 14, a wanton, a rolling, lascivious eye: a wandering eye, which Isaiah taxeth, 3. 16. Christ himself and the Virgin Mary had most beautiful eyes, as amiable eyes as any persons, saith Barzadius, that ever lived, but withal so modest, so chaste, that whosoever looked on them, was freed from that passion of burning lust; if we may believe Gerson and Bonaventure, there was no such Antidote against it, as the Virgin Mary's face. 'Tis not the eye, but carriage of it, as they use it, that causeth such effects. When Pallas, Juno, Venus, were to win Paris's favour for the golden Apple, as it is elegantly described in that pleasant interlude of Apuleius, Juno came with majesty upon the stage, Minerva with gravity, but Venus, dulce subridens, constitit amènè, et gratissimæ Gratiæ deam propitiantes, &c. came in smiling with her gracious graces, and exquisite musick, as if she had danced, et nonnunquam saltare solis oculis, and which was the main matter of all, she danced with her rolling eyes: they were the Brokers and Harbingers of her suit. So she makes her brags in a modern Poet,

Soon could I make my brow to tyrannise,
And force the world do homage to mine eyes.

The eye is a secret Orator, the first bawd, amoris porta,<sup>6</sup> and with private looks, winking, glances and smiles, as so many dialogues, they make up the match many times, and understand one another's meanings, before they come to speak a word. Euryalus and Lucretia were so mutually enamoured by the eye, and prepared to give each other entertainment, before ever they had conference: he asked her good will with his eye; she did suffragari,<sup>8</sup> and gave consent with a pleasant look. That Thracian Rhodopis was so excellent at this dumb Rhetorick, that if she had but looked upon any one almost (saith Calasiris) she would have bewitched him, and he could not possibly escape it. For, as <sup>1</sup> Salvianus observes, the eyes are the windows of our souls, by which as so many channels, all dishonest concupiscence gets into our hearts. They reveal our thoughts, and as they say, frons animi index,<sup>2</sup> but the eye of the countenance,

I may say the same of smiling, gait, nakedness of parts, plausible gestures, &c. To laugh is the proper passion of a man, an ordinary thing to smile, but those counterfeit, composed, affected, artificial, and reciprocal, those counter-smiles are the dumb shews and prognosticks of greater matters, which they most part use, to inveigle and deceive; though many fond lovers again are so frequently mistaken, and led into a fool's paradise. For if they see but a fair Maid laugh, or shew a pleasant countenance, use some gracious words or gestures, they apply it all to themselves, as done in their favour, sure she loves them, she is willing, coming, &c.

*Stultus quando videt quod pulchra puellula ridet,
Tum fatuus credit se quòd amare velit.*

When a fool sees a fair maid for to smile,
He thinks she loves him, 'tis but to beguile.

They make an Art of it, as the Poet telleth us,

Who can believe? to laugh maids make an art,
And seek a pleasant grace to that same part.

Me aspiciens motis blandè subrisit ocellis.

All other gestures of the body will enforce as much. Daphnis in<sup>3</sup> Lucian was a poor tattered wench, when I knew her first, said Crobyle, pannosa et lacera, but now she is a stately piece indeed, hath her Maids to attend her, brave attires, money in her purse, &c. and will you know how this came to pass? by setting out herself after the best fashion, by her pleasant carriage, affability, sweet smiling upon all, &c. Many women dote upon a man for his compliment only, and good behaviour, they are won in an instant; too credulous to believe that every light, wanton suitor, who sees or makes love to them, is instantly enamoured, he certainly dotes on, admires them, will surely marry, when as he means nothing less, 'tis his ordinary carriage in all such companies. So both delude each other, by such outward shews, and amongst the rest, an upright, a comely grace, courtesies, gentle salutations, cringes, a mincing gate, a decent and an affected pace, are most powerful enticers, and which the Prophet Esay, a Courtier himself, and a great observer, objected to the daughters of Sion, 3. 16, they minced as they went, and made a tinkling with their feet. To say the truth, what can they not effect by such means?

Whilst nature decks them in their best attires
Of youth and beauty which the world admires.

And what shall we say otherwise of that baring of their necks, shoulders, naked breasts, arms and wrists, to what end are they but only to tempt men to lust?

or to what end and purpose? But to leave all these phantastical raptures, I'll prosecute mine intended Theme. Nakedness, as I have said, is an odious thing of itself, remedium amoris;<sup>6</sup> yet it may be so used, in part, and at set times, that there can be no such enticement as it is;

David so espied Bathsheba, the Elders Susanna : <sup>2</sup> Apelles was enamoured with Campaspe, when he was to paint her naked. Tiberius, in Suet. cap. 42, supped with Sestius Gallus, an old lecher, libidinoso sene, cæ lege ut nudæ puellæ administrarent ; <sup>3</sup> some say as much of Nero, and Pontus Heuter of Carolus Pugnax. Amongst the Babylonians, it was the custom of some lascivious queans to dance frisking in that fashion, saith Curtius, lib. 5, [cap. 1.] and Sardus, de mor. gent. lib. 1, writes of others to that effect. The *Tuscan*s, at some set banquets, had naked women to attend upon them, which Leonicius, de Varia hist. lib. 3. cap. 96, confirms of such other bawdy nations. Nero would have filthy pictures still hanging in his chamber, which is too commonly used in our times ; and Heliogabalus, etiam coram agentes, ut ad venerem incitarent. So things may be abused. A servant maid in Aristænetus spied her Master and Mistress through the key-hole <sup>4</sup> merrily disposed ; upon the sight she fell in love with her Master. Antoninus Caracalla observed his mother-in-law with her breasts amorously laid open, he was so much moved, that he said, Ah ! si liceret ! Oh that I might ! which she by chance over-hearing, replied as impudently, <sup>5</sup> Quicquid libet licet, thou mayest do what thou wilt. Why do they adorn themselves with so many colours of herbs, fictitious flowers, curious needleworks, quaint devices, sweet-smelling odours, with those inestimable riches of precious stones, pearls, rubies, diamonds, emeralds, &c.? Why do they crown themselves with gold and silver, use coronets, and tires of several fashions, deck themselves with pendants, bracelets, ear-rings, chains, girdles, rings, pins, spangles, embroideries, shadows, rabatoes, versicolour ribbands? Why do they make such glorious shews with their scarfs, feathers, fans, masks, furs, laces, tiffanies, ruffs, falls, caul<sup>3</sup>, cuffs, damasks, velvets, tinsels, cloth of gold, silver, tissue? with colours of heavens, stars, planets? the strength of metals, stones, odours, flowers, birds, beasts, fishes, and whatsoever Africa, Asia, America, sea, land, art, and industry of man can afford? <sup>2</sup> For what is beauty if it be not seen,
Or what is't to be seen, if not admir'd,
And though admir'd, unless in love desir'd?

Why do they go with such counterfeit gait, which <sup>3</sup>Philo Judæus reprehends them for,<sup>4</sup> and use (I say it again) such gestures, apish, ridiculous, undecent Attires, Sybaritical tricks, fucos genis, purpurissam venis, cerussam fronti, leges oculis, &c. use those sweet perfumes, powders, and ointments, in publick, flock to hear sermons so frequent, is it for devotion? or rather, as <sup>5</sup>Basil tells them, to meet their sweethearts, and see fashion; for, as he saith, commonly they come so provided to that place, with such curious compliments, with such gestures and tires, as if they should go to a dancing-school, a stage-play, or bawdy-house, fitter than a Church,

When such a she-priest comes her mass to say,

They make those holy Temples consecrated to godly Martyrs, and religious uses, the shops of impudence, dens of whores and thieves, and little better than brothel-houses. When we shall see these things daily done, their husbands bankrupts, if not cornutos, their wives light huswives, daughters dishonest; and hear of such dissolute acts, as daily we do, how should we think otherwise? what is their end, but to deceive and inveigle young men? As tow takes fire, such enticing objects produce their effect, how can it be altered? When Venus stood before Anchises (as <sup>7</sup>Homer feigns in one of his Hymns) in her costly robes, he was instantly taken,

When Venus stood before Anchises first,
 He was amazed to see her in her tires ;
 For she had on a hood as red as fire,
 And glittering chains, and ivy-twisted spires,
 About her tender neck were costly brooches,
 And necklaces of gold-enamell'd ouches.

So when Medea came in presence of Jason first, attended by her Nymphs and Ladies, as she is described by <sup>1</sup>Apollonius,

Cunctas verò ignis instar sequebatur splendor,
 Tantum ab aureis fimbriis resplendebat jubar,

A lustre followed them like flaming fire,

 Which in his eyes provok'd a sweet desire.

Such a relation we have in <sup>2</sup>Plutarch, when the Queens came and offered themselves to Antony, <sup>3</sup>*with divers presents, and enticing ornaments, Asiatick allurements, with such wonderful joy and festivity, they did so inveigle the Romans, that no man could contain himself, all was turned to delight and pleasure. The women transformed themselves to Bacchus shapes, the men-children to Satyrs and Pans ; but Antony himself was quite besotted with Cleopatra's sweet speeches, philters, beauty, pleasing tires : for when she sailed along the River Cydnus, with such incredible pomp, in a gilded ship, herself dressed like Venus, her Maids like the Graces, her Pages like so many Cupids, Antony was amazed, and rapt beyond himself. Heliodorus lib. 1. [ch. 10.] brings in Damæneta, Step-mother to Cnemon, whom she <sup>4</sup>saw in his scarfs, rings, robes and coronet, quite mad for the love of him. It was Judith's Pantofles that ravished the eyes of Holofernes. And <sup>5</sup>Cardan is not ashamed to confess, that, seeing his wife the first time all in white, he did admire, and instantly love her. If these outward ornaments were not of such*

So ridiculous moreover we are in our attires, and for cost so excessive, that, as Hierome<sup>11</sup> said of old, Uno filo villarum insunt pretia, uno lino decies sestertiūm inseritur ; 'tis an ordinary thing to put a thousand oaks and an hundred oxen into a suit of apparel, to wear a whole Manor on his back. What with shoe-ties, hangers, points, caps and feathers, scarfs, bands, cuffs, &c. in a short space their whole patrimonies are consumed. Heliogabalus is taxed by Lampridius,<sup>12</sup> and admired in his age, for wearing jewels in his shoes, a common thing in our times, not for Emperors and Princes, but almost for serving-men and tailors : all the flowers, stars, constellations, gold and precious stones, do condescend to set out their shoes. insolency of our days, the prodigious riot in this kind. Lucullus' wardrobe is put down by our ordinary Citizens; and a Cobbler's wife in Venice, a Courtesan in Florence, is no whit inferior to a Queen, if our Geographers say true: and why is all this? Why do they glory in their jewels (as <sup>1</sup> he saith) or exult and triumph in the beauty of clothes? why is all this cost? to incite men the sooner to burning lust. They pretend decency and ornament; but let them take heed, lest, while they set out their bodies, they do not damn their souls; 'tis <sup>2</sup> Bernard's counsel: shine in jewels, stink in conditions; have purple robes, and a torn conscience. Let them take heed of Esay's Prophecy, that their slippers and tires be not taken from them, [their] sweet balls, bracelets, ear-rings, veils, wimples, crissing-pins, glasses, fine linen, hoods, lawns, and sweet savours, they become not bald, burnt, and stink upon a sudden.<sup>3</sup> And let Maids beware, as <sup>4</sup> Cyprian adviseth, lest, while they wander too loosely abroad, they lose not their virginities: and, like Egyptian Temples, seem fair without, but prove rotten carcases within. How much better were it for them to follow that good counsel of Tertullian! <sup>5</sup> To have their eyes painted with chastity, the Word of God inserted into their ears, Christ's yoke tied to the hair, to subject themselves to their husbands. If they would do so, they should be comely enough, clothe themselves with the silk of sanctity, damask of devotion, purple of piety and chastity, and so painted, they shall have God himself to be a suitor. Let whores and queans prank up themselves, <sup>6</sup> let them paint their faces with minium and ceruse,<sup>7</sup> they are but fuels of lust, and signs of a corrupt soul: if ye be good, honest, virtuous, and religious Matrons, let sobriety, modesty, and chastity, be your honour, and God himself your love and desire. Mulier rectè olet, ubi nihil olet,<sup>8</sup> then a woman smells best, when she hath no perfume at all; no Crown, Chain, or Jewel (Guevarra adds) is such an ornament to a Virgin, or virtuous woman, quam virgini pudor, as chastity is: more credit in a wise man's eye and judgement they get by their plainness, and seem fairer than they that are set out with baubles, as a Butcher's meat is with pricks,<sup>1</sup> puffed up and adorned, like so many jays, with variety of colours. It is reported of Cornelia, that virtuous Roman Lady, great Scipio's daughter, Titus Sempronius' wife, and the Mother of the Gracchi, that being by chance in company with a companion, a strange gentlewoman (some light huswife belike, that was dressed like a May-Lady, and as most of our gentlewomen are, was<sup>2</sup> more sollicitous of her head-tire than of her health, that spent her time betwixt a comb and a glass, and had rather be fair than honest (as Cato said) and have the Commonwealth turned topsy turvy than her tires marred) and she did naught but brag of her fine Robes and Jewels, and provoked the Roman Matron to shew hers: Cornelia kept her in talk till her children came from school, and these, said she, are my Jewels, and so deluded and put off a proud, vain, phantastical huswife.<sup>3</sup> How much better were it for our Matrons to do as she did, to go civilly and decently, honestæ mulieris instar quæ utitur auro pro eo quod est, ad ea tantum quibus opus est, to use gold as it is gold, and for that use it serves, and when they need it, than to consume it in riot, beggar their husbands, prostitute themselves, inveigle others, and peradventure damn their own souls! How much more would it be for their honour and credit! Thus doing, as Hierome said of Blæsilla,<sup>4</sup> Furius did not so triumph over the Gauls, Papirius of the Samnites, Scipio of Numantia, as she did by her temperance; pulla semper veste, &c.<sup>5</sup> They should insult and domineer over lust, folly, vain-glory, all such inordinate, furious, and unruly passions.

after fine clothes, there is another great allurements (in the world's eye at least) which had like to have stolen out of sight, and that is money, veniunt à dote sagittæ,<sup>1</sup> money makes the match; <sup>2</sup>μονὸν ἄργυρον βλέπουσιν: 'tis like sauce to their meat, cum carne condimentum, a good dowry with a wife. Many men, if they do hear but of a great portion, a rich heir, are more mad, than if they had all the beauteous ornaments, and those good parts Art and Nature can afford, they <sup>3</sup>care not for honesty, bringing up, birth, beauty, person, but for money.

If she be rich, then she is fair, fine, absolute and perfect, then they burn like fire, they love her dearly, like pig and pie, and are ready to hang themselves if they may not have her. Nothing so familiar in these days, as for a young man to marry an old wife, as they say, for a piece of gold; asinum auro onustum,<sup>5</sup> and though she be an old crone, and have never a tooth in her head, neither good conditions, nor good face, a natural fool, but only rich, she shall have twenty young Gallants to be suitors in an instant. As she said in Suetonius, non me, sed mea ambiunt, 'tis not for her sake, but for her lands or money; and an excellent match it were (as he added) if she were away. So, on the other side, many a young lovely Maid will cast away herself upon an old, doting, decrepit dizzard,

This is not amongst your dust-worms alone, poor snakes that will prostitute their souls for money, but with this bait you may catch our most potent, puissant, and illustrious Princes. That proud upstart domineering Bishop of Ely, in the time of Richard the First, Viceroy in his absence, as <sup>7</sup>Nubrigensis relates it, to fortify himself, and maintain his greatness, propinquare suarum connubiis, plurimos sibi potentes et nobiles devincire curavit, married his poor kinswomen (which came forth of Normandy by droves) to the chiefest Nobles of the land, and they were glad to accept of such matches, fair or foul, for themselves, their Sons, Nephews, &c. Et quis tam præclaram affinitatem sub spe magnæ promotionis non optaret? Who would not have done as much for money and preferment? as mine author<sup>8</sup> adds. Vortigern, King of Britain, married Rowena the daughter of Hengist, the Saxon Prince, his mortal enemy; but wherefore? she had Kent for her dowry.

Yet what is the event of all such matches, that are so made for money, goods, by deceit, or for burning lust, quos fœda libido conjunxit, what follows? they are almost mad at first, but 'tis a mere flash; as chaff and straw soon fired, burn vehemently for a while, yet out in a moment; so are all such matches made by those allurements of burning lust; where there is no respect of honesty, parentage, virtue, religion, education, and the like, they are extinguished in an instant, and instead of love, comes hate; for joy, repentance and desperation itself. Franciscus Barbarus, in his first book de re uxoria, c. 5, hath a story of one Philip of Padua, that fell in love with a common whore, and was now ready to run mad for her; his Father, having no more sons, let him enjoy her; <sup>3</sup>but after a few days, the young man began to loathe, could not so much as endure the sight of her, and from one madness fell into another. Such event commonly have all these lovers; and he that so marries, or for such respects, let them look for no better success than Menelaus had with Helen, Vulcan with Venus, Theseus with Phædra, Minos with Pasiphæ, and Claudius with Messalina; shame, sorrow, misery, melancholy, discontent.

SUBJECT. 4.—Importunity and opportunity of time, place, conference, discourse, singing, dancing, musick, amorous tales, objects, kissing, familiarity, tokens, presents, bribes, promises, protestations, tears, &c.

ALL these allurements hitherto are afar off, and at a distance; I will come nearer to those other degrees of Love, which are conference, kissing, dalliance, discourse, singing, dancing, amorous tales, objects, presents, &c. which as so many Sirens steal away the hearts of men and women. For, as Tatius observes, l. 2, [§ 4.] <sup>1</sup> It is no sufficient trial of a Maid's affection by her eyes alone, but you must say something that shall be more available, and use such other forcible engines; therefore take her by the hand, wring her fingers hard, and sigh withal; if she accept this in good part, and seem not to be much averse, then call her Mistress, take her about the neck and kiss her, &c. But this cannot be done except they first get opportunity of living or coming together, ingress, egress, and regress; letters and commendations may do much, outward gestures and actions: but when they come to live near one another, in the same street, village, or together in an house, Love is kindled on a sudden. Many a Serving-man by reason of this opportunity and importunity inveigles his Master's daughter, many a Gallant loves a Dowdy, many a Gentleman runs upon his Wife's Maids, many Ladies dote upon their men <sup>2</sup> as the Queen in Ariosto did upon the Dwarf, <sup>3</sup> many matches are so made in haste, and they compelled as it were by 'necessity so to love, which, had they been free, come in company of others, seen that variety which many places afford, or compared them to a third, would never have looked one upon another. Or had not that opportunity of discourse and familiarity been offered, they would have loathed and contemned those, whom for want of better choice, and other objects, they are fatally driven on, and by reason of their hot blood, idle life, full diet, &c. are forced to dote upon them that come next. And many times those which at the first sight cannot fancy or affect each other, but are harsh and ready to disagree, offended with each other's carriage, like Benedick and Beatrice in the <sup>4</sup> Comedy, and in whom they find many faults, by this living together in a house, conference, kissing, colling, and such like allurements, begin at last to dote insensibly one upon another.

It was the greatest motive that Potiphar's wife had to dote upon

[ 'Tis never safe to yield to blandishments.]

This opportunity of time and place, with their circumstances, are so forcible motives, that it is impossible almost for two young folks, equal in years, to live together, and not be in love, especially in great houses, Princes' Courts, where they are idle in summo gradu,<sup>2</sup> fare well, live at ease, and cannot tell otherwise how to spend their time.

Achilles was sent by his Mother Thetis to the Island of Scyros in the Ægean Sea (where Lycomedes then reigned) in his nonage to be brought up, to avoid that hard destiny of the Oracle (he should be slain at the siege of Troy :) and for that cause was nurtured in Geneseo,<sup>4</sup> amongst the King's children in a woman's habit ; but see the event ; he comprest Deidamia, the King's fair daughter, and had a fine son, called Pyrrhus, by her. Peter Abelard the Philosopher, as he tells the tale himself, being set by Fulbert her Uncle to teach Heloise his lovely Niece, and to that purpose sojourned in his house, [who?] had committed agnam tenellam famelico lupo,<sup>5</sup> I use his own words, he soon got her good will, plura erant oscula quam sententiæ, and he read more of Love than any other Lecture : such pretty feats can opportunity plea ; primum domo conjuncti, inde animis, &c. But when, as I say, nox, vinum, et adolescentia,<sup>6</sup> youth, wine, and night, shall concur, nox amoris et quietis conscia, 'tis a wonder they be not all plunged over head and ears in love ; for youth is benigna in amorem, et prona materies, a very combustible matter, naphtha itself, the fuel of Love's fire, and most apt to kindle it. If there be seven servants in an ordinary house, you shall have three couples in some good liking at least, and amongst idle persons how should it be otherwise ? Living at Rome, saith Aretine's Lucretia, in the flower of my fortunes, rich, fair, young, and so well brought up, my conversation, age, beauty, fortune, made all the world admire and love me. Night alone, that one occasion is enough to set all on fire, and they are so cunning in great houses, that they make their best advantage of it. Many a Gentlewoman, that is guilty to herself of her imperfections, paintings, impostures, will not willingly be seen by day, but as <sup>1</sup>Castilio noteth, in the night, diem ut glis odit, tædarem lucem super omnia mavult, she hates the day like a dor-mouse, and above all things loves torches and candle-light, and if she must come abroad in the day, she covets, as <sup>2</sup> in a Mercer's shop, a very o'fuscate and obscure light. And good reason she hath for it: nocte latent mendæ,<sup>3</sup> and many an amorous gull is fetched over by that means. Gomesius, lib. 3. de sale gen. c. 22, gives instance in a Florentine Gentleman, that was so deceived with a wife, she was so radiantly set out with rings and jewels, lawns, scarfs, laces, gold, spangles, and gaudy devices, that the young man took her to be a goddess (or he never saw her but by torch-light) but after the wedding solemnities, when as he viewed her the next morning without her tires, and in a clear day, she was so deformed, lean, yellow, riveld,<sup>4</sup> &c. such a beastly creature in his eyes, that he could not endure to look upon her. Such matches are frequently made in Italy, where they have no other opportunity to woo, but when they go to Church, or, as <sup>5</sup> in Turkey, see them at a distance, they must interchange few or no words, till such time they come to be married, and then as Sardus, lib. 1. cap. 3. de morb. gent. and <sup>6</sup>Bohemus relates of those old Lacedæmonians, the Bride is brought into the chamber, with her hair girt about her, the Bridegroom comes in, and unties the knot, and must not see her at all by day-light, till such time as he is made a Father by her. In those hotter Countries these are ordinary practices at this day; but in our Northern parts, amongst Germans, Dances, French, and Britains, the continent of Scandia and the rest, we assume more liberty in such causes; we allow them, as Bohemus saith, to kiss coming and going, et modo absit lascivna, in cauponam ducere, to talk merrily, sport, play, sing, and dance, so that it be modestly done, go to the Ale-house and Tavern together.

The very tone of some of their voices, a pretty pleasing speech, an affected tone they use, is able of itself to captivate a young man; but when a good wit shall concur, art and eloquence, fascinating speech, pleasant discourse, sweet gestures, the Sirens themselves cannot so enchant. <sup>1</sup>P. Jovius commends his Italian Countrywomen, to have an excellent faculty in this kind, above all other nations, and amongst them the Florentine Ladies: some prefer Roman and Venetian Courtesans, they have such pleasing tongues, and such <sup>2</sup>elegancy of speech, that they are able to overcome a Saint.

At first ambrose itself was not sweeter,
At last black hellebore was not so bitter.

They are deceitful kisses,

<sup>8</sup> *Quid me mollibus implicas lacertis?

Why dost within thine arms me lap,
And with false kisses me entrap?

They are destructive, and the more the worse :

They are the bane of these miserable Lovers. There be honest kisses I deny not, osculum caritatis, <sup>11</sup> friendly kisses, modest kisses, Vestal-Virgin kisses, officious and ceremonial kisses, &c. Osculi sensus, brachiorum amplexus, kissing and embracing are proper gifts of nature to a man : but these are too lascivious kisses,

More than kisses, or too homely kisses: as those that <sup>4</sup> he spake of, accepturus ab ipsa venere 7 suavia, &c. with such other obscenities that vain Lovers use, which are abominable and pernicious. If, as Peter de Ledesmo, cas. cons. holds, every kiss a man gives his wife after marriage be mortale peccatum, a mortal sin, or that of <sup>5</sup> Hierome, adulter est quisquis in uxorem suam ardentior est amator, or that of Thomas Secund. quæst. 154. artic. 4. contactus et osculam sit mortale peccatum, or that of *Durand. What shall become of them, that often abuse their own wives? But what have I to do with this?

That which I aim at, is to shew you the progress of this burning lust: to epitomize therefore all this which I have hitherto said, with a familiar example out of that elegant Musæus; [101, sq.] observe but with me those amorous proceedings of Leander and Hero. They began first to look one on the other with a lascivious look,

With becks and nods he first began
 To try the wench's mind,
 With becks and nods and smiles again
 An answer he did find.
 And in the dark he took her by the hand,
 And wrung it hard, and sighed grievously,
 And kiss'd her too, and woo'd her as he might,
 With Pity me, sweetheart, or else I die,
 And with such words and gestures as there past,
 He won his Mistress' favour at the last.

The same proceeding is elegantly described by Apollonius in his Argonauticks, betwixt Jason and Medea, by Eustathius in the eleven books of the loves of Ismenias and Ismene, Achilles Tatius betwixt his Clitophon and Leucippe, Chaucer's neat poem of Troilus and Cresseide; and in that notable tale in Petronius [cap. 111, 112.] of a Soldier and a Gentlewoman of Ephesus, that was so famous all over Asia for her chastity, and that mourned for her husband: the Soldier wooed her with such Rhetorick as Lovers use to do, — placitone etiam pugnabis amori? &c., at last, frangi perti-naciam passa est, he got her good will, not only to satisfy his lust,
 'but to hang her dead husband's body on the cross (which he watched instead of the thieves) that was newly stolen away, whilst he wooed her in her Cabin. These are tales you will say, but they have most significant Morals, and do well express those ordinary proceedings of doting Lovers.

Many such allurements there are, Nods, Jests, Winks, Smiles, Wrestlings, Tokens, Favours, Symbols, Letters, Valentines, &c.
 For which cause belike, Godefridus lib. 2. de amor. would not have women learn to write. Many such provocations are used when they come in presence, 'they will and will not.

Malo me Galatea petit, lasciva puella,
 Et fugit ad salices, et se cupit ante videri.†

but if he chance to overtake her, she is most averse, nice and coy,

Denegat et pugnat, sed vult super omnia vinci.<sup>1</sup>

She seems not won, but won she is at length,
In such wars women use but half their strength.<sup>2</sup>

Sometimes they lie open and are most tractable and coming, apt, yielding, and willing to embrace, to take a green gown, with that Shepherdess in Theocritus, Idyll. 27. to let their Coats, &c. to play and dally, at such seasons, and to some, as they spy their advantage; and then coy, close again, so nice, so surly, so demure, you had much better tame a colt, catch or ride a wild horse, than get her favour, or win her love, not a look, not a smile, not a kiss for a kingdom. <sup>3</sup> Aretine's Lucretia was an excellent Artisan in this kind, as she tells her own tale; Though I was by nature and art most beautiful and fair, yet by these tricks I seem'd to be far more amiable than I was. For that which men earnestly seek and cannot attain, draws on their affection with a most furious desire. I had a suitor lov'd me dearly (saith she) and the more he gave me, the more eagerly he wooed me, the more I seem'd to neglect, to scorn him, and (which I commonly gave others), I would not let him see me, converse with me, no not have a kiss. To gull him the more, and fetch him over (for him only I aimed at) I personated mine own servant to bring in a present from a Spanish Count, whilst he was in my company, as if he had been the Count's servant, which he did excellently well perform: <sup>4</sup> Comes de monte Turco, my Lord and Master, hath sent your Ladyship a small present, and part of his hunting, a piece of Venison, a Pheasant, a few Partridges, &c. (all which she bought with her own money) commends his love and service to you, desiring you to accept of it in good part, and he means very shortly to come and see you. Withal she shewed him rings, gloves, scarfs, coronets, which others had sent her, when there was no such matter, but only to circumvent him. <sup>5</sup> By these means (as she concludes) I made the poor Gentleman so mad, that he was ready to spend himself, and venture his dearest blood for my sake. Phulinna in <sup>1</sup> Lucian practised all this long before, as it shall appear unto you by her discourse; for when Diphilus her sweetheart came to see her (as his daily custom was) she frowned upon him, would not vouchsafe him her company, but kissed Lamprias, his corival, at the same time <sup>2</sup> before his face: but why was it? To make him (as she telleth her mother that chid her for it) more jealous; to whetten his love, to come with a greater appetite, and to know that her favour was not so easy to be had. Many other tricks she used besides this (as she there confesseth) for she would fall out with, and anger him of set purpose, pick quarrels upon no occasion, because she would be reconciled to him again. Amantium iræ amoris integratio est, as the old saying is, <sup>3</sup> the falling out of lovers is the renewing of love; and according to that of Aristenetus,<sup>4</sup> iucundiores amorum post injurias deliciae, love is increased by injuries, as the Sunbeams are more gracious after a cloud. And surely this Aphorism is most true; for as Ampelis informs Chrysis in the said Lucian,<sup>5</sup> If a lover be not jealous, angry, waspish, apt to fall out, sigh and swear, he is no true lover. To kiss and coll, hang about her neck, protest, swear, and wish, are but ordinary symptoms, incipientis adhuc et crescentis amoris signa; but if he be jealous, angry, apt to mistake, &c. benè speres licet, sweet sister, he is thine own; yet if you let him alone, humour him, please him, &c. and that he perceive once he hath you sure, without any corival, his love will languish, and he will not care so much for you. Hitherto (saith she) can I speak out of experience; Demophantus, a rich fellow, was a suitor of mine; I seem'd to neglect him, and gave better entertainment to Callides the Painter before his face; principio abiit, verbis me infectatus, at first he went his way all in a chafe, cursing and swearing, but at last he came submitting himself, vowing and protesting that he loved me most dearly, I should have all he had, and that he would kill himself for my sake. Therefore I advise thee (dear sister Chrysis) and all maids, not to use your suitors over kindly; insolentia enim sunt hoc cùm sentiunt, 'twill make them proud and insolent ; but now and then reject them, estrange thyself, et si me audies, semel atque iterum exclude, shut him out of doors once or twice, let him dance attendance ; follow my counsel, and by this means 'you shall make him mad, come off<sup>2</sup> roundly, stand to any conditions, and do whatsoever you will have him. These are the ordinary practices ; yet, in the said Lucian, Melissa, methinks, had a trick beyond all this ; for when her suitor came coldly on, to stir him up, she writ one of his corrivals' names and her own in a paper, Melissa amat Hermotimum, Hermotimus Melissam,<sup>3</sup> causing it to be stuck upon a post, for all gazers to behold, and lost it in the way where he used to walk ; which when the silly novice perceived, statim ut legit credidit, [he] instantly apprehended it was so, [and] came raving to me, &c.,<sup>4</sup> and so, when I was in despair of his love, four months after I recovered him again. Eugenia drew Timocles for her Valentine, and wore his name a long time after in her bosom ; Camæna singled out Pamphilus to dance, at Myson's wedding (some say) for there she saw him first ; Felicianus overtook Cælia by the high-way side, offered his service, thence came further acquaintance, and thence came love. But who can repeat half their devices ; what Aretine experienced, what conceited Lucian, or wanton Aristænetus ? They will deny and take, stiffly refuse, and yet earnestly seek the same, repel to make them come with more eagerness, fly from [you,] if you follow, but if averse, as a shadow they will follow you again, fugientem sequitur, sequentem fugit ;<sup>5</sup> with a regaining retrait, a gentle reluctancy, a smiling threat, a pretty pleasant peevishness, they will put you off, and have a thousand such several enticements. For as he saith,

Non est forma satis, nec quæ vult bella videri,
Debet vulgari more placere sibi.
Dicta, sales, lusus, sermones, gratia, risus, Vincunt naturæ candidioris opus.

'Tis not enough though she be fair of hue,
For her to use this vulgar compliment :
But pretty toys and jests, and saws and smiles,
Are far beyond what beauty can attempt.

It is reported of Decius and Valerianus, those two notorious persecutors of the Church, that when they could enforce a young Christian by no means (as <sup>2</sup> Hierome records) to sacrifice to their Idols, by no torments or promises, they took another course to tempt him: they put him into a fair Garden, and set a young Courtesan to dally with him; <sup>3</sup> she took him about the neck and kissed him, and that which is not to be named, manibusque attricare, &c. and all those enticements which might be used, that whom Torments could not, Love might batter and beleaguer. But such was his constancy, she could not overcome, and when this last engine would take no place, they left him to his own ways. At <sup>4</sup> Berkeley in Gloucester-shire, there was in times past a Nunnery (saith Gualterus Mapes, an old Historiographer, that lived 400 years since) of which there was a noble and a fair Lady Abbess: Godwin, that subtil Earl of Kent travelling that way (seeking not her but hers) leaves a Nephew of his, a proper young Gallant (as if he had been sick) with her, till he came back again, and gives the young man charge so long to counterfeit, till he had deflowered the Abbess, and as many besides of the Nuns as he could, and leaves him withal rings, jewels, girdles, and such toys to give them still, when they came to visit him. The young man willing to undergo such a business, played his part so well, that in short space he got up most of their bellies, and when he had done, told his Lord how he had sped; <sup>5</sup> his Lord makes instantly to the Court, tells the King how such a Nunnery was become a bawdy house, procures a visitation, gets them to be turned out, and begs the lands to his own use.<sup>1</sup> This story I do therefore repeat, that you may see of what force these enticements are, if they be opportunely used, and how hard it is even for the most averse and sanctified souls to resist such allurements. John Major, in the life of John the Monk, that lived in the days of Theodosius, commends the Hermit to have been a man of singular continency, and of a most austere life; but one night by chance the Devil came to his Cell in the habit of a young market wench that had lost her way, and desired for God's sake some lodging with him. <sup>2</sup> The old man let her in, and after some common conference of her mishap, she began to inveigle him with lascivious talk and jests, to play with his beard, to kiss him, and do worse, till at last she overcame him. As he went to address himself to that business, she vanished on a sudden, and the Devils in the air laughed him to scorn. Whether this be a true story, or a tale, I will not much contend, it serves to illustrate this which I have said.

Yet were it so, that these of which I have hitherto spoken, and such like enticing baits be not sufficient, there be many others, which will of themselves intend this passion of burning lust, amongst which, dancing is none of the least; and it is an engine of such force, I may not omit it. Incitamentum libidinis, Petrarch calls it, the spur of lust, a <sup>3</sup> circle of which the Devil himself is the centre. <sup>4</sup> Many women that use it, have come dishonest home, most indifferent, none better. <sup>5</sup> Another terms it, the companion of all filthy delights and enticements, and 'tis not easily told what inconveniences come by it, what scurrile talk, obscene actions, and many times such monstrous gestures, such lascivious motions, such wanton tunes, meretricious kisses, homely embracings, that it will make the spectators mad. When that Epitomizer of <sup>1</sup> Trogus had to the full described and set out King Ptolemy's riot, as a chief engine and instrument of his overthrow, he adds tympanum et tripudium, fiddling and dancing; the King was not a spectator only, but a principal actor himself. A thing nevertheless frequently used, and part of a Gentlewoman's bringing up, to sing, dance, and play on the Lute, or some such instrument, before she can say her Pater Noster, or ten Commandments. 'Tis the next way their Parents think, to get them husbands, they are compelled to learn, and by that means, <sup>2</sup> incestos amores de tenero meditantur ungue. 'Tis a great allurement as it is often used, and many are undone by it. Thais, in Lucian, inveigled Lamprias in a dance.<sup>3</sup> Herodias so far pleased Herod, that she made him swear to give her what she would ask, John Baptist's head in a platter. <sup>4</sup> Robert Duke of Normandy, riding by Falais, spied Arletta a fair maid, as she danced on a green, and was so much enamoured with the object, that <sup>5</sup> he must needs lie with her that night. Owen Tudor won Queen Katharine's affection in a dance, falling by chance with his head in her lap.<sup>6</sup> Who cannot parallel these stories out of his experience? Speucippus, a noble gallant in that <sup>7</sup> Greek Aristænetus, seeing Panareta a fair young Gentlewoman dancing by accident, was so far in love with her, that for a long time after he could think of nothing but Panareta: he came raving home full of Panareta. Who would not admire her, who would not love her, that should but see her dance as I did? O admirable, O divine, Panareta! I have seen old and new Rome, many fair Cities, many proper women, but never any like to Panareta, they are dross, dowedies all to Panareta! O how she danced, how she tript, how she turn'd, with what a grace! happy is that man that shall enjoy her! O most incomparable, only, Panareta! When Xenophon in Symposio or Banquet, had discoursed of love, and used all the engines that might be devised, to move Socrates amongst the rest, to stir him the more, he shuts up all with a pleasant interlude or dance of Dionysus and Ariadne. <sup>1</sup>*First Ariadne dressed like a bride came in and took her place; by and by Dionysus entered, dancing to the Musick. The spectators did all admire the young man's carriage; and Ariadne herself was so much affected with the sight, that she could scarce sit. After a while Dionysus beholding Ariadne, and incensed with love, bowing to her knees, embraced her first, and kissed her with a grace; she embraced him again, and kissed him with like affection, &c. as the dance required: but they that stood by and saw this, did much applaud and commend them both for it. And when Dionysus rose up, he raised her up with him, and many pretty gestures, embraces, kisses, and love compliments passed between them; which when they saw fair Bacchus and beautiful Ariadne so sweetly and so unfeignedly kissing each other, so really embracing, they swore they loved indeed, and were so inflamed with the object, that they began to rouse up themselves, as if they would have flown. At the last when they saw them still so willing embracing, and now ready to go to the Bride-chamber, they were so ravished with it, that they that were unmarried, swore they would forthwith marry, and those that were married, called instantly for their horses, and galloped home to their wives. What greater motive can there be than this burning lust? What so violent an oppugner? Not without good cause therefore so many general Councils condemn it, so many Fathers abhor it, so many grave men speak against it. Use not the company of a woman, saith Siracides, ix. 4, that is a singer or a dancer; neither hear, lest you be taken in her craftiness. In circo non tam cernitur quam discitur libido. <sup>2</sup>Hædus holds, lust in Theatres is not seen, but learned. Gregory Nazianzen, that eloquent Divine (<sup>3</sup>as he relates the story himself) when a noble friend of his solemnly invited him, with other Bishops, to his daughter Olympia's wedding,* refused to come: 'for it is absurd to see an old gouty Bishop sit amongst dancers, he held it unfit to be a spectator, much less an actor. Nemo [fere] saltat sobrius, Tully writes,<sup>2</sup> he is not a sober man that danceth; for some such reason (belike) Domitian forbade the Roman Senators to dance, and for that fact removed many of them from the Senate.<sup>3</sup> But these, you will say, are lascivious and Pagan dances, 'tis the abuse that causeth such inconvenience, and I do not well therefore to condemn, speak against, or innocently to accuse the best and pleasantest thing (so 'Lucian calls it) that belongs to mortal men. You mis-interpret, I condemn it not; I hold it notwithstanding an honest disport, a lawful recreation, if it be opportune, moderately and soberly used: I am of Plutarch's mind, <sup>4</sup>that which respects pleasure alone, honest recreation, or bodily exercise, ought not to be rejected and contemned: I subscribe to 'Lucian, 'tis an elegant thing, which cheereth up the mind, exerciseth the body, delights the spectators, which teacheth many comely gestures, equally affecting the ears, eyes, and soul itself. Sallust<sup>5</sup> discommends singing and dancing in Sempronia, not that she did sing and dance, but that she did it in excess, 'tis the abuse of it: and Gregory's refusal doth not simply condemn it, but in some folks. Many will not allow men and women to dance together, because it is a provocation to lust: they may as well, with Lycurgus and Mahomet, cut down all Vines, forbid the drinking of wine, for that it makes some men drunk.

I say of this, as of all other honest recreations, they are like fire, good and bad, and I see no such inconvenience, but that they may so dance, if it be done at due times, and by fit persons: and conclude with Wolfongus <sup>7</sup>Hider, and most of our modern divines: Si decoræ, graves, verecundæ, plena luce bonorum virorum et matronarum honestarum, tempestivè fiant, probari possunt, et

There is a time to mourn, a time to dance, Eccles. 3. 4.* Let them take their pleasures then, and as <sup>1</sup>he said of old, young men and maids flourishing in their age, fair and lovely to behold, well attired, and of comely carriage, dancing a Greek galliard, and as their dance required, kept their time, now turning, now tracing, now apart, now altogether, now a courtesy, then a caper, &c. and it was a pleasant sight, to see those pretty knots, and swimming figures. The Sun and Moon (some say) dance about the earth, the three upper Planets about the Sun as their centre, now stationary, now direct, now retrograde, now in apogæo, then in perigæo, now swift, then slow, occidental, oriental, they turn round, jump and trace, ♀ and ♂ about the Sun with those thirty three Maculæ or Bourbonian planets, circa Solem saltantes Citharædum, saith Fromundus. Four Medicean stars dance about Jupiter, two Austrian about Saturn, &c. and all (belike) to the musick of the Spheres. Our greatest Councillors, and staid Senators, at some times dance, as David before the Ark, 2 Sam. 6. 14, Miriam, Exod. 15. 20, Judith, 15. 13, (though the Devil hence perhaps hath brought in those bawdy Bacchanals) and well may they do it. The greatest Soldiers, as <sup>2</sup>Quintilianus, <sup>3</sup>Æmilius Probus, <sup>4</sup>Cælius Rhodiginus, have proved at large, still use it in Greece, Rome, and the most worthy Senators, cantare, saltare. Lucian, Macrobius, Libanus, Plutarch, Julius, Pollux, Athenæus, have written just tracts in commendation of it. In this our age it is in much request in those Countries, as in all civil Common-wealths, as Alexander ab Alexandro, lib. 4. cap. 10. et lib. 2. cap. 25, hath proved at large, <sup>5</sup>amongst the Barbarians themselves nothing so precious; all the World allows it.

<sup>7</sup>Plato, in his Common-wealth, will have dancing-schools to be maintained, that young folks might meet, be acquainted, see one another, and be seen; nay more, he would have them dance naked, and scoffs at them that laugh at it. But Eusebius, præpar. Evangel. lib. 1. cap. 11, and Theodoret, lib. 9. curat. græc. affect. worthily lash him for it; and well they might: for as one saith, the very sight of naked parts, causeth enormous, exceeding concupiscences, and stirs up both men and women to burning lust. There is a mean in all things: this is my censure in brief; dancing is a pleasant recreation of body and mind, if sober and modest (such as our Christian dances are) if tempestively used; a furious motive to burning lust, if, as by Pagans heretofore, unchastely abused. But I proceed.

If these allurements do not take place, for <sup>2</sup> Simierus, that great master of dalliance, shall not behave himself better, the more effectually to move others, and satisfy their lust, they will swear and lie, promise, protest, forge, counterfeit, brag, bribe, flatter and dissemble of all sides. 'Twas Lucretia's counsel in Aretine, si vis amicâ frui, promitte, finge, jura, perjura, jacta, simula, mentire, and they put it well in practice, as Apollo to Daphne,— and almost decrepit) he would make her his wife. The Maid by chance made her Mother acquainted with the business, who being an old Fox, well experienced in such matters, told her daughter, now ready to yield to his desire, that he meant nothing less, for dost thou think he will ever care for thee, being a poor wench, <sup>1</sup> that may have his choice of all the beauties in the City, one Noble by birth, with so many talents, as young, better qualified, and fairer than thyself? Daughter, believe him not: the Maid was abasht, and so the matter broke off. When Jupiter wooed Juno first (*Lilius Giraldu*s relates it out of an old Comment on Theocritus)<sup>2</sup> the better to effect his suit, he turned himself into a Cuckoo, and spying her one day walking alone, separated from the other Goddesses, caused a tempest suddenly to arise, for fear of which she fled to shelter: Jupiter to avoid the storm likewise flew into her lap, in virginis Junonis gremium devolavit, whom Juno for pity covered in her <sup>3</sup>Apron. But he turned himself forthwith into his own shape, began to embrace and offer violence unto her, sed illa matris metu abnuebat, but she by no means would yield, donec pollicitus connubium obtinuit, till he vowed and swore to marry her, and then she gave consent. This fact was done at Thornax hill, which ever after was called Cuckoo hill, and in perpetual remembrance there was a Temple erected to Juno Teleia in the same place. So powerful are fair promises, vows, oaths, and protestations. It is an ordinary thing too in this case to belie their age, which widows usually do, that mean to marry again, and bachelors too sometimes, to say they are younger than they are. Charmides, in the said Lucian, loved Philematium, an old Maid of five and forty years, <sup>5</sup>she swore to him she was but two and thirty next December. But to dissemble in this kind, is familiar of all sides, and often it takes.

and nothing so frequent as to belie their estates, to prefer their suits, and to advance themselves. Many men, to fetch over a young woman, widows, or whom they love, will not stick to crack, forge, and feign, anything comes next, bid his boy fetch his cloak, rapier, gloves, jewels, &c. in such a chest, scarlet-golden-tissue breeches, &c. when there is no such matter; or make any scruple to give out, as he did in Petronius, [cap. 101.] that he was Master of a Ship, kept so many servants, and to personate their part the better, take upon them to be gentlemen of good houses, well descended and allied, hire apparel at brokers, some Scavenger or pricklouse Tailors to attend upon them for the time, swear they have great possessions, <sup>2</sup>bribe, lie, cog, and foist, how dearly they love, how bravely they will maintain her, like any Lady, Countess, Duchess, or Queen; they shall have gowns, tires, jewels, coaches, and caroches, choice diet, as old Volpone courted Celia in the Comedy, when as they are no such men, not worth a groat, but mere sharkers, to make a fortune, to get their desire, or else pretend love to spend their idle hours, to be more welcome, and for better entertainment. The conclusion is, they mean nothing less.

matters is forgiven by the gods. If promises, lies, oaths, and protestations will not avail, they fall to bribes, tokens, gifts, and such like feats. Plurimus auro conciliatur amor;<sup>1</sup> as Jupiter corrupted Danaë with a golden shower, and Liber Ariadne with a lovely Crown (which was afterwards translated into the Heavens, and there for ever shines;) they will rain Chickens, Florins, Crowns, Angels, all manner of coins and stamps in her lap. And so must he certainly do that will speed, make many feasts, banquets, invitations, send her some present or other every foot.<sup>2</sup> Summo studio parentur epulæ (saith <sup>3</sup>Hædus) et crebræ fiant largitiones, he must be very bountiful and liberal, seek and sue, not to her only, but to all her followers, friends, familiars, fiddlers, panders, parasites, and household-servants; he must insinuate himself, and surely will, to all, of all sorts, messengers, porters, carriers; no man must be unrewarded, or unrespected. I had a suitor (saith <sup>4</sup>Aretine's Lucretia) that when he came to my house, flung gold and silver about, as if it had been chaff. Another suitor I had was a very cholerick fellow, but I so handled him, that for all his fuming, I brought him upon his knees. If there had been an excellent bit in the market, any novelty, fish, fruit, or fowl, muskadel, or malmsey, or a cup of neat wine in all the city, it was presented presently to me, though never so dear, hard to come by, yet I had it: the poor fellow was so fond at last, that I think, if I would, I might have had one of his eyes out of his head. A third suitor was a merchant of Rome, and his manner of wooing was with <sup>5</sup>exquisite musick, costly banquets, poems, &c. I held him off till at length he protested, promised, and swore pro virginitate regno me donaturum, I should have all he had, house, goods and lands, pro concubitu solo. <sup>6</sup>Neither was there ever any Conjuror, I think, to charm his spirits, that used such attention, or mighty words, as he did exquisite phrases; or General of any army, so many stratagems to win a city, as he did

When nothing else will serve, the last refuge is their tears. Hæc scripsi (testor amorem) mixta lacrimis et suspiriis, 'twixt tears and sighs, I write this (I take love to witness), saith <sup>4</sup>Chelidonia to Philonius. Lumina quæ modò fulmina, jam flumina lacrimarum, those burning torches are now turned to floods of tears. Aretine's Lucretia, when her sweetheart came to Town, <sup>5</sup>wept in his bosom, that he might be persuaded those tears were shed for joy of his return. Quartilla, in Petronius, [cap. 17.] when nought would move, fell a weeping, and, as Balthazar Castilio paints them out, <sup>6</sup>To these crocodile's tears, they will add sobs, fiery sighs, and sorrowful countenance, pale colour, leanness, and if you do but stir abroad, these fiends are ready to meet you at every turn, with such a sluttish, neglected habit, dejected look, as if they were now ready to die for your sake; and how saith he, shall a young novice thus beset, escape? But believe them not.

Every young man she sees and likes, hath as much interest, and shall as soon enjoy her as thyself. On the other side, which I have said, men are as false, let them swear, protest, and lie;

[What they tell you, they've told a thousand girls.]

They love some of them those eleven thousand Virgins at once,<sup>3</sup> and make them believe each particular, he is besotted on her, or love one till they see another, and then her alone: like Milo's wife in Apuleius, [Met.] lib. 2., [23.] si quem conspexerit speciosæ formæ juvenem, venustate ejus sumitur, et in eum animum intorquet. 'Tis their common compliment in that case, they care not what they swear, say, or do. One while they slight them, care not for them, rail down right and scoff at them, and then again they will run mad, hang themselves, stab and kill, if they may not enjoy them. Henceforth therefore, let not Maids believe them. These tricks and counterfeit passions are more familiar with women, finem hic dolori faciet aut vitæ dies, miserere amantis, quoth Phædra to Hippolytus. Joessa, in <sup>5</sup>Lucian, told Pythias a young man, to move him the more, that if he would not have her, she was resolved to make away herself. There is a Nemesis, and it cannot choose but grieve and trouble thee, to hear that I have either strangled or drowned myself for thy sake. Nothing so common to this sex, as oaths, vows, and protestations, and as I have already said, tears, which they have at command; for they can so weep, that one would think their very hearts were dissolved within them, and would come out in tears, their eyes are like rocks, which still drop water, diariæ lacrimæ et sudoris in Care not for women's tears, I counsel thee,

——nulla viro juranti fœmina credat,<sup>4</sup>

They teach their eyes as much to weep as see.

And as much pity is to be taken of a woman weeping, as of a goose going barefoot. When Venus lost her son Cupid, she sent a Crier about to bid every one that met him take heed.<sup>4</sup>

And by those indirect means many a man is overcome, and precipitated into this malady, if he take not good heed. For these Bawds first, they are every where so common, and so many, that as he said of old Croton, <sup>8</sup>omnes hic aut captantur, aut captant, [all here] either inveigle, or be inveigled, we may say of most of our Cities, there be so many professed, cunning bawds in them. Besides, bawdry is become an art, or a liberal science, as Lucian calls it;<sup>1</sup> and there be such tricks and subtilties, so many nurses, old women, Panders, letter-carriers, beggars, Physicians, Friars, Confessors, employed about it, that nullus tradere stilus sufficiat,<sup>2</sup> one saith,

'Tis the last and common refuge to use an assistant, such as that Catanean Philippa was to Joan Queen of Naples, a <sup>4</sup> Bawd's help, an old woman in the business, as Myrrha did when she doted on Cinyras, and could not compass her desire, the old Jade her Nurse was ready at a pinch, dic, inquit, opemque Me sine ferre tibi———et in hoc mea (pone timorem) Sedulitas erit apta tibi, fear it not, if it be possible to be done, I will effect it: non est mulieri mulier insuperabilis, as Cælestina said, let him or her be never so honest, watched, and reserved, 'tis hard but one of these old women will get access: and scarce shall you find, as Austin observes, in a Nunnery a maid alone, if she cannot have egress, before her window you shall have an old woman, or some prating Gossip tell her some tales of this Clerk, and that Monk, describing or commending some young Gentleman or other unto her. Such tricks you shall have in many places, and among the rest it is ordinary in Venice, and in the Island of Zante,<sup>1</sup> for a man to be Bawd to his own wife. No sooner shall you land or come on shore, but as the Comical Poet hath it,*

These white Devils<sup>3</sup> have their Panders, Bawds, and Factors, in every place, to seek about and bring in customers, to tempt and way-lay novices, and silly travellers. And when they have them once within their clutches, as Ægidius Maserius in his comment upon Valerius Flaccus describes them, ‘with promises and pleasant discourse, with gifts, tokens, and taking their opportunities, they lay nets which Lucretia cannot avoid, and baits that Hippolytus himself would swallow; they make such strong assaults and batteries, that the Goddess of Virginity cannot withstand them: give gifts and bribes to move Penelope, and with threats able to terrify Susanna. How many Proserpinas with those catchpoles doth Pluto take! These are the sleepy rods with which their souls touched descend to hell; this the glew or lime with which the wings of the mind once taken cannot fly away; the Devil's ministers to allure, entice, &c. Many young men and maids without all question are inveigled by these Eumenides and their associates. But these are trivial and well known. The most sly, dangerous, and cunning bawds, are your knavish Physicians, Empiricks, Mass-Priests, Monks, <sup>1</sup> Jesuits, and Friars. Though it be against Hippocrates' oath,<sup>2</sup> some of them will give a dram, a promise to restore maidenheads, and do it without danger, make an abort if need be ; keep down their paps, hinder conception, procure lust, make them able with Satyrions, and now and then step in themselves. No Monastery so close, house so private, or prison so well kept, but these honest men are admitted to censure and ask questions, to feel their pulse beat at their bed side, and all under pretence of giving Physick. Now as for Monks, Confessors, and Friars, as he said,

That Stygian Pluto dares not tempt or do, either for himself, to satisfy his own lust, for another, if he be hired thereto, or both at once, having such excellent means. For under colour of visitation, auricular confession, comfort, and penance, they have free egress and regress, and corrupt God knows how many. They can use trades some of them, practise Physick, use exorcisms, &c.

<sup>4</sup> For ther as wont to walken was an Elf,
There walketh now the Limitour himself,

Ther is non other Incubus but he.

<sup>5</sup> In the Mountains betwixt Dauphiné and Savoy, the Friars persuaded the good wives to counterfeit themselves possessed, that their husbands might give them free access, and were so familiar in those days with some of them, that, as one <sup>6</sup> observes, wenches could not sleep in their beds for Necromantick Friars : and the good Abbess in Boccaccio may in some sort witness, that rising betimes mistook and put on the Friar's breeches instead of her veil or hat.

You have heard the story, I presume, of <sup>1</sup>Paulina, a chaste matron in Hegesippus,<sup>2</sup> whom one of Isis' Priests did prostitute to Mundus, a young Knight, and made her believe it was their God Anubis. Many such pranks are played by our Jesuits, sometimes in their own habits, sometimes in others, like soldiers, courtiers, citizens, scholars, gallants, and women themselves. Proteus-like in all forms, and disguises, they go abroad in the night, to inescat<sup>3</sup> and beguile young women, or to have their pleasure of other men's wives : and if we may believe 'some relations, they have wardrobes of several suits in their Colleges for that purpose. Howsoever in publick they pretend much zeal, seem to be very holy men, and bitterly preach against adultery, fornication, there are no verier Bawds or whoremasters in a Country. <sup>5</sup>Whose soul they should gain to God, they sacrifice to the Devil. But I spare these men for the present.

The last battering engines are Philters, Amulets, Spells, Charms, Images, and such unlawful means ; if they cannot prevail of themselves by the help of Bawds, Panders, and their adherents, they will fly for succour to the Devil himself. I know there be those that deny the Devil can do any such thing, (Crato, epist. 2. lib. med. and many Divines) there is no other fascination than that which comes by the eyes, of which I have formerly spoken ; and if you desire to be better informed, read Camerarius, oper. subcis. cent. 2. c. 5. It was given out of old, that a Thessalian wench had bewitched King Philip to dote upon her, and by Philters enforced his love ; but when Olympias, the Queen, saw the Maid of an excellent beauty, well brought up, and qualified : these, quoth she, were the Philters which inveigled King Philip ;<sup>6</sup> those the true charms, as Henry to Rosamund, and the rest of the crew. As for herbs and Philters, I could never skill of them, the sole Philter that ever I used, was kissing and embracing, by which alone I made men rave like beasts stupified, and compelled them to worship me like an Idol. In our time 'tis a common thing, saith Erastus in his book de Lamiis, for witches to take upon them the making of these Philters, <sup>1</sup> to force men and women to love and hate whom they will, to cause tempests, diseases, &c. by Charms, Spells, Characters, Knots.

St. Hierome proves that they can do it, (as in Hilarion's life, epist. lib. 3.) he hath a story of a young man, that with a Philter made a Maid mad for the love of him, which Maid was afterward cured by Hilarion. Such instances I find in John Nider,<sup>3</sup> Formicar. lib. 5. cap. 5. Plutarch records of Lucullus, that he died of a Philter,<sup>4</sup> and that Cleopatra used Philters to iuveigle Antony, amongst other allurements.<sup>5</sup> Eusebius reports as much of Lucretius the Poet.<sup>6</sup> Panormitan. lib. 4. de gest. Alphonsi, hath a story of one Stephen, a Neapolitan Knight, that by a Philter was forced to run mad for love. But of all others, that which <sup>7</sup> Petrarch, epist. famil. lib. 1. ep. 5. relates of Charles the Great, is most memorable. He foolishly doted upon a woman of mean favour and condition, many years together, wholly delighting in her company, to the great grief and indignation of his friends and followers. When she was dead, he did embrace her corpse, as Apollo did the bay-tree for his Daphne, and caused her Coffin (richly embalmed and decked with Jewels) to be carried about with him, over which he still lamented. At last a venerable Bishop that followed his Court, prayed earnestly to God (commiserating his Lord and Master's case) to know the true cause of this mad passion, and whence it proceeded; it was revealed to him in fine, that the cause of the Emperor's mad love lay under the dead woman's tongue. The Bishop went hastily to the carkass, and took a small ring thence; upon the removal the Emperor abhorred the Corpse, and instead <sup>1</sup> of it fell as furiously in love with the Bishop, he would not suffer him to be out of his presence: which when the Bishop perceived, he flung the ring into the midst of a great Lake, where the King then was. From that hour the Emperor, neglecting all his other houses, dwelt at <sup>2</sup> Aix, built a fair house in the midst of the Marsh, to his infinite expense, and a <sup>3</sup> Temple by it, where after he was buried, and in which City all his posterity ever since use to be crowned. Marcus the Heretick is accused by Irenæus <sup>4</sup> to have inveigled a young Maid by this means; and some writers speak hardly of the Lady Katherine <sup>5</sup> Cobham, that by the same Art she circumvented Humphrey Duke of Gloucester to be her husband. Sicinius Æmilianus summoned <sup>6</sup> Apuleius to come before Claudius Maximus, Proconsul of Africa, that he, being a poor fellow, had bewitched by Philters Pudentilla, an ancient rich Matron, to love him, and being worth so many thousand sesterces, to be his wife. Agrippa, lib. 1. cap. 48, occult. philos. attributes much in this kind to Philters, Amulets, Images: and Salmuth, com. in Pancirol. Tit. 10. de Horol. Leo Afer, lib. 3, saith, 'tis an ordinary practice at Fez, in Africa, præstigiatores ibi plures, qui cogunt amores et concubitus: as skilful all out as that Hyperborean Magician, of whom Cleodemus in <sup>7</sup> Lucian tells so many fine feats, perform'd in this kind. But Erastus, Wierus, and others, are against it; they grant indeed such things may be done, but (as Wierus discourseth, lib. 3. de Lamiis, cap. 37,) not by Charms, Incantations, Philters, but the Devil himself; lib. 5. cap. 2, he contends as much; so doth Freitagius, noc. med. cap. 74, Andreas Cisalpinus, cap. 5, and so much Sigismundus Schereczius, cap. 9. de hirco nocturno, proves at large. <sup>8</sup> Unchaste women by the help of these witches, the Devil's kitchen-maids, have their Loves brought to them in the night, and carried back again by a phantasm flying in the Air in the likeness of a Goat.

MEMB. III.

SUBJECT. I.—Symptoms or signs of Love-Melancholy, in Body, Mind, good, bad, &c.

SYMPTOMS are either of Body or Mind; of body, Paleness, Leanness, Dryness, &c. <sup>1</sup> Palleat omnis amans, color hic est aptus amanti, as the Poet describes lovers: fecit amor maciem,<sup>2</sup> love causeth leanness. <sup>3</sup> Avicenna, de Ilishi, c. 33, makes hollow eyes, dryness, symptoms of this disease, to go smiling to themselves, or acting as if they saw or heard some delectable object. Valleriola, lib. 3. observat. cap. 7, Laurentius, cap. 10, Ælianus Montaltus, de Her. amore, Langius, epist. 24. lib. 1, epist. med., deliver as much, corpus exsanguè pallet, corpus gracile, oculi cavi, lean, pale,

They pine away, and look ill with waking, cares, sighs, want of appetite, &c. A reason of all this, <sup>8</sup> Jason Pratensis gives, because of the distraction of the spirits, the Liver doth not perform his part, nor turns the aliment into blood as it ought; and for that cause

the members are weak for want of sustenance, they are lean and pine, as the herbs of my garden do this month of May, for want of rain. The Green-sickness therefore often happeneth to young women, a Cachexia, or an evil habit to men, besides their ordinary sighs, complaints and lamentations, which are too frequent. As drops from a Still, doth Cupid's fire provoke tears from a true Lover's eyes.

———ut occluso stillat ab igne liquor,

<sup>1</sup>The mighty Mars did oft for Venus shriek, Privily moistening his horid cheek
With womanish tears,———

with many such like passions. When Chariclea was enamoured on Theagenes, as <sup>3</sup>Heliodorus sets her out, she was half distracted, and spake she knew not what, sighed to herself, lay much awake, and was lean upon a sudden: and when she was besotted on her son-in-law, <sup>4</sup>pallor deformis, marcentes oculi, &c. she had ugly paleness, hollow eyes, restless thoughts, short wind, &c. Euryalus, in an Epistle sent to Lucretia his Mistress, complains amongst other grievances, tu mihi et somni, et cibi usum abstulisti, thou hast taken my stomach and my sleep from me. So he describes it aright;

That lene he wex, and drie as is a shaft,
His eyen holwe, and grisly to behold,
His hewe salwe, and pale as ashen cold,
And solitary he was and ever alone,
And waking all the night, making his mone.*

Theocritus Idyll. 2. [81 sq.] makes a fair maid of Delphi in love with a young man of Minda, confess as much,

Ut vidi, ut insanii, ut animus mihi male affectus est,
Miseræ mihi forma tabescebat, neque amplius pompam
Ullam curabam, aut quando domum redieram
Novi, sed me ardens quidam morbus consumebat,

Animo errat, et quidvis obvium loquitur, vigilas absque causa sustinet, et succum corporis subito amisit. <sup>4</sup> Apuleius. [Met. x. 210.] <sup>5</sup> Chaucer, in the Knight's Tale, [C. T. 1363-1368.]

No sooner seen I had, than mad I was,
 My beauty fail'd, and I no more did care
 For any pomp, I knew not where I was,
 But sick I was, and evil I did fare;
 I lay upon my bed ten days and nights,
 A skeleton I was in all men's sights.

All these passions are well expressed by <sup>1</sup> that Heroical Poet in the person of Dido.

At non infelix animi Phœnissa, nec unquam
 Solvitur in somnos, oculisve aut pectore noctem
 Accipit; ingeminant curæ, rursusque resurgens
 Sævit amor, &c.—

Unhappy Dido could not sleep at all,
 But lies awake, and takes no rest:
 And up she gets again, whilst care and grief,
 And raging love torments her breast.

Accius Sannazarius Ecloga 2, de Galatea, in the same manner feigns his Lycoris <sup>2</sup> tormenting herself for want of sleep, sighing, sobbing, and lamenting; and Eustathius his Ismenias much troubled, and <sup>3</sup> panting at heart, at the sight of his mistress, he could not sleep, his bed was thorns. <sup>4</sup> All make leanness, want of appetite, want of sleep ordinary Symptoms, and by that means they are brought often so low, so much altered and changed, that as <sup>5</sup> he jested in the Comedy, one can scarce know them to be the same men.

Attenuant juvenum vigilatæ corpora noctes,
 Curaque et immenso qui fit amore dolor.<sup>6</sup>

Many such Symptoms there are of the body to discern lovers by,

——quis enim bene celet amorem?<sup>7</sup>

Can a man, saith Solomon, Prov. 6. 27, carry fire in his bosom, and not burn? it will hardly be hid, though they do all they can to hide it, it must out,

'Twas Antiphanes the Comedian's observation of old, Love and Drunkenness cannot be concealed, celare alia possis, hæc præter duo, vini potum, &c. words, looks, gestures, all will betray them : but two of the most notable signs are observed by the Pulse and Countenance. When Antiochus the son of Seleucus was sick for Stratonice his Mother-in-law, and would not confess his grief, or the cause of his disease, Erasistratus the Physician found him by his Pulse and Countenance to be in love with her,<sup>2</sup> because that when she came in presence, or was named, his pulse varied, and he blushed besides. In this very sort was the love of Charicles, the son of Polydes, discovered by Panacius the Physician, as you may read the story at large in <sup>3</sup>Aristænetus. By the same signs Galen brags that he found out Justa, Boethius the Consul's wife, to dote on Pylades the Player, because at his name still she both altered Pulse and Countenance, as <sup>4</sup>Poliarchus did at the name of Argenis. Franciscus Valesius, l. 3. controv. 13. med. contr. denies there is any such pulsus amatorius,<sup>5</sup> or that love may be so discerned ; but Avicenna confirms this of Galen out of his experience, lib. 3. Fen. 1, and Gordonius, cap. 20 ; <sup>6</sup>their pulse, he saith, is inordinate and swift, if she go by whom he loves, Langius Epist. 24. lib. 1. med. Epist. Nevisanus lib. 4. numer. 66. syl. nuptialis, Valescus de Taranta, Guianerius, Tract. 15. Vallerioli sets down this for a Symptom,<sup>7</sup> difference of Pulse, neglect of business, want of sleep, often sighs, blushings, when there is any speech of their Mistress, are manifest signs. But amongst the rest, Josephus Struthius, that Polonian, in the fifth Book, cap. 17, of his Doctrine of Pulses, holds that this, and all other passions of the mind, may be discovered by the Pulse. <sup>8</sup>And if you will know, saith he, whether the men suspected be such or such, touch their arteries, &c. And in his fourth Book, Chap. 14, he speaks of this particular Pulse, <sup>9</sup>Love makes an unequal pulse, &c. he gives instance of a Gentlewoman,<sup>10</sup> a Patient of his, whom by this means he found to be

are troubled with palpitation of heart upon the like occasion, cor proximum ori, saith <sup>3</sup> Aristænetus, their heart is at their mouth, leaps, these burn and freeze, (for love is fire, ice, hot, cold, itch, fever, frenzy, pleurisy, what not?) they look pale, red, and commonly blush at their first congress ; and sometimes, through violent agitation of spirits, bleed at nose, or when she is talked of : which very sign <sup>4</sup> Eustathius makes an argument of Ismene's affection, that, when she met her Sweetheart by chance, she changed her countenance to a Maiden-blush. 'Tis a common thing amongst Lovers, as <sup>5</sup> Arnulphus, that merry conceited Bishop, hath well expressed in a facete Epigram of his,

Alternò facies sibi dat responsa rubore,

Their faces answer, and by blushing say,

How both affected are, they do bewray.

But the best conjectures are taken from such symptoms as appear when they are both present ; all their speeches, amorous glances, actions, lascivious gestures, will bewray them, they cannot contain themselves, but that they will be still kissing. <sup>6</sup> Stratocles the Physician upon his Wedding day, when he was at dinner, nihî prius sorbillavit, quam tria basia puellæ pangeret, could not eat his meat for kissing the Bride, &c. They cannot, I say, contain themselves, they will be still not only joining hands, kissing, but embracing, treading on their toes, &c. diving into their bosoms, and that libenter, et cum delectatione,<sup>2</sup> as <sup>3</sup>Philostratus confesseth to his Mistress; and <sup>4</sup>Lamprias in Lucian, mamillas premens, per sinum clam dextrâ, &c. feeling their paps, and that scarce honestly sometimes: as the old man in the <sup>5</sup>Comedy well observed of his son, Non ego te videbam manum huic puellæ in sinum inserere? Did not I see thee put thy hand into her bosom? Go to, with many such love tricks. Juno in Lucian, deorum dial 6, complains to Jupiter of Ixion,<sup>6</sup> he looked so attentively on her, and sometimes would sigh and weep in her company, and when I drank by chance, and gave Ganymede the cup, he would desire to drink still in the very cup that I drank of, and in the same place where I drank, and would kiss the cup, and then look steadily on me, and sometimes sigh, and then again smile. If it be so they cannot come near to dally, have not that opportunity, familiarity, or acquaintance, to confer and talk together; yet, if they be in presence, their eyes will bewray them: Ubi amor ibi oculus, as the common saying is, Where I look, I like; and where I like, I love; but they will lose themselves in her looks.

Alter in alterius jactantes lumina vultum,
Quærebant taciti noster ubi esset amor.<sup>7</sup>

They cannot look off whom they love, they will impregnare eam ipsis oculis, deflower her with their eyes, be still gazing, staring, stealing faces, smiling, glancing at her, as <sup>8</sup>Apollo on Leucothoe, the Moon on her <sup>9</sup>Endymion, when she stood still in Caria, and at Latmos caused her Chariot to be stayed. They must all stand and admire, or, if she go by, look after her as long as they can see her; she is animæ auriga, as Anacreon calls her, they cannot go by her door or window, but, as an Adamant, she draws their eyes to it, though she be not there present, they must needs glance that

—— Fixis ardens obtutibus hæret ; <sup>3</sup>

So she will do by him, drink to him with her eyes, nay drink him up, devour him, swallow him, as Martial's Mamurra is remembered to have done :

Inspexit molles pueros, oculisque comedit, <sup>4</sup> &c.

There is a pleasant story to this purpose in Navigat. Vertom. lib. 3. cap. 5. The Sultan of Sana's wife in Arabia, because Vertomannus was fair and white, could not look off him, from Sun-rising to Sun-setting she could not desist, she made him one day come into her chamber, geminæ horæ spatio intuebatur, non à me unquam, aciem oculorum avertēbat, me observans veluti Cupidinem quendam, for two hours' space she still gazed on him. A young man in Lucian fell in love with Venus' picture, he came every morning to her Temple, and there continued all day long <sup>6</sup> from Sun-rising to Sun-set, unwilling to go home at night, sitting over against the Goddess' Picture, he did continually look upon her, and mutter to himself I know not what. If so be they cannot see them whom they love, they will still be walking and waiting about their Mistress' doors, taking all opportunity to see them ; as in Longus Sophista, Daphnis and Chloe, two Lovers, were still hovering at one another's gates, he sought all occasions to be in her company, to hunt in Summer, and catch Birds in the Frost about her Father's house in the Winter, that she might see him, and he her. A King's Palace was not so diligently attended, saith Aretine's Lucretia, as my house was when I lay in Rome, the porch and street was ever full of some, walking or riding, on set purpose to see me, their eye was still upon my window as they passed by, they could not choose but look back to my house when they were past, and sometimes hem, or cough, or take some impertinent occasion to speak aloud, that I might look out and observe them. 'Tis so in other places, 'tis common to every Lover, 'tis all his felicity to be with her, to talk with her, he is never well but in her company, and will walk <sup>1</sup> seven or eight times in a day through the street where she dwells, and make sleeveless errands to see her, plotting still where, when, and how to visit her,

And though he is to meet her by compact, and that very shortly, perchance to-morrow, yet loath to depart, he'll take his leave again and again, and then come back again, look after, and shake his hand, wave his hat afar off. Now gone, he thinks it long till he see her again, and she him, the clocks are surely set back, the hour's past.

She is ill at ease, and sick till she see him again, peevish in the mean time, discontent, heavy, sad, and why comes he not? where is he? why breaks he promise? why tarries he so long? sure he is not well; sure he hath some mischance, sure he forgets himself and me, with infinite such. And then confident again, up she gets, out she looks, listens and enquires, hearkens, kens ;<sup>1</sup> every man afar off is sure he, every stirring in the street, now he is there, that's he, malè auroræ, malè soli dicit, dejeratque, &c. the longest day that ever was ; so she raves, restless and impatient ; for amor non patitur moras,<sup>2</sup> love brooks no delays : the time's quickly gone that's spent in her company, the miles short, the way pleasant, all weather is good whilst he goes to her house, heat or cold, though his teeth chatter in his head, he moves not, wet or dry, 'tis all one ; wet to the skin, he feels it not, cares not at least for it, but will easily endure it, and much more, because it is done with alacrity, and for his Mistress' sweet sake ; let the burthen be never so heavy, Love makes it light. <sup>3</sup>Jacob served seven years for Rachel, and it was quickly gone, because he loved her. None so merry, if he may happily enjoy her company, he is in heaven for a time ; and if he may not, dejected in an instant, solitary, silent, he departs weeping, lamenting, sighing, complaining.

But the Symptoms of the mind in Lovers are almost infinite, and so diverse, that no Art can comprehend them : though they be merry sometimes, and rapt beyond themselves for joy, yet most part, Love is a plague, a torture, an hell, a bitter-sweet passion at last ; <sup>4</sup>amor melle et felle est fecundissimus, gustum dat dulcem et amarum. 'Tis suavis amarities,<sup>5</sup> dolentia delectabilis, hilare tormentum ;

For in a word, the Spanish Inquisition is not comparable to it ; a torment and execution it is, as he calls it in the Poet, an unquenchable fire, and what not ? <sup>8</sup>From it, saith Austin, arise biting cares, perturbations, passions, sorrows, fears, suspicions, discontents,

Lamentatio, lacrimæ perennes,
Languor, anxietas, amaritudo;
Aut si triste magis potest quid esse,
Hos tu das comites, Neæra, vitæ.

These be the companions of lovers, and the ordinary symptoms, as the Poet repeats them.

<sup>2</sup> In amore hæc insunt vitia,
Suspiciones, inimicitiae, audaciae,
Bellum, pax rursum, &c.

<sup>3</sup> Insomnia, ærumna, error, terror, et fuga, Incogitantia, excors immodestia,
Petulantia, cupiditas, et malevolentia;
Inhæret etiam aviditas, desidia, injuria,
Inopia, contumelia, et dispendum, &c.

In love these vices are: suspicions,
Peace, war, and impudence, detractions,
Dreams, cares, and errors, terrors and affrights,
Immodest pranks, devices, sleights and flights,
Heart-burnings, wants, neglects, desire of wrong, Loss continual, expense, and hurt among.

Every Poet is full of such Catalogues of Love Symptoms; but fear and sorrow may justly challenge the chief place. Though Hercules de Saxonidæ, cap. 3. Tract. de melanch. will exclude fear from Love Melancholy, yet I am otherwise persuaded. 'Res est solliciti plena timoris amor.' 'Tis full of fear, anxiety, doubt, care, peevishness, suspicion, it turns a man into a woman, which made Hesiod belike, put <sup>5</sup> Fear and Paleness Venus' daughters, because fear and love are still linked together. Moreover, they are apt to mistake, amplify, too credulous sometimes, too full of hope and confidence, and then again very jealous, unapt to believe or entertain any good news. The Comical Poet hath prettily painted out this passage amongst the rest, in a <sup>7</sup> Dialogue betwixt

That which I so earnestly desire, I more suspect and fear. M. Get you home, and send for her to be your wife. Æ. What now, a wife, now father, &c.* These doubts, anxieties, suspicions, are the least part of their torments; they break many times from passions to actions, speak fair, and flatter, now most obsequious and willing, by and by they are averse, wrangle, fight, swear, quarrel, laugh, weep: and he that doth not so by fits, Lucian holds, is not thoroughly touched with this Load-stone of Love. So their actions and passions are intermixt, but of all other passions, Sorrow hath the greatest share; <sup>2</sup> Love to many is bitterness itself; rem amaram, Plato calls it,<sup>3</sup> a bitter potion, an agony, a plague.

Eripite hanc pestem perniciemque mihi,

Vos, O dii Averrunci, solvite me his curis!* O ye Gods, free me from these cares and miseries! out of the anguish of his Soul, <sup>2</sup>Theocles prays. Shall I say, most part of a Lover's life is full of agony, anxiety, fear, and grief, complaints, sighs, suspicions, and cares (heigh-ho, my heart is wo), full of silence and irksome solitariness?

He is wholly animated from her breath, his soul lives in her body, <sup>2</sup>sola claves habet interitus et salutis,<sup>3</sup> she keeps the keys of his life ; his fortune ebbs and flows with her favour, a gracious or bad aspect turns him up or down,

Mens mea lucescit, Lucia, luce tuâ.

Howsoever his present state be pleasing or displeasing, 'tis continue so long as he<sup>4</sup> loves, he can do nothing, think of nothing but her ; desire hath no rest, she is his Cynosure, his Hesperus et Vesper, his morning and evening Star, his Goddess, his Mistress, his life, his soul, his every thing, dreaming, waking, she is always in his mouth : his heart, eyes, ears, and all his thoughts are full of her. His Laura, his Victorina, his Columbina, Flavia, Flaminia, Celia, Delia, or Isabella (call her how you will) she is the sole object of his senses, the substance of his soul, nidulus animæ suæ, he magnifies her above measure, [he is] totus in illa, full of her, can breathe nothing but her. I adore Melibœa saith Love-sick <sup>5</sup>Callisto, I believe in Melibœa, I honour, admire, and love, my Melibœa : his soul was sowcd, imparadised, imprisoned in his Lady. When <sup>6</sup>Thais took her leave of Phædria, ——mi Phædria, et tu numquid aliud vis?

Sweetheart (she said) will you command me any further service? He readily replied, and gave this in charge,

——egone quid velim?

Dies noctesque me ames, me desideres,
Me somnies, me expectes, de me cogites,
Me speres, me te oblectes, mecum tota sis,
Meus fac sis postremò animus, quandò ego sum tuus.

Dost ask (my dear) what service I will have?
To love me day and night is all I crave,
To dream on me, to expect, to think on me,
Depend and hope, still covet me to see,
Delight thyself in me, be wholly mine,
For know, my love, that I am wholly thine.

But all this needed not, you will say, if she affect once, she will be his, settle her love on him, on him alone,

she can, she must think and dream of nought else but him, continually of him, as did Orpheus on his Eurydice.

Te dulcis conjux, te solo in littore mecum,
Te veniente die, te discedente canebar.<sup>2</sup>

On thee, sweet wife, was all my song,
Morn, Evening, and all along.

And Dido upon her Aeneas ;

Multa viri virtus, et plurima currit imago.<sup>4</sup>
And ever and anon she thinks upon the man
That was so fine, so fair, so blythe, so debonaire.

Clitophon, in the first book of Achilles Tatius, complaineth how that his Mistress Leucippe tormented him much more in the night than in the day. <sup>5</sup>For all day long he had some object or other to distract his senses, but in the night all ran upon her : all night long he lay awake, and could think of nothing else but her, he could not get her out of his mind ; towards morning, sleep took a little pity on him, he slumbered a while, but all his dreams were of her.

The same complaint Euryalus makes to his Lucretia, <sup>8</sup>day and night I think of thee, I wish for thee, I talk of thee, call on thee, look for thee, hope for thee, delight myself in thee, day and night I love thee.

O happy day that shall restore thee to my sight. In the mean time he raves on her; her sweet face, eyes, actions, gestures, hands, feet, speech, length, breadth, height, depth, and the rest of her dimensions, are so surveyed, measured, and taken, by that Astrolabe of Phantasy, and that so violently sometimes, with such earnestness and eagerness, such continuance, so strong an imagination, that at length he thinks he sees her indeed; he talks with her, he embraceth her, Ixion-like, pro Junone nubem, a cloud for Juno, as he said,<sup>4</sup> nihil præter Leucippen cerno, Leucippe mihi perpetuo in oculis, et animo versatur,<sup>5</sup> I see and meditate of nought but Leucippe. Be she present or absent, all is one;

as he that is bitten with a mad dog, thinks all he sees dogs, dogs in his meat, dogs in his dish, dogs in his drink: his Mistress is in his eyes, ears, heart, in all his senses. Valleriola had a Merchant his Patient in the same predicament: and <sup>8</sup> Ulrucus Moliitor, out of Austin, hath a story of one, that through vehemency of his love passion, still thought he saw his Mistress present with him, she talked with him, et commiscere cum eâ vigilans videbatur, still embracing him.

Now if this passion of Love can produce such effects, if it be pleasantly intended, what bitter torments shall it breed, when it is with fear and continual sorrow, suspicion, care, agony, as

Mount Gargarus hath not so many stems,
As Lover's breast hath grievous wounds,
And linked cares, which love compounds.

When the King of Babylon would have punished a Courtier of his, for loving of a young Lady of the Royal blood, and far above his fortunes, <sup>2</sup> Apollonius in presence by all means persuaded to let him alone ; for to love, and not enjoy, was a most unspeakable torment, no tyrant could invent the like punishment ; as a gnat at a candle, in a short space he would consume himself. For Love is a perpetual <sup>3</sup> flux, angor animi, a warfare, militat omni amans,<sup>4</sup> a grievous wound is love still, and a Lover's heart is Cupid's quiver, a consuming <sup>5</sup> fire, <sup>6</sup> accede ad hanc, ignem, &c. an inextinguishable fire.

Which water could not quench,
Nor Herb, nor Art, nor Magic spells
Could quell, nor any drench,

<sup>3</sup> Sic candentia colla, sic patens frons,

So thy white neck, Neæra, me poor soul
Doth scorch, thy cheeks, thy wanton eyes that roll:
Were it not for my dropping tears that hinder,
I should be quite burnt up forthwith to cinder.

This fire strikes like lightning, which made those old Grecians paint Cupid in many of their Temples<sup>4</sup> with Jupiter's thunder-bolts in his hands; for it wounds, and cannot be perceived how, whence it came, where it pierced,

This fiery vapour rageth in the veins,
And scorcheth entrails as when fire burns
An house, it nimbly runs along the beams,
And at the last the whole it overturns.

relates out of Plato, how that Empedocles the Philosopher was present at the cutting up of one that died for love, <sup>1</sup> his heart was combust, his liver smoky, his lungs dried up, insomuch that he verily believed his soul was either sod or roasted, through the vehemency of Love's fire. Which belike made a modern writer of amorous Emblems express Love's fury by a pot hanging over the fire, and Cupid blowing the coals. As the heat consumes the water, so doth Love dry up his radical moisture. Another compares Love to a melting torch, which stood too near the fire.

<sup>3</sup> *Sic quo quis propior suæ puellæ est,
Hoc stultus propior suæ ruinæ est.*

The nearer he unto his mistress is,
The nearer he unto his ruin is.

So that to say truth, as <sup>4</sup> Castilio describes it, the beginning, middle, end of Love is nought else but sorrow, vexation, agony, torment, irksomeness, wearisomeness, so that to be squalid, ugly, miserable, solitary, discontent, dejected, to wish for death, to complain, rave, and to be peevish, are the certain signs, and ordinary actions of a Love-sick person. This continual pain and torture makes them forget themselves, if they be far gone with it, in doubt, despair of obtaining, or eagerly bent, to neglect all ordinary business.

Now to this end and purpose, if there be any hope of obtaining his suit, to prosecute his cause, he will spend himself, goods, fortunes for her, and though he lose and alienate all his friends, be threatened, be cast off, and disinherited; for as the Poet saith, <sup>3</sup> amori quis legem det? though he be utterly undone by it, disgraced, go a begging, yet for her sweet sake, to enjoy her, he will willingly beg, hazard all he hath, goods, lands, shame, scandal, fame, and life itself.

Undoubtedly this may be pronounced of them all, they are very slaves, drudges for the time, mad-men, fools, dizzards, <sup>3</sup> atrabilarii, beside themselves, and as blind as Beetles. Their <sup>4</sup> dotage is most eminent, amare simul et sapere ipsi Jovi non datur, as Seneca holds, <sup>5</sup> Jupiter himself cannot love and be wise both together; the very best of them, if once they be overtaken with this passion, the most staid, discreet, grave, generous and wise, otherwise able to govern themselves, in this commit many absurdities, many indecorums, unbefitting their gravity and persons.

Against her filthy lust she doth contend.
And whither go I, what am I about?
And God forbid! yet doth it in the end.

Again,

Et modo desperat, modo vult tentare, pudetque,
Et cupit, et quid agat non invenit, &c.<sup>2</sup>

With raging lust she burns, and now recalls
Her vow, and then despairs, and when 'tis past,
Her former thoughts she'll prosecute in haste,
And what to do she knows not at the last.

She will and will not, abhors, and yet, as Medea did, doth it,

——— Trahit invitam nova vis, aliudque cupido,

[Beguiling love, and passion, what a gate
You've led me!]

The major part of Lovers are carried headlong like so many brute beasts, reason counsels one way, thy friends, fortunes, shame, disgrace, danger, and an ocean of cares that will certainly follow; yet this furious lust precipitates, counterpoiseth, weighs down on the other; though it be their utter undoing, perpetual infamy, loss, yet they will do it, and become at last insensati, void of sense; degenerate into dogs, hogs, asses, brutes; as Jupiter into a Bull, Apuleius an Ass, Lycaon a Wolf, Tereus a Lap-wing, <sup>5</sup> Callisto a Bear, Elpenor and Gryllus into Swine by Circe. For what else may we think those ingenious Poets to have shadowed in their witty fictions and Poems, but that a man once given over to his lust (as <sup>6</sup> Fulgentius interprets that of Apuleius, Alciat. of Tereus) is no better than a beast.

Their blindness is all out as great, as manifest as their weakness and dotage, or rather an inseparable companion, an ordinary sign of it. <sup>2</sup> Love is blind, as the saying is, Cupid's blind, and so are all his followers.

Quisquis amat ranam, ranam putat esse Dianam.<sup>3</sup>

Every Lover admires his Mistress, though she be very deformed of her self, ill-favoured, wrinkled, pimpled, pale, red, yellow, tanned, tallow-faced, have a swollen Juggler's platter-face, or a thin, lean, chitty-face, have clouds in her face, be crooked, dry, bald, goggle-ey'd, blear-ey'd, or with staring eyes, she looks like a squis'd <sup>4</sup> cat, hold her head still awry, heavy, dull, hollow-eyed, black or yellow about the eyes, or squint-eyed, sparrow-mouthed, Persean hook-nosed, have a sharp Fox nose, a red nose, China flat great nose, nare simo patuloque, a nose like a promontory, gubber-tushed,<sup>5</sup> rotten teeth, black, uneven, brown teeth, beetle-browed, a Witch's beard, her breath stink all over the room, her nose drop winter and summer, with a Bavarian poke<sup>6</sup> under her chin, a sharp chin, lave-eared,<sup>7</sup> with a long crane's neck, which stands awry too, pendulis mammis, her dugs like two double jugs, or else no dugs, in the other extreme, bloody-faln<sup>8</sup> fingers, she have filthy long unpared nails, scabb'd hands or wrists, a tanned skin, a rotten carkass, crooked back, she stoops, is lame, splay-footed, as slender in the middle as a Cow in the waist, gouty legs, her ankles hang over her shoes, her feet stink, she breed lice, a mere changeling, a very monster, an auf imperfect, her whole complexion savours, an harsh voice, incondite gesture, vile gait, a vast virago, or an ugly Tit, a slug, a fat fustilugs, a truss, a long lean raw-bone, a skeleton, a sneaker, (si qua latent meliora puta)<sup>9</sup>

Most of your Lovers are of his humour and opinion. She is nulla secunda,<sup>6</sup> a rare creature, a Phoenix, the sole commandress of his thoughts, Queen of his desires, his only delight: as <sup>7</sup> Triton now feelingly sings, that Love-sick Sea-God.

Quæ benè superas lac, et lilium,

Fine Lydia, my Mistress, white and fair,
The milk, the Lily do not thee come near;
The Rose so white, the Rose so red to see,
And Indian Ivory comes short of thee.

Such a description our English Homer makes of a fair Lady:

<sup>3</sup> *That Emelie, that fairer was to sene,
Than is the lilie upon his stalke grene:
And fresher than the May with floures newe,
For with the rose-colour strofe hire heuwe;
I nott which was the finer of hem two.*

In this very phrase <sup>4</sup>Polyphemus courts Galatea.

Candidior folio nivei, Galatea, ligustri,
Floridior prato, longâ procerior alno,
Splendidior vitro, tenero lascivior hædo, &c.
Mollior et cygni plumis, et lacte coacto.

Whiter Galatea than the white withy-wind,<sup>5</sup>
Fresher than a field, higher than a tree,
Brighter than glass, more wanton than a kid,
Softer than swan's down, or ought that may be.

So she admires him again in that conceited Dialogue of Lucian, which Joannes Secundus, an Elegant Dutch modern Poet, hath translated into verse.<sup>6</sup> When Doris, and those other Sea-Nymphs, upbraided her with her ugly mis-shapen Lover Polyphemus; she replies, they speak out of envy and malice;

Et planè invidia huc mera vos stimulare videtur,

To thy thinking she is a most loathsome creature, and as when a country-fellow discommended once that exquisite picture of Helena, made by Zeuxis,<sup>1</sup> for he saw no such beauty in it; Nicomachus a love-sick spectator replied, Sume tibi meos oculos, et deam existimabis, take mine eyes, and thou wilt think she is a Goddess, dote on her forthwith, count all her vices, virtues; her imperfections, infirmities, absolute and perfect. If she be flat-nosed, she is lovely; if hook-nosed, kingly; if dwarfish and little, pretty; if tall, proper and man-like, our brave British Boadicea; if crooked, wise; if monstrous, comely; her defects are no defects at all, she hath no deformities. Immo nec ipsum amicæ stercus fœtet, though she be nasty, fulsome, as Sostratus's bitch, or Parmeno's sow: thou hadst as lieve have a snake in thy bosom, a toad in thy dish, and callest her witch, devil, hag, with all the filthy names thou canst invent; he admires her, on the other side, she is his Idol, Lady, Mistress,<sup>2</sup> Venerilla,<sup>3</sup> Queen, the quintessence of beauty, an Angel, a Star, a Goddess.

her drudge, prisoner, bond-man, what not? He composeth himself wholly to her affections, to please her; and, as Æmilia said, makes himself her lackey; all his cares, actions, all his thoughts, are subordinate to her will and commandment; her most devote, obsequious, affectionate, servant and vassal. For Love (as <sup>1</sup>Cyrus in Xenophon well observed) is a mere tyranny, worse than any disease, and they that are troubled with it, desire to be free, and cannot, but are harder bound than if they were in iron chains. What greater captivity or slavery can there be (as <sup>2</sup>Tully expostulates) than to be in love? Is he a free man over whom a woman domineers, to whom she prescribes Laws, commands, forbids what she will herself? that dares deny nothing she demands; she asks, he gives; she calls, he comes; she threatens, he fears; nequissimum hunc servum puto, I account this man a very drudge. And as he follows it, <sup>3</sup>Is this no small servitude for an enamorite to be every hour combing his head, stiffening his beard, perfuming his hair, washing his face with sweet waters, painting, curling, and not to come abroad but sprucely crowned, decked and apparelled? Yet these are but toys in respect to go to the Barber, Baths, Theatres, &c. he must attend upon her wherever she goes, run along the streets by her doors and windows to see her, take all opportunities, sleeveless errands, disguise, counterfeit shapes, and as many forms as Jupiter himself ever took; and come every day to her house (as he will surely do if he be truly enamoured) and offer her service, and follow her up and down from room to room, as Lucretia's suitors did, he cannot contain himself, but he will do it, he must and will be where she is, sit next her, still talking with her. <sup>4</sup>If I did but let my glove fall by chance (as the said Aretine's Lucretia brags) I had one of my suitors, nay two or three at once ready to stoop and take it up, and kiss it, and with a low congee deliver it unto me: if I would walk, another was ready to sustain me by the arm; a third to provide fruits, Pears, Plums, Cherries, or whatsoever I would eat or

And these are his exercises betwixt comb and glass, Madrigals, Elegies, &c., these his cogitations till he see her again. But all this is easy and gentle, and the least part of his labour and bondage, no hunter will take such pains for his Game, Fowler for his sport, or Soldier to sack a City, as he will for his Mistress' favour.

Another at Ficinum in like passion, when his Mistress by chance (thinking no harm I dare swear) bade him go hang, the next night at her doors hanged himself. <sup>3</sup>Money (saith Xenophon) is a very acceptable and welcome guest, yet I had rather give it my dear Cleinias, than take it of others, I had rather serve him, than command others, I had rather be his drudge, than take my ease, undergo any danger for his sake, than live in security. For I had rather see Cleinias than all the world besides, and had rather want the sight of all other things, than him alone; I am angry with the night and sleep that I may not see him, and thank the light and Sun because they shew me my Cleinias; I will run into the fire for his sake, and if you did but see him, I know that you likewise would run with me.  Or rather servant, I am thine to use.
 It shall not grieve me to the snowy hills,

Callicratides, in <sup>2</sup> Lucian, breaks out in this passionate speech, O God of heaven, grant me this life for ever to sit over against my Mistress, and to hear her sweet voice, to go in and out with her, to have every other business common with her ; I would labour when she labours, sail when she sails ; he that hates her should hate me ; and if a tyrant kill her, he should kill me ; if she should die, I would not live, and one grave should hold us both.

Abrocomas in <sup>4</sup> Aristænetus makes the like petition for his Delphis,

'Tis the same strain which Theagenes used to his Chariclea, So that I may but enjoy thy love, let me die presently : Leander to his Hero, when he besought the Sea waves to let him go quietly to his Love, and kill him coming back.

'Tis the common humour of them all, to contemn death, to wish for death, to confront death in this case, quippe quæis nec fera, nec ignis, neque præcipitum, nec fretum, nec ensis, neque laqueus gravia videntur, 'tis their desire (saith Tyrius<sup>7</sup>) to die.

Though a thousand dragons or devils kept the gates, Cerberus himself, Sciron and Procrustes lay in wait, and the way as dangerous, as inaccessible as hell, through fiery flames and over burning coulter, he will adventure for all this. And as <sup>1</sup>Peter Abelard lost his testicles for his Heloise, he will (I say) not venture an incision, but life itself. For how many gallants offered to lose their lives for a night's lodging with Cleopatra in those days! And in the hour and moment of death, 'tis their sole comfort to remember their dear Mistress, as <sup>2</sup>Zerbino slain in France, and Brandimart in Barbary; as Arcite did his Emely.

 Dusk'd been his eyes, and faded is his breath,
 But on his lady yet casteth he his eye,
 His last word was, mercy Emely.
 His spirit changed, and out went there,
 Whither I cannot tell, ne where.

<sup>4</sup>When Captain Gobrias by an unlucky accident had received his death's wound, heu me miserum! exclaimat, miserable man that I am (instead of other devotions) he cries out, Shall I die before I see Rhodanthe my Sweetheart? Sic amor mortem (saith mine Author) aut quicquid humanitus accidit, aspernatur, so Love triumphs, contemns, insults over death itself. Thirteen proper young men lost their lives for that fair Hippodamia's sake, the daughter of Cenomaus, King of Elis: when that hard condition was proposed of death or victory, they made no account of it, but courageously for love died, till Pelops at last won her by a sleight. <sup>5</sup>As many gallants desperately adventured their dearest blood for Atalanta the daughter of Schœneus, in hope of marriage, all vanquished and overcome, till Hippomenes by a few golden apples happily obtained his suit. Perseus of old fought with a Sea-monster for Andromeda's sake; and our S. George freed the King's daughter of Sabea (the Golden Legend is mine Author) that was exposed to a Dragon, by a terrible Combat. Our Knights Errant, and the Sir Lancelots of these days, I hope will adventure as much for Ladies' favours, as the Squire of Dames, Knight of the Sun, Sir Bevis of Southampton, or that renowned Peer

He is a very dastard, a coward, a block and a beast, that will not do as much, but they will sure, they will; for 'tis an ordinary thing for these inamoratos of our times, to say and do more, to stab their arms, carouse in blood,<sup>2</sup> or as that Thessalian Thero, that bit off his own thumb, provocans rivalem ad hoc æmulandum, to make his Corrival do as much. 'Tis frequent with them to challenge the field for their Lady and Mistress' sake, to run a tilt,

How many doting Lovers upon the like occasion might say the same! But these are toys in respect, they will hazard their very souls for their Mistress' sake.

<sup>4</sup> Cœlum diis ego non suum inviderem,
Sed sortem mihi dii meam inviderent.

I would not envy their prosperity,
The Gods should envy my felicity.

Another as earnestly desires to behold his Sweetheart, he will adventure and leave all this, and more than this, to see her alone.

If all my mischiefs were recompensed,
And God would give me what I requested,

Which doth my heart in prison captive keep.

But who can reckon up the dotage, madness, servitude and blindness, the foolish phantasms and vanities of Lovers, their torments, wishes, idle attempts?

Yet for all this, amongst so many irksome, absurd, troublesome symptoms, inconveniences, phantastical fits and passions, which are usually incident to such persons, there be some good and graceful qualities in Lovers, which this affection causeth. As it makes wise men fools, so many times it makes fools become wise; <sup>6</sup> it makes base fellows become generous, cowards courageous, as Cardan

- As if their souls at once they would have rent
Out of their breasts, that streams of blood did trail
Adown, as if their springs of life were spent,
That all the ground with purple blood was sprent,
And all their armour stained with bloody gore ;
Yet scarcely once to breathe would they relent.
So mortal was their malice and so sore,
That both resolved (than yield) to die before.

Every base Swain in love, will dare to do as much for his dear Mistress' sake. He will fight and fetch <sup>1</sup> Argivum Clypeum,<sup>2</sup> that famous buckler of Argos, to do her service, adventure at all, undertake any enterprize. And as Serranus the Spaniard, then Governor of Sluys, made answer to Marquess Spinola, if the enemy brought 50,000 Devils against him, he would keep it. The nine Worthies, Oliver and Roland, and forty dozen of Peers are all in him, he is all metal, armour of proof, more than a man, and in this case improved beyond himself. For, as <sup>3</sup> Agatho contends, a true Lover is wise, just, temperate and valiant. <sup>4</sup> I doubt not therefore, but if a man had such an Army of Lovers (as Castilio supposeth) he might soon conquer all the world, except by chance he met with such another Army of Inamoratos to oppose it. <sup>5</sup> For so perhaps they might fight as that fatal Dog, and fatal Hare in the Heavens, course one another round, and never make an end. Castilio thinks Ferdinand King of Spain would never have conquered Granada had not Queen Isabel and her Ladies been present at the siege; <sup>6</sup> it cannot be expressed what courage the Spanish Knights took, when the Ladies were present, a few Spaniards overcame a multitude of Moors. They will undergo any danger whatsoever, as Sir Walter Manny in Edward the Third's time, stuck full of Ladies' favours, fought like a Dragon. For solī amantes, as Plato holds,<sup>7</sup> pro amicis mori appetunt, only Lovers will die for their friends, and in their Mistress' quarrel. And for that cause he would have women follow the Camp, to be spectators and encouragers of noble actions: upon such an occasion, the Squire of Dames himself, Sir Lancelot, or Sir Tristram,

All manner of civility, decency, compliment, and good behaviour, plus salis et leporis, polite graces, and merry conceits. Boccaccio hath a pleasant tale to this purpose, which he borrowed from the Greeks, and which Beroaldus hath turned into Latin, Bebelius in verse, of Cimon and Iphigenia. This Cimon was a fool, a proper man of person, and the Governor of Cyprus' son, but a very ass; insomuch that his father, being ashamed of him, sent him to a Farm-house he had in the Country to be brought up; where by chance, as his manner was, walking alone, he espied a gallant young Gentlewoman named Iphigenia, a Burgomaster's daughter of Cyprus, with her maid, by a brook side in a little thicket, fast asleep in her smock, where she had newly bathed herself. When <sup>5</sup> Cimon saw her, he stood leaning on his staff, gaping on her immoveable, and in a maze. At last he fell so far in love with the glorious object, that he began to rouse himself up, to bethink what he was, would needs follow her to the City, and for her sake began to be civil, to learn to sing and dance, to play on Instruments, and got all those Gentlemen-like qualities and compliments in a short space, which his friends were most glad of. In brief, he became, from an Idiot and a Clown, to be one of the most complete Gentlemen in Cyprus, did many valorous exploits, and all for the love of Mistress Iphigenia. In a word, I may say thus

Their best robes, ribbons, chains, Jewels, Lawns, Linnens, Laces, Spangles, must come on, præterquam res patitur student elegantiae, they are beyond all measure coy, nice, and too curious on a sudden: 'tis all their study, all their business, how to wear their clothes neat, to be polite and terse, and to set out themselves. No sooner doth a young man see his Sweetheart coming, but he smugs up himself, pulls up his cloak now fallen about his shoulders, ties his garters, points, sets his band, cuffs, slicks<sup>3</sup> his hair, twires<sup>4</sup> his beard, &c. Amongst other good qualities an amorous fellow is endowed with, he must learn to sing and dance, play upon some instrument or other, as without all doubt he will, if he be truly touched with this Loadstone of Love. For as <sup>4</sup>Erasmus hath it, Musicam docet amor et Poesin, Love will make them Musicians, and to compose Ditties, Madrigals, Elegies, Love Sonnets, and sing them to several pretty tunes, to get all good qualities may be had. <sup>5</sup>Jupiter perceived Mercury to be in love with Philologia, because he learned languages, polite speech, (for Suadela herself was Venus' daughter, as some write) Arts and Sciences, quò virgini placeret, all to ingratiate himself, and please his Mistress. incite them. <sup>1</sup> Who, saith Castilio, would learn to play, or give his mind to Musick, learn to dance, or make so many rhymes, Love-songs, as most do, but for women's sake, because they hope by that means to purchase their good wills, and win their favour? We see this daily verified in our young women and wives, they that being maids took so much pains to sing, play, and dance, with such cost and charge to their Parents, to get those graceful qualities, now being married, will scarce touch an instrument, they care not for it. Constantine, agricult. lib. 11. cap. 18. makes Cupid himself to be a great dancer, by the same token as he was capering amongst the Gods, <sup>2</sup> he flung down a bowl of Nectar, which distilling upon the white Rose, ever since made it red: and Callistratus, by the help of Dædalus, about Cupid's Statue<sup>3</sup> made a many<sup>4</sup> of young Wenchies still a dancing, to signify belike that Cupid was much affected with it, as without all doubt he was. For at his and Psyche's wedding, the Gods being present to grace the Feast, Ganymede filled Nectar in abundance (as <sup>5</sup> Apuleius describes it) Vulcan was the Cook, the Hours made all fine with Roses and Flowers, Apollo played on the harp, the Muses sang to it, sed suavi Musicæ superingressa Venus saltavit, but his Mother Venus danced to his and their sweet content. Witty Lucian<sup>6</sup> in that Pathetical Love passage, or pleasant description of Jupiter's stealing of Europa, and swimming from Phœnicia to Crete, makes the Sea calm, the winds hush, Neptune and Amphitrite riding in their Chariot to break the waves before them, the Tritons dancing round about, with every one a Torch, the Sea-Nymphs half naked, keeping time on Dolphins' backs, and singing Hymenæus, Cupid nimbly tripping on the top of the waters, and Venus herself coming after in a shell, strewing Roses and Flowers on their heads. Praxiteles in all his pictures of Love, feigns Cupid ever smiling, and looking upon dancers; and in Saint Mark's Garden in Rome (whose work I know not) one of the most delicious pieces is a many<sup>7</sup> of <sup>8</sup> Satyrs dancing about a wench asleep.

So that dancing still is, as it were, a necessary appendix to love matters. Young Lasses are never better pleased, than when as upon an Holiday after Even-song, they may meet their Sweet-hearts, and dance about a May-pole, or in a Town-Green under a shady Elm. Nothing so familiar in <sup>1</sup> France, as for Citizens' wives and maids to dance a round in the streets, and often too, for want of better instruments, to make good Musick of their own voices, and dance after it. Yea, many times this Love will make old men and women, that have more toes than teeth, dance, — John come kiss me now, mask and mum; for Comus and Hymen love masks, and all such merriments above measure, will allow men to put on women's apparel in some cases, and promiscuously to dance, young and old, rich and poor, generous and base, of all sorts. Paulus Jovius taxeth Augustine Niphus the Philosopher, <sup>2</sup> for that being an old man, and a publick Professor, a father of many children, he was so mad for the love of a young maid (that which many of his friends were ashamed to see) an old gouty fellow, yet would dance after Fiddlers. Many laughed him to scorn for it, but this omnipotent love would have it so.

* Hyacinthino bacillo

Love hasty with his purple staff did make Me follow, and the dance to undertake.

And 'tis no news this, no indecorum: for why? a good reason may be given of it. Cupid and Death met both in an Inn, and being merrily disposed, they did exchange some arrows from either quiver; ever since young men die, and oftentimes old men dote.

And who can then withstand it? If once we be in love, young or old, though our teeth shake in our heads, like Virginal Jacks, or stand parallel asunder like the arches of a bridge, there's no remedy, we must dance trenchmore for a need, over tables, chairs, and stools, &c. And princium prancum <sup>5</sup> is a fine dance. Plutarch,

Sympos. 1. quæst. 5, doth in some sort excuse it, and telleth us moreover in what sense, Musica docet amor, licet prius fuerit rudis, how Love make them that had no skill before, learn to sing and dance; he concludes, 'tis only that power and prerogative Love hath over us. <sup>1</sup>Love (as he holds) will make a silent man speak, a modest man most officious; dull, quick; slow, nimble; and that which is most to be admired, an hard, base, untractable churl, as fire doth iron in a Smith's forge, free, facile, gentle, and easy to be entreated. Nay, 'twill make him prodigal in the other extreme, and give an <sup>2</sup>hundred sterces for a night's lodging, as they did of old to Lais of Corinth, or <sup>3</sup>ducentia drachmarum millia pro unica nocte,<sup>4</sup> as Mundus to Paulina, spend all his fortunes (as too many do in like case) to obtain his suit. For which cause many compare Love to wine, which makes men jovial and merry, frolick and sad, whine, sing, dance, and what not.

But above all the other Symptoms of Lovers, this is not lightly to be over-passed, that likely of what condition soever, if once they be in love, they turn to their ability, Rhymers, Ballet-makers, and Poets. For, as Plutarch saith, <sup>5</sup>they will be Witnesses and Trumpeters of their Paramours' good parts, bedecking them with verses and commendatory songs, as we do statues with gold, that they may be remembered and admired of all. Ancient men will dote in this kind sometimes as well as the rest; the heat of love will thaw their frozen affections, dissolve the ice of age, and so far enable them, though they be sixty years of age above the girdle, to be scarce thirty beneath. Jovianus Pontanus makes an old fool rhyme, and turn Poetaster to please his Mistress.

be at Church. We have a pretty story to this purpose in <sup>1</sup> Westmonasteriensis, an old Writer of ours (if you will believe it.) An. Dom. 1012, at Colewiz,<sup>2</sup> in Saxony, on Christmas Eve, a company of young men and maids, whilst the Priest was at Mass in the Church, were singing catches and love-songs in the Church-yard; he sent to them to make less noise, but they sung on still; and if you will, you shall have the very song itself.

Equitabat homo per silvam frondosam,
Ducebatque secum Meswinden formosam,
Quid stamus, cur non imus?

A fellow rid by the greenwood side,
And fair Meswinde was his bride,
Why stand we so, and do not go?

This they sung, he chaft, till at length, impatient as he was, he prayed to S. Magnus, Patron of the Church, they might all three sing and dance till that time twelvemonth, and so <sup>3</sup> they did, without meat and drink, wearisomeness or giving over, till at year's end they ceased singing, and were absolved by Herebertus, Archbishop of Cologne. They will in all places be doing thus, young folks especially, reading love stories, talking of this or that young man, such a fair maid, singing, telling or hearing lascivious tales, scurrile tunes, such objects are their sole delight, their continual meditation; and as Guastavinius adds, *Com. in 4. Nobilitas sub amore jacet<sup>2</sup>——— owe their beginnings to love, and many of our histories. By this means, saith Jovius, they would express their loving minds to their Mistress, and to the beholders. 'Tis the sole object almost of Poetry, all our invention tends to it, all our songs, and therefore Hesiod makes the Muses and Graces still follow Cupid, and, as Plutarch holds, Menander and the rest of the Poets were Love's Priests, whatever those old Anacreons, all our Greek and Latin Epigrammatists, Love-writers, Antony Diogenes the most ancient, whose Epitome we find in Photius' Bibliotheca, Longus Sophista, Eustathius, Achilles Tatius, Aristænetus, Heliodorus, Plato, Plutarch, Lucian, Parthenius, Theodorus Prodromus, Ovid, Catullus, Tibullus, &c. our new Ariostos, Boiardos, Authors of Arcadia, Urania, Fairy Queen, &c. Marullus, Lotichius, Angerianus, Stroza, Secundus, Capellanus, &c. with the rest of those facete modern Poets, have written in this kind, are but as so many Symptoms of Love. Their whole books are a Synopsis, or Breviary of Love, the Portuous<sup>3</sup> of Love, Legends of Lovers' lives and deaths, and of their memorable adventures, nay more, quod leguntur, quod laudantur amori debent, as<sup>4</sup> Nevisanus the Lawyer holds, there never was any excellent Poet, that invented good fables, or made laudable verses, which was not in love himself; had he not taken a quill from Cupid's wings, he could never have written so amorously as he did.

Petrarch's Laura made him so famous, Astrophel's Stella, and Jovianus Pontanus' Mistress was the cause of his Roses, Violets, Lilies, nequitia, blanditia, joci, decor, Nardus, Ver, Corolla, Thus, Mars, Pallas, Venus, Charis, Crocum, Laurus, Unguentem, Costum, Lacrima, Myrrha, Musæ, &c. and the rest of his Poems. Why are Italians at this day generally so good Poets and Painters? Because every man of any fashion amongst them hath his Mistress. The very rusticks and hog-rubbers, Menalcas and Corydon, qui sœtent de stercore equino, those fulsome knaves, if once they taste of this Love-liquor, are inspired in an instant. Instead of those accurate Emblems, curious Impresses, gaudy Masques, Tilts, Tournaments, &c., they have their Wakes, Whitsun-ales, Shepherds'-feasts, meetings on holy-days, country-dances, roundelays,<sup>2</sup> writing their names on <sup>3</sup> trees, true-lovers'-knots, pretty gifts.

With tokens, hearts divided, and half rings,
Shepherds are in their Loves as coy as Kings.

Choosing Lords, Ladies, Kings, Queens, and Valentines, &c. they go by couples,

With dainty Dowsabel<sup>4</sup> and Sir Thopas.<sup>5</sup>

Instead of Odes, Epigrams, and Elegies, &c. they have their Ballads, Country-tunes, O the Broom, the bonny bonny Broom, Ditties and Songs, Bess a Bell she doth excel,—they must write likewise and indite all in rhyme.

The <sup>5</sup>Persian Kings allotted whole Cities to like use, hæc civitas mulieri redimiculum præbeat, hæc in collum, hæc in crines, one whole City served to dress her hair, another her neck, a third her hood. Ahasuerus would have <sup>6</sup>given Esther half his Empire, and <sup>7</sup>Herod bid Herodias ask what she would, she should have it. Caligula gave an 100,000 sesterces to his Courtisan at first word to buy her pins, and yet, when he was solicited by the Senate to bestow something to repair the decayed walls of Rome for the Common-wealth's good, he would give but 6,000 sesterces at most.<sup>8</sup> <sup>9</sup>Dionysius, that Sicilian tyrant, rejected all his privy Councillors, and was so besotted on Myrrha, his favourite and Mistress, that he would bestow no office, or in the most weightiest business of the Kingdom do ought without her especial advice, prefer, depose, send, entertain no man, though worthy and well-deserving, but by her consent; and he again whom she commended, howsoever unfit, unworthy, was as highly approved. But I conclude there is no end of Love's Symptoms, 'tis a bottomless pit. Love is subject to no dimensions; not to be surveyed by any art or engine: and besides, I am of <sup>5</sup>Hædus' mind, no man can discourse of love-matters, or judge of them aright, that hath not made trial in his own person, or, as <sup>6</sup>Æneas Sylvius adds, hath not a little doted, been mad or love-sick himself. I confess I am but a novice, a Contemplator only,

MEMB. IV.

SUBSECT. I.—Prognosticks of Love-Melancholy.

WHAT Fires, Torments, Cares, Jealousies, Suspicions, Fears, Griefs, Anxieties, accompany such as are in love, I have sufficiently said: the next question is, what will be the event of such miseries, what they fore-tell. Some are of opinion that this love cannot be cured, nullis amor est medicabilis herbis,<sup>9</sup> it accompanies them to the <sup>10</sup>last.

Woods singing birds, the wind's murmur shall fade,
Than my fair Amaryllis' love allay'd.

Bid me not love, bid a deaf man hear, a blind man see, a dumb speak, lame run, counsel can do no good, a sick man cannot relish, no Physick can ease me.

as Apollo confessed, and Jupiter himself could not be cured.

<sup>4</sup> Omnes humanos curat medicina dolores,
Solut amor morbi non habet artificem.

Physic can soon cure every disease,

But whether love may be cured or no, and by what means, shall be explained in his place; in the mean time, if it take his course, and be not otherwise eased or amended, it breaks out often into outrageous and prodigious events. Amor et Liber violenti dii sunt, as <sup>6</sup> Tatius observes, et eo usque animum incendunt, ut pudoris oblvisci cogant, Love and Bacchus are so violent Gods, so furiously rage in our minds, that they make us forget all honesty, shame, and common civility. For such men ordinarily as are thoroughly possessed with this humour, become insensati et insani, for it is <sup>7</sup> amor insanus, as the Poet calls it, beside themselves, and as I have proved, no better than beasts, irrational, stupid, headstrong, void of fear of God or men, they frequently forswear themselves, spend, steal, commit incests, rapes, adulteries, murders, depopulate Towns, Cities, Countries, to satisfy their lust.

As never yet did Pagan, Jew, or Turk.

The wars of Troy may be a sufficient witness ; and as Appian, hist. lib. 5. [cap. 1.] saith of Antony and Cleopatra, <sup>2</sup> their Love brought themselves and all Egypt into extreme and miserable calamities, the end of her is as bitter as worm-wood, and as sharp as a two-edged sword. Prov. v. 4, 5. Her feet go down to death, her steps lead on to hell. She is more bitter than death (Eccles. vii. 26.) and the sinner shall be taken by her.

He that runs head-long from the top of a rock, is not in so bad a case, as he that falls into the gulf of love. <sup>4</sup> For hence, saith <sup>5</sup> Platina, comes Repentance, Dotage, they lose themselves, their wits, and make shipwreck of their fortunes altogether: madness, to make away themselves and others, violent death. Prognosticatio est talis, saith Gordonius, <sup>6</sup> si non succurratur iis, aut in maniam cadunt, aut moriuntur, the prognostication is, they will either run mad or die. For if this passion continue, saith <sup>7</sup> Ælian Montaltus, it makes the blood hot, thick, and black; and if the inflammation get into the brain, with continual meditation and waking, it so dries it up, that madness follows, or else they make away themselves.

Now, as Arnoldus adds, it will speedily work these effects, if it be not presently helped ; <sup>9</sup> they will pine away, run mad, and die upon a sudden; facile incident in maniam, saith Valescus, quickly mad, nisi succurratur, if good order be not taken,

Is prius ac nôrit se perisse perit.

Oh heavy yoke of love, which whoso bears,
Is quite undone, and that at unawares.

So she confessed of herself in the Poet,

Vix pili intervallo à furore absum.

I shall be mad before it be perceived,
A hair-breadth off scarce am I, now distracted.

As mad as Orlando for his Angelica,<sup>3</sup> or Hercules for his Hylas,

At ille ruebat quò pedes ducebant, furibundus,
Nam illi sævus Deus intus jecur laniabat.<sup>4</sup>

He went he car'd not whither, mad he was,
The cruel God so tortur'd him, alas !

At the sight of Hero I cannot tell how many ran mad,

<sup>5</sup> Alius vulnus celans insanit pulchritudine puellæ.

And whilst he doth conceal his grief,
Madness comes on him like a thief.

Go to Bedlam for examples. It is so well known in every village, how many have either died for love, or voluntarily made away themselves, that I need not much labour to prove it ; <sup>6</sup> Nec modus aut requies nisi mors reperitur amoris : Death is the common Catastrophe to such persons.

<sup>7</sup> Mori mihi contingat, non enim alia

Would I were dead ! for nought, God knows,
But death can rid me of these woes.

As soon as Euryalus departed from Siena, Lucretia, his Paramour, "never looked up, no jests could exhilarate her sad mind, no joys comfort her wounded and distressed soul, but a little after she fell sick and died. But this is a gentle end, a natural death, such persons commonly make away themselves.

MEMB. V.

SUBJECT. I.—Cure of Love-Melancholy, by Labour, Diet, Physick, Fasting, &c.

ALTHOUGH it be controverted by some, whether Love-Melancholy may be cured, because it is so irresistible and violent a passion ; for, as you know,

Sed revocare gradum, superasque evadere ad auras,
Hic labor, hoc opus est :———
It is an easy passage down to hell,
But to come back, once there, you cannot well :

yet without question, if it be taken in time, it may be helped, and by many good remedies amended. Avicenna, lib. 3. Fen. cap. 23. & 24, sets down seven compendious ways how this malady may be eased, altered and expelled. Savanarola, 9 principal observations, Jason Pratensis prescribes eight rules besides Physick, how this passion may be tamed, Laurentius 2 main precepts, Arnoldus, Valleriola, Montaltus, Hildesheim, Langius, and others inform us otherwise, and yet all tending to the same purpose. The sum of which I will briefly epitomize (for I light my Candle from their Torches) and enlarge again upon occasion, as shall seem best to me, and that after mine own method. The first rule to be observed in this stubborn and unbridled passion, is exercise and diet. It is an old and well known sentence, sine Cerere et Baccho friget Venus.<sup>2</sup> As an<sup>3</sup> idle sedentary life, liberal feeding, are great causes of it, so the opposite, labour, slender and sparing diet, with continual business, are the best and most ordinary means to prevent it.

Otia si tollas, periëre Cupidinis artes,
Contentptæque jacent et sine luce faces.<sup>4</sup>
Take idleness away, and put to flight
Are Cupid's arts, his torches give no light.

Minerva, Diana, Vesta, and the nine Muses were not enamoured at all, because they never were idle.

<sup>5</sup> Frustra blanditiæ appulstis ad me,
Frustra nequitiae venitis ad me,
Frustra deliciæ obsidebitis me,

Ovid, Remedium Amoris, 139-144.]    <sup>4</sup> Ovid, Rem. Am. 139, 140.]    <sup>5</sup> Buchanan, Hendecasyllabon Liber. iv.]

Frustra me illecebræ, et procacitates,
Et suspiria, et oscula, et susurri,
Et quisquis male sana corda amantum
Blandis ebria fascinat venenis.

In vain are all your flatteries,
In vain are all your knaveries,
Delights, deceits, procacities,
Sighs, kisses, and conspiracies,
And whate'er is done by Art,
To bewitch a Lover's heart.

'Tis in vain to set upon those that are busy. 'Tis Savanarola's third rule, occupari in multis et magnis negotiis, and Avicenna's precept, cap. 24.

To be busy still, and as <sup>2</sup>Guianerius enjoins, about matters of great moment, if it may be. <sup>3</sup>Magninus adds, never to be idle, but at the hours of sleep.

Why dost thou ask, poor folks are often free
And dainty places still molested be?

Because poor people fare coarsely, work hard, go wool-ward and bare.

Non habet unde suum paupertas pascat amorem.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>7</sup>Guianerius therefore prescribes his patient to go with hair-cloth next his skin, to go bare-footed, and bare-legged in cold weather, to whip himself now and then, as Monks do, but above all, to fast. Not with sweet wine, mutton and pottage, as many of those

Tenterbellies<sup>1</sup> do, howsoever they put on Lenten faces, and whatsoever they pretend, but from all manner of meat. Fasting is an all-sufficient remedy of itself, for, as Jason Pratensis holds, the bodies of such persons that feed liberally, and live at ease, <sup>2</sup>are full of bad spirits and Devils, devilish thoughts; no better Physick for such parties, than to fast. Hildesheim, spicil. 2. to this of hunger, adds <sup>3</sup>often baths, much exercise and sweat, but hunger and fasting he prescribes before the rest. And 'tis indeed our Saviour's Oracle, This kind of devil is not cast out but by fasting and prayer,<sup>4</sup> which makes the Fathers so immoderate in commendation of fasting. As Hunger, saith <sup>5</sup>Ambrose, is a friend of Virginitie, so is it an enemy to lasciviousness, but fulness overthrows chastity, and fostereth all manner of provocations. If thine horse be too lusty, Hierome adviseth thee to take away some of his provender; by this means those Pauls, Hilaries, Antonies, and famous Anchorites, subdued the lust of the flesh; by this means Hilarion made his ass, as he called his own body, leave kicking, (so <sup>6</sup>Hierome relates of him in his life) when the Devil tempted him to any such foul offence. By this means those <sup>7</sup>Indian Brachmanni kept themselves continent, they lay upon the ground covered with skins, as the Redshanks<sup>8</sup> do on Hadder,<sup>9</sup> and dieted themselves sparingly on one dish, which Guianerius would have all young men put in practice; and if that will not serve, <sup>10</sup>Gordonius would have them soundly whipped, or, to cool their courage, kept in prison, and there be fed with bread and water, till they acknowledge their error, and become of another mind. If imprisonment and hunger will not take them down, according to the direction of that <sup>11</sup>Theban Crates, time must wear it out; if time will not, the last refuge is an halter. But this, you will say, is comically spoken. Howsoever, Fasting by all means must be still used; and as they must refrain from such meats formerly mentioned, which cause venery, or provoke lust, so they must use an opposite diet. <sup>1</sup> Wine must be altogether avoided of the younger sort. So <sup>2</sup> Plato prescribes, and would have the Magistrates themselves abstain from it, for example's sake, highly commending the Carthaginians for their temperance in this kind. And 'twas a good edict, a commendable thing, so that it were not done for some sinister respect, as those old Egyptians abstained from Wine, because some fabulous Poets had given out, Wine sprang first from the blood of the Giants, or out of superstition, as our modern Turks, but for temperance, it being animæ virus et vitiorum fomes, a plague itself if immoderately taken. Women of old for that cause, <sup>3</sup> in hot Countries, were forbid the use of it; and as severely punished for drinking of wine, as for adultery, and young folks, as Leonicus hath recorded, Var. hist. l. 3. cap. 87, 88, out of Athenæus and others; and is still practised in Italy and some other Countries of Europe, and Asia, as Claudius Minos hath well illustrated in his Comment on the 23.<sup>d</sup> Emblem of Alciat. So choice is to be made of other diet.

Nec minus erucas aptum est vitare salacra,
Et quicquid veneri corpora nostra parat.<sup>4</sup>

Eringoes are not good for to be taken,
And all lascivious meats must be forsaken.

Those opposite meats which ought to be used are Cowcumbers, Melons, Purselan, Water-Lilies, Rue, Woodbine, Ammi, Lettice, which Lemnius so much commends, lib. 2. cap. 42, and Mizaldus hort. med. to this purpose; Vitex, or Agnus castus before the rest, which, saith <sup>5</sup> Magninus, hath a wonderful virtue in it. Those Athenian women, in their solemn feasts called Thesmophoria, were to abstain nine days from the company of men, during which time, saith Ælian,<sup>6</sup> they laid a certain herb named Hanea,<sup>7</sup> in their beds, which assuaged those ardent flames of love, and freed them from the torments of that violent passion. And to be drunk too by fits<sup>4</sup>; but this is mad Physick, if it be at all to be permitted. If not, yet some pleasure is to be allowed, as that which Vives speaks of, lib. 3. de anima. <sup>5</sup>*A Lover that hath as it were lost himself through impotency, impatience, must be called home as a traveller by musick, feasting, good wine, if need be, to drunkenness itself, which many so much commend for the easing of the mind, all kinds of sports and merriments, to see fair pictures, hangings, buildings, pleasant fields, Orchards, Gardens, Groves, Ponds, Pools, Rivers, fishing, fowling, hawkking, hunting, to hear merry tales, and pleasant discourse, reading, to use exercise till he sweat, that new spirits may succeed, or by some vehement affection or contrary passion, to be diverted, till he be fully weaned from anger, suspicion, cares, fears, &c. and habituated into another course. sweet discourse, &c. And as the melody of musick, merriment, singing, dancing, doth augment the passion of some Lovers, as <sup>1</sup>Avicenna notes, so it expelleth it in others, and doth very much good. These things must be warily applied, as the parties' Symptoms vary, and they shall stand variously affected.

If there be any need of Physick, that the humours be altered, or any new matter aggregated, they must be cured as melancholy men. Carolus à Lorme, amongst other questions discussed for his degree at Montpelier in France, hath this, An amantes et amantes iisdem remediis curentur? Whether lovers and mad men be cured by the same remedies? he affirms it; for love extended is mere madness. Such Physick then as is prescribed, is either inward or outward, as hath been formerly handled in the precedent partition in the cure of Melancholy. Consult with *Valleriola, observat. lib. 2. observat. 7, Lod. Mercatus, lib. 2. cap. 4. de mulier. affect. 'Tis the same which Schola Salernitana, Jason Pratensis, Hildesheim, &c. prescribe blood-letting to be used as a principal remedy. Those old Scythians had a trick to cure all appetite of burning lust, by <sup>6</sup>letting themselves blood under the ears, and to make both men and women barren, as Sabellicus in his Enneades relates of them. Which Salmuth. Tit. 10. de Herol. comment. in Pancirol. de nov. report. Mercurialis var. lec. lib. 3. cap. 7. out of Hippocrates and Benzo, say still is in use amongst the Indians, a reason of which Langius gives lib. 1. epist. 10.

upon a woman that hath good behaviour joined with her excellent person, and shall perceive his eyes with a kind of greediness to pull unto them this image of beauty, and carry it to the heart: shall observe himself to be somewhat incensed with this influence, which moveth within: when he shall discern those subtile spirits sparkling in her eyes to administer more fuel to the fire, he must wisely withstand the beginnings, rouse up reason, stupefied almost, fortify his heart by all means, and shut up all those passages, by which it may have entrance. 'Tis a precept which all concur upon.

Which cannot speedier be done, than if he confess his grief and passion to some judicious friend (<sup>2</sup> qui tacitus ardet magis uritur, the more he conceals, the greater is his pain) that by his good advice may happily ease him on a sudden; and withal to avoid occasions, or any circumstance that may aggravate his disease, to remove the object by all means; for who can stand by a fire and not burn?

So much can sight enforce. Especially if he have been formerly enamoured, the sight of his Mistress strikes him into a new fit, and makes him rave many days after.

A sickly man a little thing offends,
 As brimstone doth a fire decayed renew,
 And make it burn afresh, doth Love's dead flames,
 If that the former object it review.

Or, as the Poet compares it to embers in ashes, which the wind blows, <sup>2</sup>ut solet à ventis, &c. a scald head (as the saying is) is soon broken, dry wood quickly kindles, and when they have been formerly wounded with sight, how can they by seeing but be inflamed? Ismenias acknowledgeth as much of himself, when he had been long absent, and almost forgotten his Mistress, <sup>3</sup>at the first sight of her, as straw in a fire, I burned afresh, and more than ever I did before. <sup>4</sup>Chariclea was as much moved at the sight of her dear Theagenes, after he had been a great stranger. <sup>5</sup>Myrtila in Aristænetus swore she would never love Pamphilus again, and did moderate her passion, so long as he was absent; but the next time he came in presence, she could not contain, effuse amplexa attractari se sinit, &c. she broke her vow, and did profusely embrace him. Hermotinus a young man (in the said <sup>6</sup>Author) is all out as unstead, he had forgot his Mistress quite, and by his friends was well weaned from her love, but seeing her by chance, agnovit veteris vestigia flammæ,<sup>7</sup> he raved amain, illa tandem emergens veluti lucida stella cæpit elucere, &c. she did appear as a blazing-star, or an Angel, to his sight. And it is the common passion of all lovers to be overcome in this sort. For that cause, belike, Alexander discerning this inconvenience and danger that comes by seeing, "when he heard Darius' wife so much commended for her beauty, would scarce admit her to come in his sight, foreknowing belike that of Plutarch,<sup>8</sup> formosam videre periculosissimum, how full of danger it is to see a proper woman; and

But so as they tarry out long enough : a whole year [Socrates in]
<sup>2</sup>Xenophon prescribes Criobulus, vix enim intra hoc tempus ab amore sanari poteris: some will hardly be weaned under. All this <sup>3</sup>Heinsius merrily inculcates in an Epistle to his friend Primerius: first fast, then tarry, thirdly change thy place, fourthly think of an halter. If change of place, continuance of time, absence, will not wear it out, with those precedent remedies, it will hardly be removed: but these commonly are of force. Felix Plater, observ. lib. 1., had a baker to his patient, almost mad for the love of his maid, and desperate; by removing her from him, he was in a short space cured. Isæus, a Philosopher of Assyria, was a most dissolute liver in his youth, palàm lasciviens, in love with all he met; but after he betook himself by his friend's advice to his study, and left women's company, he was so changed, that he cared no more for Plays, nor Feasts, nor Masks, nor Songs, nor Verses, fine clothes, nor no such love-toys; he became a new man upon a sudden, tanquam si priores oculos amisisset (saith mine <sup>4</sup>Author) as if he had lost his former eyes. Peter Godefridus, in the last Chapter of his third Book, hath a story out of S. Ambrose, of a young man, that meeting his old love, after long absence, on whom he had extremely doted, would scarce take notice of her; she wondered at it, that he should so lightly esteem her, called him again, lenibat dictis animum,<sup>5</sup> and told him who she was, Ego sum inquit:<sup>6</sup> At ego non sum ego: but he replied, he was not the same man: tandem corripuit sese, as <sup>7</sup>Æneas fled from Dido, not vouchsafing her any farther parley, loathing his folly, and ashamed of that which formerly he had done.

O Neæra, put your tricks, and practise hereafter, upon some body else, you shall befool me no longer. Petrarch hath such another tale of a young Gallant, that loved a wench with one eye, and for that cause by his parents was sent to travel into far Countries;

after some years he returned, and meeting the maid for whose sake he was sent abroad, asked her how, and by what chance she lost her eye? No, said she, I have lost none, but you have found yours: signifying thereby, that all Lovers were blind, as Fabius saith, Amantes de formâ judicare non possunt, Lovers cannot judge of beauty, nor scarce of anything else, as they will easily confess, after they return unto themselves, by some discontinuance or better advice, wonder at their own folly, madness, stupidity, blindness, be much abashed, and laugh at Love, and call't an idle thing, condemn themselves that ever they should be so besotted or misled; and be heartily glad they have so happily escaped.

If so be (which is seldom) that change of place will not effect this alteration, then other remedies are to be annexed, fair and foul means, as to persuade, promise, threaten, terrify, or to divert by some contrary passion, rumour, tales, news, or some witty invention, to alter his affection, <sup>1</sup>by some greater sorrow, to drive out the less, saith Gordonius, as that his house is on fire, his best friends dead, his money stolen, <sup>2</sup>that he is made some great Governor, or hath some honour, office, some inheritance is befallen him, he shall be a Knight, a Baron: or by some false accusation, as they do to such as have the hiccup, to make them forget it. Saint Hierome, lib. 2. epist. 16, to Rusticus the Monk, hath an instance of a young man of Greece, that lived in a Monastery in Egypt, <sup>3</sup>that by no labour, no continence, no persuasion, could be diverted, but at last by this trick he was delivered. The Abbot sets one of his Convent to quarrel with him, and with some scandalous reproach or other to defame him before company, and then to come and complain first, the witnesses were likewise suborned for the Plaintiff. The young man wept, and when all were against him, the Abbot cunningly took his part, lest he should be overcome with immoderate grief: but what need many words? By this invention he was cured, and alienated from his pristine love-thoughts—Injuries, slanders, contempts, disgraces,

That he is an Hermaphrodite, an Eunuch, imperfect, impotent, a spend-thrift, a gamester, a fool, a gull, a beggar, a whoremaster, far in debt, and not able to maintain her, a common drunkard, his mother was a witch, his father hang'd, that he hath a Wolf in his bosom, a sore leg, he is a Leper, hath some incurable disease, that he will surely beat her, he cannot hold his water, that he cries out or walks in the night, will stab his bed-fellow, tell all his secrets in his sleep, and that no body dare lie with him, his house is haunted with spirits, with such fearful and tragical things, able to avert and terrify any man or woman living. Gordonius, cap. 20. part. 2, hunc in modum consulit; Paretur aliqua vetula turpissima aspectu, cum turpi et vili habitu: et portet subtus gremium pannum menstruaem, et dicat quod amica sua sit ebriosa, et quod mingat in lecto, et quod est epileptica et impudica; et quod in corpore suo sunt excrescentie enormes, cum fœtore anhelitus, et aliæ enormitates, quibus vetulæ sunt edoctæ: si nolit his persuaderi, subito extrahat<sup>5</sup> pannum menstruaem, coram facie portando, exclamando, talis est

If you suspect to be taken, be sure, saith the Poet, to have two Mistresses at once, or go from one to another. As he that looks himself in a glass, forgets his Physiognomy forthwith, this flattering glass of love will be diminished by remove; after a little absence it will be remitted, the next fair object will likely alter it. 'Tis generally true ; for as he observes, <sup>6</sup> priorem flammam novus ignis extrudit ; et ea mulierum natura, ut præsentis maximè ament, one fire drives out another, and such is women's weakness, that they love commonly him that is present. And so do many men (as he confessed) he loved Amy till he saw Flora, and when he saw Cynthia, forgat them both : but fair Phyllis was incomparably beyond them all, Chloris surpassed her, and yet when he espied Amaryllis, she was his sole Mistress ; O divine Amaryllis ! quàm procera, cupressi ad instar, quàm elegans, quàm decens ! &c. how lovely, how tall, how comely she was (saith Polemius) till he saw another, and then she was the sole subject of his thoughts. In conclusion, her he loves best he saw last. <sup>7</sup> Triton the Sea-God first loved Leucothoë, till he came in presence of Milæne, she was the Commandress of his heart, till he saw Galatea ; but (as <sup>8</sup> she complains) he loved another estoons, another, and another. and Tully, 3. nat. deor. [cap. 23, § 60.] disputing with *C. After the death of Lucretia, <sup>2</sup>Euryalus would admit of no comfort, till the Emperor Sigismund married him to a noble Lady of his Court, and so in short space he was freed.

SUBJECT. 3.—By counsel and persuasion, foulness of the fact, men's, women's faults, miseries of marriage, events of lust, &c.

As there be divers causes of this burning lust, or heroical love, so there be many good remedies to ease and help ; amongst which, good counsel and persuasion, which I should have handled in the first place, are of great moment, and not to be omitted. Many are of opinion, that in this blind head-strong passion counsel can do no good.

reverend, discreet person, a man of authority, whom the parties do respect, stand in awe of, or from a judicious friend, of itself alone, it is able to divert and suffice. Gordonius the Physician attributes so much to it, that he would have it by all means used in the first place. Amoveatur ab illo, consilio viri quem timet, ostendendo pericula sæculi, judicium inferni, gaudia Paradisi. He would have some discreet men to dissuade them, after the fury of passion is a little spent, or by absence allayed; for it is as intemperate at first to give counsel, as to comfort parents when their children are in that instant departed; to no purpose to prescribe Narcoticks, Cordials, Nectarines, Potions, Homer's Nepenthes, or Helen's Bowl,<sup>1</sup> &c. Non cessabit pectus tundere,<sup>2</sup> she will lament and howl for a season: let passion have his course a while, and then he may proceed, by fore-shewing the miserable events and dangers which will surely happen, the pains of Hell, joys of Paradise, and the like, which by their preposterous courses they shall forfeit or incur; and 'tis a fit method, a very good means. For what <sup>3</sup>Seneca said of Vice, I say of Love, sine magistro discitur, vix sine magistro deseritur, 'tis learned of itself, but <sup>4</sup>'hardly left without a Tutor. 'Tis not amiss therefore to have some such overseer, to expostulate and shew them such absurdities, inconveniences, imperfections, discontents, as usually follow; which their blindness, fury, madness, cannot apply unto themselves, or will not apprehend through weakness: and good for them to disclose themselves, to give ear to friendly admonitions. Tell me, Sweetheart (saith Tryphæna, to love-sick Charmides in <sup>5</sup>Lucian) what is it that troubles thee: peradventure I can ease thy mind, and further thee in thy suit; and so without question she might, and so mayest thou, if the Patient be capable of good counsel, and will hear at least what may be said.

And as <sup>5</sup>Pet. Aretine's Lucretia, a notable quean, confesseth; gluttony, anger, envy, pride, sacrilege, theft, slaughter, were all born that day that a whore began her profession: for, as she follows it, her pride is greater than a rich churl's, she is more envious than the pox, as malicious as melancholy, as covetous as Hell. If from the beginning of the world any were mala, pejor, pessima, bad in the superlative degree, 'tis a whore; how many have I undone, caused to be wounded, slain! O Antonia, thou seest what I am without, but within, God knows, a puddle of iniquity, a sink of sin, a pocky quean. Let him now that so dotes meditate on this; let him see the event and success of others, Samson, Hercules, Holofernes, &c. Those infinite mischiefs attend it: if she be another man's wife he loves, 'tis abominable in the sight of God and men: adultery is expressly forbidden in God's Commandment, a mortal sin, able to endanger his soul: if he be such a one that fears God, or have any Religion, he will eschew it, and abhor the loathsomeness of his own fact. If he love an honest maid, 'tis to abuse, or marry her: if to abuse, 'tis fornication, a foul fact (though some make light of it) and almost equal to adultery itself. If to marry, let him seriously consider what he takes in hand, look before he leap, as the proverb is, or settle his affections, and examine first the party, and condition of his estate and hers, whether it be a fit match, for fortunes, years, parentage, and such other circumstances, an sit suæ Veneris; whether it be likely to proceed; if not, let him wisely stave himself off at the first, curb in his inordinate passion, and moderate his desire, by thinking of some other

Let thy Mercury, reason, rule thee against all allurements, seeming delights, pleasing inward or outward provocations. Thou mayst do this if thou wilt, pater non deperit filiam, nec frater sororem, a father dotes not on his own daughter, a brother on a sister: and why? because it is unnatural, unlawful, unfit. If he be sickly, soft, deformed, let him think of his deformities, vices, infirmities; if in debt, let him ruminat how to pay his debts: if he be in any danger, let him seek to avoid it; if he have any law-suit, or other business, he may do well to let his love matters alone, and follow it, labour in his vocation, whatever it is. But if he cannot so ease himself, yet let him wisely premeditate of both their estates; if they be unequal in years, she young and he old, what an unfit match must it needs be, an uneven yoke, how absurd and undecent a thing is it! as Lycinus in <sup>3</sup>Lucian told Timolaus, for an old bald crook-nosed knave, to marry a young wench; how odious a thing it is to see an old Lecher! What should a bald fellow do with a comb, a dumb doter with a pipe, a blind man with a looking-glass, and thou with such a wife? How absurd is it for a young man to marry an old wife for a piece of good! But put case she be equal in years, birth, fortunes, and other qualities correspondent, he doth desire to be coupled in marriage, which is an honourable estate, but for what respects? Her beauty belike, and comeliness of person, that is commonly the main object, she is a most absolute form in his eye at least, cui formam Paphia, et Charites tribuere decorem, but do other men affirm as much? or is it an error in his judgement?

It may be not she that is so fair, but her coats, or put another in her clothes, and she will seem all out as fair; as the <sup>2</sup> Poet then prescribes, separate her from her clothes: suppose thou saw her in a base beggar's weed, or else dressed in some old hirsute attires out of fashion, foul linen, coarse raiment, besmeared with soot, colly,<sup>3</sup> perfumed with Opoponax, Sagenum, Assafoetida, or some such filthy gums, dirty, about some undecent action or other; or in such a case as Brassivola the Physician found Malatasta, his patient, after a potion of Hellebore, which he had prescribed: manibus in terram depositis, et ano versus cælum elevato (ac si videretur Socraticus ille Aristophanes, qui Geometricas figuras in terram scribens, tubera colligere videbatur) atram bilem in album parietem injiciebat, adeoque totam cameram, et se deurpabat, ut, &c. all to berayed, or worse; if thou saw'st her (I say) wouldst thou affect her as thou dost? Suppose thou beheldest her in a <sup>4</sup> frosty morning, in cold weather, in some passion or perturbation of mind, weeping, chafing, &c. rivel'd and ill-favoured to behold. She many times that in a composed look seems so amiable and delicious, tam scitulâ formâ,<sup>5</sup> if she do but laugh or smile, makes an ugly sparrow-mouthed face, and shews a pair of uneven, loathsome, rotten, foul teeth: she hath a black skin, gouty legs, a deformed crooked carcass under a fine coat. It may be for all her costly tires she is bald, and though she seem so fair by dark, by candle-light, or afar off at such a distance, as Callicratides observed in <sup>6</sup> Lucian, if thou shouldst see her near, or in a morning, she would appear more ugly than a beast; <sup>7</sup> si diligenter consideres, quid per os et nares et ceteros corporis meatus egreditur, vilius sterquilinium nunquam vidisti.

Follow my counsel, see her undrest, see her, if it be possible, out of her attires, furtivis nudatum coloribus; <sup>1</sup> it may be she is like Æsop's Jay, or <sup>2</sup> Pliny's Cantharides, she will be loathsome, ridiculous, thou wilt not endure her sight: or suppose thou saw'st her sick, pale, in a Consumption, on her death-bed, skin and bones, or now dead, cujus erat gratissimus amplexus, as Bernard saith, erit horribilis aspectus;

Non redolet, sed olet, quæ redolere solet.<sup>3</sup>

As a posy, she smells sweet, is most fresh and fair one day, but dried up, withered, and stinks another. Beautiful Nireus, by that Homer<sup>4</sup> so much admired, once dead, is more deformed than Thersites, and Solomon deceased, as ugly as Marcolphus: thy lovely Mistress, that was erst

Some are of opinion, that to see a woman naked, is able of itself to alter his affection; and it is worthy of consideration, saith <sup>6</sup> Montaigne the Frenchman in his Essays, that the skilfullest masters of amorous dalliance, appoint for a remedy of venereous passions, a full survey of the body; which the Poet insinuates,

Viderat, in cursu qui fuit, hæsit amor.

The love stood still, that ran in full career,
When once it saw those parts should not appear.

It is reported of Seleucus King of Syria, that seeing his wife Stratonice's bald pate, as she was undressing her by chance, he could never affect her after. Raymond Lully, the Physician, spying an ulcer or canker in his Mistress' breast, whom he so dearly loved, from that day following abhorred the looks of her.

Many such matches are made for by-respects, or some seemly comeliness, which, after honey-moon's past, turn to bitterness: for burning lust is but a flash, a Gunpowder passion; and hatred oft follows in the highest degree, dislike and contempt.

'Tis so in the rest, their beauty fades as a tree in winter, which Deianira hath elegantly expressed in the Poet ;

• Deforme solis aspiciis truncis nemus ?
Sic nostra longum forma percurrens iter
Deperdit aliquid semper, et fulget minus,
Malisque minus est quicquid in nobis fuit,
Olim petium cecidit, et partu labat,
Materque multum rapuit ex illa mihi
Ætas citato senior eripuit gradu.

And as a tree that in the green wood grows,
With fruit and leaves, and in the Summer blows,
In Winter like a stock deformed shows :
Our beauty takes his race and journey goes,
And doth decrease, and lose, and come to nought, Admir'd of old, to this by child-birth brought :
And mother hath bereft me of my grace,
And crooked old age coming on apace.

To conclude with Chrysostom,<sup>1</sup> When thou seest a fair and beautiful person, a brave Bonaroba,<sup>2</sup> a bella Donna, quæ salivam moveat, lepidam puellam et quam tu facillè ames,<sup>3</sup> a comely woman, having bright eyes, a merry countenance, a shining lustre in her look, a pleasant grace, wringing thy soul, and increasing thy concupiscence; bethink with thyself that it is but earth thou lovest, a mere excrement, which so vexeth thee, which thou so admirest, and thy raging soul will be at rest. Take her skin from her face, and thou shalt see all loathsomeness under it, that beauty is a superficial skin and bones, nerves, sinews: suppose her sick, now rivell'd, hoary-headed, hollow-cheeked, old: within she is full of filthy fleam, stinking, putrid, excremental stuff: snot and snivel in her nostrils, spittle in her mouth, water in her eyes, what filth in her brains, &c. Or take her at best, and look narrowly upon her in the light, stand nearer her, nearer yet, thou shalt perceive almost as much, and love less, as Cardan well writes, minus amant qui acutè vident,<sup>5</sup> though Scaliger deride him for it: if he see her near, or look exactly at such a posture, whosoever he is, according to the true rules of symmetry and proportion, those I mean of Albert Durer, Lomatus, and Tasnier, examine him of her. If he be elegans formarum spectator,<sup>6</sup> he shall find many faults in Physiognomy, and ill colour; if form, one side of the face likely bigger than the other, or crooked nose, bad eyes, prominent veins, concavities about the eyes, wrinkles, pimples, red streaks, frechons, hairs, warts, neves, inequalities, roughness, scabredity, paleness, yellowness, and as many colours as are in a Turkey-cock's neck, many indecorums in their other parts; est quod desideres, est quod amputes, one leers, another frowns, a third gapes, squints, &c. And 'tis true that he saith,<sup>7</sup> diligenter consideranti raro facies absoluta, et quæ vitio caret, seldom shall you find an absolute face without fault, as I have often observed; not in the face alone is this defect or disproportion to be found, but in all the other parts, o body and mind; she is fair indeed, but foolish; pretty, comely, and decent, of a majestical presence, but peradventure imperious, dishonest, acerba, iniqua, self-will'd: she is rich, but deformed; hath a sweet face, but bad carriage, no bringing up, a rude and wanton flirt; a neat body she hath, but it is a nasty quean otherwise, a very slut, of a bad kind. As flowers in a garden have colour some, but no smell, others have a fragrant smell, but are unseemly to the eye; one is unsavoury to the taste as rue, as bitter as wormwood, and yet a most medicinal cordial flower, most acceptable to the stomach; so are men and women, one is well qualified, but of ill proportion, poor and base: a good eye she hath, but a bad hand and foot, fedæ pedes et fedæ manus, a fine leg, bad teeth, a vast body, &c. Examine all parts of body and mind, I advise thee to enquire of all. See her angry, merry, laugh, weep, hot, cold, sick, sullen, dressed, undressed, in all attires, sites, gestures, passions, eat her meals. &c., and in some of these you will surely dislike. Yea, not her only let them observe, but her parents, how they carry themselves: for what deformities, defects, incumbrances of body or mind be in them, at such an age, they will likely be subject to, be molested in like manner, they will patrizare or matrizare.<sup>1</sup> And with all let him take notice of her companions, in convictu, (as Quiverra prescribes) et quibuscum conversetur, whom she converseth with.

Noscitur ex comite qui non cognoscitur ex se.<sup>2</sup>

According to Thucydides, [ii. 45.] she is commonly the best, de quo minimus foras habetur sermo, that is least talked of abroad. For if she be a noted reveller, a gadder, a singer, a pranker or dancer, then take heed of her. For what saith Theocritus?<sup>3</sup>

At vos festivæ ne ne saltate puellæ,
En malus hircus adest in vos saltare paratus.<sup>4</sup>
Young men will do it, when they come to it.<sup>5</sup>

Fauns and Satyrs will certainly play wrecks,<sup>1</sup> when they come in such wanton Bacchis'<sup>2</sup> or Elenora's presence. Now when they shall perceive any such obliquity, indecency, disproportion, deformity, bad conditions, &c., let them still ruminate on that, and as <sup>3</sup>Hædus adviseth out of Ovid,<sup>4</sup> earum mendas notent, note their faults, vices, errors, and think of their imperfections; 'tis the next way to divert and mitigate Love's furious head-strong passions, as a Peacock's feet, and filthy comb, they say, make him forget his fine feathers, and pride of his tail; she is lovely, fair, well-favoured, well qualified, courteous and kind, But if she be not so to me, what care I how kind she be?<sup>5</sup> I say with Philostratus,<sup>6</sup> formosa aliis, mihi superba, she is a tyrant to me, and so let her go. Besides these outward neves, or open faults, errors, there be many inward infirmities, secret, some private (which I will omit) and some more common to the sex, sullen fits, evil qualities, filthy diseases, in this case fit to be considered; *consideratio fœditatis mulierum, menstruæ imprimis, quam immundæ sunt, quam Savanarola proponit regula septima penitus observandum; et Platina dial. amoris, fusè perstringit, Lodovicus Boncialus mulieb. lib. 2. cap. 2, Pet. I will say nothing of the vices of their minds, their pride, envy, inconstancy, weakness, malice, self-will, lightness, insatiable lust, jealousy; *Ecclus. 25. 13. nihil unquam mali nobilissimo sexui, vel verbo, vel facto machinatum, &c. Let Simonides, Mantuan, Platina, Pet. Aretine, and such women-haters bear the blame, if ought be said amiss; I have not writ a tenth of that which might be urged out of them and others; <sup>1</sup>non possunt invectivæ omnes, et satiræ in fœminas scriptæ, uno volumine comprehendî. And that which I have said (to speak truth) no more concerns them than men, though women be more frequently named in this Tract; (to apologize once for all) I am neither partial against them, or therefore bitter: what is said of the one, mutato nomine,<sup>2</sup> may most part be understood of the other. My words are like Pauso's picture in <sup>3</sup>Lucian, of whom, when a good fellow had bespoke an horse to be painted with his heels upward, tumbling on his back, he made him passant: now when the fellow came for his piece, he was very angry, and said, it was quite opposite to his mind; but Pauso instantly turned the Picture upside down, shewed him the horse at that site which he requested. and so gave him satisfaction. If any man take exception at my words, let him alter the name, read him for her, and 'tis all one in effect.

But to my purpose. If women in general be so bad (and men worse than they) what a hazard is it to marry! where shall a man find a good wife, or a woman a good husband? A woman a man may eschew, but not a wife: wedding is undoing (as some say) marrying marring, wooing woeing: <sup>4</sup>a wife is a fever hectick, as Scaliger calls her, and not to be cured but by death, as out of Menander, Athenæus adds,<sup>5</sup>

that ever was, is better than none : O blissful marriage, O most welcome marriage, and happy are they that are so coupled : we do earnestly seek it, and are never well till we have effected it. But with what fate? like those birds in the 'Emblem, that fed about a cage, so long as they could fly away at their pleasure, liked well of it ; but when they were taken, and might not get loose, though they had the same meat, pined away for sullenness, and would not eat. So we commend marriage,

—donec miselli liberi

Aspicimus dominam ; sed postquam heu janua clausa est,
Fel intus est quod mel fuit.

So long as we are wooers, may kiss and coll at our pleasure, nothing is so sweet, we are in heaven as we think : but when we are once tied, and have lost our liberty, marriage is an hell, give me my yellow hose again :<sup>2</sup> a mouse in a trap lives as merrily, we are in a purgatory some of us, if not hell itself. Dulce bellum inexpertis,<sup>3</sup> as the proverb is, 'tis fine talking of war, and marriage sweet in contemplation, till it be tried : and then as wars are most dangerous, irksome, every minute at death's door, so is, &c. When those wild Irish Peers, saith <sup>4</sup>Stanihurst, were feasted by King Henry the Second (at what time he kept his Christmas at Dublin) and had tasted of his Prince-like cheer, generous wines, dainty fare, had seen his <sup>5</sup>massy plate of silver, gold, enamell'd, beset with jewels, golden candle-sticks, goodly rich hangings, brave furniture, heard his trumpets sound, Fifes, Drums, and his exquisite musick in all kinds : when they had observed his majestic presence as he sat in purple robes, crowned, with his sceptre, &c. in his royal seat, the poor men were so amazed, enamoured, and taken with the object, that they were pertæsi domestici et pristini tyrotarichi, weary and ashamed of their own sordidity and manner of life. They would all be English forthwith ; who but English ! but when they had now submitted themselves, and lost their former liberty, they began to rebel some of them, others repent of what they had done, when it was too late. 'Tis so with us Bachelors, when we see and behold those sweet faces, those gaudy shews that women make, observe their pleasant gestures and graces, give ear to their Siren tunes, see them dance, &c., we think their conditions are as fine as their faces, we are taken with dumb signs, in amplexum ruimus,<sup>1</sup> we rave, we burn, and would fain be married. But when we feel the miseries, cares, woes, that accompany it, we make our moan many of us, cry out at length, and cannot be released. If this be true now, as some out of experience will inform us, farewell wiving for my part, and as the Comical Poet merrily saith,

Duxit secundus, nam nihil primo imprecor !

I pity him not, for the first time he must do as he may, bear it out sometimes by the head and shoulders, and let his next neighbour ride, or else run away, or as that Syracusan in a tempest, when all ponderous things were to be exonerated out of the ship, quia maximum pondus erat,<sup>5</sup> fling his wife in the Sea. But this I confess is Comically spoken, "and so I pray you take it. In sober sadness, marriage is a bondage, a thralldom, a yoke, an hindrance to all good enterprises, (he hath married a wife and cannot come) a stop to all preferments, a rock on which many are saved, many impinge, and are cast away : not that the thing is evil in itself, or troublesome, but full of all contentment and happiness, one of the three things which please God, when a man and his wife agree together, an honourable and happy estate, who knows it not ? But to indiscreet sensual persons, that as brutes are wholly led by sense, it is a fearful plague, many times an Hell itself, and can give little or no content, being that they are often so irregular and prodigious in their lusts, so diverse in their affections. Uxor nomen dignitatis, non voluptatis, as <sup>1</sup> he said, a wife is a name of honour, not of pleasure: she is fit to bear the office, govern a family, to bring up children, sit at board's end and carve, as some carnal men think and say; they had rather go to the stews, or have now and then a snatch as they can come by it, borrow of their neighbours, than have wives of their own; except they may, as some Princes and great men do, keep as many Courtisans as they will themselves, fly out impundè, that polygamy of Turks, Lex Julia, which Cæsar once enforced in Rome (though Levinus Torrentius and others suspect it) uti uxores quot et quas vellent liceret,<sup>3</sup> that every great man might marry, and keep as many wives as he would, or Irish divorcement were in use: <sup>4</sup> but as it is, 'tis hard, and gives not that satisfaction to these carnal men, beastly men as too many are. What still the same, to be tied <sup>5</sup> to one, be she never so fair, never so virtuous, is a thing they may not endure, to love one long. Say thy pleasure, and counterfeit as thou wilt, as <sup>6</sup> Parmeno told Thais, Neque tu uno eris contenta, one man will never please thee; nor one woman many men. But as <sup>7</sup> Pan replied to his Father Mercury, when he asked whether he was married, Nequaquam pater, amator enim sum, &c. No Father, no, I am a Lover still, and cannot be contented with one woman. Pitys, Echo, the Maenades, and I know not how many besides, were his Mistresses, he might not abide marriage. Varietas delectat,<sup>8</sup> 'tis loathsome and tedious, what one still? which the Satirist said of Iberina, is verified in most,

As capable of any impression as materia prima itself, that still desires new forms, like the Sea, their affections ebb and flow. Husband is a cloak for some to hide their villainy; once married she may fly out at her pleasure, the name of Husband is a sanctuary to make all good. Ed ventum (saith Seneca) ut nulla virum habeat, nisi ut irriulet adulterum.<sup>1</sup> They are right and straight, as true Trojans as mine host's daughter, that Spanish wench in Ariosto, as good wives as Messalina. Many men are as constant in their choice, and as good husbands as Nero himself, they must have their pleasure of all they see, and are in a word far more fickle than any woman.

*For either they be full of jealousy,
Or masterfull, or loven novelty, &c.*

Good men have often ill wives, as bad as Xanthippe was to Socrates, Elenora to St. Lewis,<sup>2</sup> Isabella to our Edward the Second: and good wives are as often matched to ill husbands, as Mariamne to Herod, Serena to Diocletian, Theodora to Theophilus, and Thyra to Gurmunde. But I will say nothing of dissolute and bad husbands, of Bachelors and their vices; their good qualities are a fitter subject for a just volume, too well known already in every village, town and city, they need no blazon; and lest I should mar any matches, or dis-hearten loving Maids, for this present I will let them pass.

Being that men and women are so irreligious, depraved by nature, so wandering in their affections, so brutish, so subject to disagreement, so unobservant of marriage rites, what shall I say? If thou beest such a one, or thou light on such a wife, what concord can there be, what hope of agreement? 'tis not conjugium, but conjurgium, as the Reed and Fern in the Emblem, averse and opposite in nature: 'tis twenty to one thou wilt not marry to thy contentment: but as in a lottery forty blanks were drawn commonly for one prize, out of a multitude you shall hardly choose a good one: a small ease hence then, little comfort.

No plague like to want: and when thou hast good means, and art very careful of their education, they will not be ruled. Think but of that old proverb, ῥῶον τέκνα πῆματα, Heroum filii noxæ,<sup>4</sup> great men's sons seldom do well; O utinam aut cœlebs mansissem, aut prole carerem! <sup>5</sup> Augustus exclaims in Suetonius.<sup>6</sup> Jacob had his Reuben, Simeon, and Levi: David an Amnon, an Absalom, an Adonijah; wise men's sons are commonly fools, inasmuch that Spartian concludes, neminem prope magnorum virorum optimum et utilem reliquisse filium;<sup>7</sup> <sup>8</sup> they had been much better to have been childless. 'Tis too common in the middle sort; thy son's a drunkard, a gamester, a spendthrift; thy daughter a fool, a whore; thy servants lazy drones and thieves, thy neighbours devils, they will make thee weary of thy life. <sup>9</sup> If thy wife be froward, when she may not have her will, thou hadst better be buried alive; she will be so impatient, raving still, and roaring like Juno in the Tragedy, there's nothing but tempests, all is in an uproar. If she be soft and foolish, thou werst better have a block, she will shame thee, and reveal thy secrets; if wise and learned, well qualified, there is as much danger on the other side, mulierem doctam ducere periculosissimum, saith Nevisanus, she will be too insolent and peevish,

And therefore, with that Philosopher,<sup>5</sup> still make answer to thy friends that importune thee to marry, adhuc intempestivum, 'tis yet unseasonable, and ever will be.

Consider withal how free, how happy, how secure, how <sup>6</sup> heavenly, in respect, a single man is, as he said in the Comedy, Et isti quod fortunatum esse autumant, uxorem nunquam habui, and that which all my neighbours admire and applaud me for, account so great an happiness, I never had a wife; consider how contentedly, quietly, neatly, plentifully, sweetly and how merrily he lives! He hath no man to care for but himself, none to please, no charge, none to control him, is tied to no residence, no cure to serve, may go and come, when, whither, live where he will, his own master, and do what he list himself. Consider the excellency of Virgins, Virgo cælum meruit, marriage replenisheth earth, but virginity Paradise; Elias, Eliseus, John Baptist, were Bachelors: Virginity is a precious Jewel, a fair garland, a never-fading flower; <sup>7</sup> for why was Daphne turned to a green bay-tree, but to shew that virginity is immortal?

 She is undone and meets no more regard.]

Virginity is a fine picture, as <sup>2</sup>Bonaventure calls it, a blessed thing in itself, and if you will believe a Papist, meritorious. And although there be some inconveniences, irksomeness, solitariness, &c. incident to such persons, want of those comforts, quæ agro assideat et curet ægrotum, fomentum paret, roget medicum, &c. embracing, dalliance, kissing, colling, &c. those furious motives and wanton pleasures a new married wife most part enjoys; yet they are but toys in respect, easily to be endured, if conferred to those frequent incumbrances of marriage; solitariness may be otherwise avoided with mirth, musick, good company, business, employment; in a word, <sup>3</sup>gaudebit minus, et minus dolebit; for their good nights he shall have good days. And methinks sometime or other, amongst so many rich Bachelors, a benefactor should be found to build a monastical College for old, decayed, deformed, or discontented maids to live together in, that have lost their first loves, or otherwise miscarried, or else are willing howsoever to lead a single life. The rest, I say, are toys in respect, and sufficiently recompensed by those innumerable contents and incomparable privileges of Virginity. Think of these things, confer <sup>4</sup> both lives, and consider last of all these commodious prerogatives a Bachelor hath, how well he is esteemed, how heartily welcome to all his friends, quam mentitis obsequiis, as Tertullian observes, with what counterfeit courtesies they will adore him, follow him, present him with gifts, hamatis donis: <sup>5</sup> it cannot be believed, (saith <sup>6</sup>Ammianus) with what humble service he shall be worshipped, how loved and respected: if he want children (and have means) he

Live a single man, marry not, and thou shalt soon perceive how those Hæredipetæ (for so they were called of old <sup>3</sup>) will seek after thee, bribe and flatter thee for thy favour, to be thine heir or executor: Arruntius and Haterius, those famous parasites in this kind, as Tacitus and <sup>4</sup>Seneca have recorded, shall not go beyond them. Periplectomenes, that good personate old man, delicium senis, well understood this in Plautus; for when Pleusides exhorted him to marry, that he might have children of his own, he readily replied in this sort,

Quando habeo multos cognatos, quid opus sit mihi liberis?
Nunc bene vivo et fortunatè, atque animo ut lubet.
Mea bona mea morte cognatis dicam interpartiant,
Illi apud me edunt, me curant, visunt quid agam, ecquid velim,
Qui mihi mittunt munera, ad prandium, ad cœnam vocant.<sup>5</sup>

Whilst I have kin, what need I brats to have?
Now I live well, and as I will, most brave.
And when I die, my goods I'll give away
To them that do invite me every day,
That visit me, and send me pretty toys,
And strive who shall do me most courtesies.

This respect thou shalt have in like manner, living as he did, a single man. But if thou marry once, <sup>6</sup>cogitato in omni vita te servum fore, bethink thyself what a slavery it is, what an heavy burthen thou shalt undertake, how hard a task thou art tied to (for as Hierome hath it, qui uxorem habet, debitor est, et uxoris servus alligatus<sup>7</sup>) and how continue, what squalor attends it, what irksomeness, what charges; for wife and children are a perpetual bill of charges; besides a Myriad of cares, miseries, and troubles; for as that Comical Plautus merrily and truly said, he that wants trouble must get to be Master of a Ship, or marry a

Some of our Astrologers will effect as much by Characteristical Images, ex Sigillis Hermetis, Salomonis, Chelyos, &c. mulieris imago habentis crines sparsos, &c. Our old Poets and Phantastical writers have many fabulous remedies for such as are love-sick, as that of Protesilaus' tomb in Philostratus, in his dialogue betwixt Phœnix and Vinitor. Vinitor upon occasion discoursing of the rare virtues of that shrine, telleth him, that Protesilaus' Altar and Tomb<sup>1</sup> cures almost all manner of diseases, consumptions, dropsies, quartan agues, sore eyes, and amongst the rest, such as are love-sick shall there be helped. Tormented him, and leapt down to the Sea,
And had no harm at all, but by and by His Love was gone and chased quite away.

This medicine Jos. Scaliger speaks of, Ausoniarum lectionum lib. 18., Salmuth in Pancirol. de 7. mundi mirac., and other writers. Pliny<sup>5</sup> reports, that amongst the Cyziceni, there is a Well consecrated to Cupid, of which, if any Lover taste, his passion is mitigated : and Anthony Verdurius, Imag. deorum, de Cupid. saith, that amongst the Antients there was <sup>6</sup>Amor Lethes, he took burning torches, and extinguished them in the river ; his statue was to be seen in the Temple of Venus Eleusina, of which Ovid makes mention, and saith, that all Lovers of old went thither on pilgrimage, that would be rid of their love-pangs.<sup>7</sup> Pausanias, in <sup>8</sup>Phocicis, writes of a Temple dedicated Veneri in speluncâ, to Venus in the vault, at Naupactus in Achaia (now Lepanto) in which your widows that would have second husbands made their supplications to the Goddess : all manner of suits concerning Lovers were commenced, and their grievances helped. The same Author, in Achaicis,<sup>9</sup> tells as much of the river <sup>10</sup>Selemnus in Greece ; if any Lover washed himself in it, by a secret virtue of that water (by reason of the extreme coldness belike) he was healed of Love's torments, SUBJECT. 5.—The last and best Cure of Love-Melancholy is, to let them have their desire.

THE last refuge and surest remedy, to be put in practice in the utmost place, when no other means will take effect, is, to let them go together, and enjoy one another; potissima cura est ut heros amasiâ suâ potiatur, saith Guianerius, cap. 15. tract. 15. Æsculapius himself, to this malady, cannot invent a better remedy, quàm ut amanti cedat amatum,<sup>2</sup> (Jason Pratensis) than that a Lover have his desire.

Et paritèr torulo bini jungantur in uno,
Et detur pulchro Æneæ Lavinia conjux.

And let them both be joined in a bed,
And let Æneas fair Lavinia wed.

'Tis the special cure, to let them bleed in venâ Hymenæiâ, for love is a pleurisy, and if it be possible, so let it be,

—optataque gaudia carpant.

When you have all done, saith Avicenna,<sup>6</sup> there is no speedier or safer course, than to join the parties together according to their desires and wishes, the custom and form of law; and so we have seen him quickly restored to his former health, that was languished away to skin and bones ; after his desire was satisfied, his discontent ceased, and we thought it strange ; our opinion is therefore, that in such cases Nature is to be obeyed. Aretæus, an old Author, lib. 3. cap. 3., hath an instance of a young man, 'when no other means could prevail, was so speedily relieved. What remains then but to join them in marriage?

Surreptim dare, mutuos fovere Amplexus licet, et licet jocari ;

they may then kiss and coll, lie and look babies in one another's eyes, as their sires before them did, they may then satiate themselves with love's pleasures, which they have so long wished and expected ;

Atque uno simul in toro quiescant,
Conjuncto simul ore suavientur,
Et somnos agitent quiete in una.

Yea, but hic labor, hoc opus,<sup>3</sup> this cannot conveniently be done, by reason of many and several impediments. Sometimes both parties themselves are not agreed : Parents, Tutors, Masters, Guardians, will not give consent ; Laws, Customs, Statutes hinder ; poverty, superstition, fear and suspicion : many men dote on one woman, semel et simul : she dotes as much on him, or them, and in modesty must not, cannot woo, as unwilling to confess, as willing to love : she dares not make it known, shew her affection, or speak her mind. And hard is the choice (as it is in Euphues) when one is compelled either by silence to die with grief, or by speaking to live with shame. In this case almost was the fair Lady Elizabeth, Edward the Fourth his daughter, when she was enamoured on Henry the Seventh, that noble young Prince, and new saluted King, when she brake forth into that passionate speech, 'O that I were worthy of that comely Prince ! but my father being dead, I want friends to motion such a matter. What shall I say ? I am all alone, and dare not open my mind to any. What if I acquaint my mother with it ? bashfulness forbids. What if some of the Lords ? audacity wants. O that I might but confer with him, perhaps in discourse I might let slip such a word that might discover mine intention ! How many modest maids may this concern, I am a poor servant, what shall I do? I am a fatherless child, and want means, I am blithe and buxom, young and lusty, but I have never a suitor, expectant stolidi ut ego illos rogatum veniam, as 'she said, a company of silly fellows, look belike that I should woo them and speak first: fain they would and cannot woo, being merely passive they may not make suit, with many such lets and inconveniences, which I know not; what shall we do in such a case? sing Fortune my Foe?<sup>3</sup>——

Some are so curious in this behalf, as those old Romans, our modern Venetians, Dutch and French, that if two parties dearly love, the one noble, the other ignoble, they may not by their Laws match, though equal otherwise in years, fortunes, education, and all good affection. In Germany, except they can prove their gentility by three descents, they scorn to match with them. A noble man must marry a noble woman: a Baron, a Baron's daughter; a Knight, a Knight's; a Gentleman, a Gentleman's; as slaters sort their slates, do they degrees and families. If she be never so rich, fair, well-qualified otherwise, they will make him forsake her. The Spaniards abhor all widows; the Turks repute them old women, if past five and twenty. But these are too severe Laws, and strict Customs, dandum aliquid amori,<sup>4</sup> we are all the sons of Adam, 'tis opposite to Nature, it ought not to be so. Again, he loves her most impotently, she loves not him, and so contra. Pan loved Echo, Echo Satyrus, Satyrus Lyda.

Tantum ipsius amans odiosus erat.*

They love and loath of all sorts, he loves her, she hates him; and is loathed of him on whom she dotes. Cupid hath two darts, one to force love, all of Gold, and that sharp,

And 'tis most true, many Gentlewomen are so nice, they scorn all suitors, crucify their poor Paramours, and think nobody good enough for them, as dainty to please as Daphne herself,

 Nec quid Hymen, quid amor, quid sint connubia curat.
 Many did woo her, but she scorn'd them still,
 And said she would not marry by her will.

One while they will not marry, as they say at least (when as they intend nothing less) another while not yet, when 'tis their only desire, they rave upon it. She will marry at last, but not him: he is a proper man indeed, and well qualified, but he wants means: another of her suitors hath good means, but he wants wit; one is too old, another too young, too deformed, she likes not his carriage: a third too loosely given, he is rich, but base born: she will be a Gentlewoman, a Lady, as her Sister is, as her Mother is: she is all out as fair, as well brought up, hath as good a portion, and she looks for as good a match, as Matilda or Dorinda: if not, she is resolved as yet to tarry; so apt are young maids to boggle at every object, so soon won or lost with every toy, so quickly diverted, so hard to be pleased. In the mean time, quot torsit amantes! one suitor pines away, languisheth in love, mori quot denique cogit! another sighs and grieves, she cares not: and which <sup>2</sup>Stroza objected to Ariadne,

Nec magis Euryali gemitu, lacrymisque moveris,
 Quàm prece turbati flectitur ora salu.

 Spernis, et insano cogis amore mori.

Is no more mov'd with those sad sighs and tears,
 Of her sweetheart, than raging sea with prayers:
 Thou scorn'st the fairest youth in all our city,
 And mak'st him almost mad for love to die.

They take a pride to prank up themselves, to make young men enamoured,

——<sup>3</sup>captare viros et spernere captos,

to dote on them, and to run mad for their sakes,

——<sup>4</sup>sed nullis illa movetur

men are as obstinate, and as curious in their choice, as tyrannically proud, insulting, deceitful, false-hearted, as irrefragable and peevish on the other side, Narcissus-like,

<sup>1</sup> Multi illum juvenes, multæ petiere puellæ,
Sed fuit in tenera tam dira superbia forma,
Nulli illum juvenes, nullæ petiere puellæ.

Young men and maids did to him sue,
But in his youth, so proud, so coy was he,
Young men and maids bade him adieu.

Echo wept and wooed him by all means above the rest, love me for pity, or pity me for love, but he was obstinate,

Ante, ait, emoriar quam sit tibi copia nostræ,<sup>2</sup>

he would rather die than give consent. Psyche ran whining after Cupid,

Et poscit te dia deum, puerumque puella;

Fair Cupid, thy fair Psyche to thee sues,
A lovely lass a fine young gallant woos;

but he rejected her nevertheless. Thus many Lovers do hold out so long, doting on themselves, stand in their own light, till in the end they come to be scorned and rejected, as Stroza's Gargiliana was,

Te juvenes, te odere senes, desertaque langues,
Quæ fueras procerum publica cura prius,

Both young and old do hate thee scorned now,
That once was all their joy and comfort too,

as Narcissus was himself,

———Who, despising many,
Died ere he could enjoy the love of any.

They begin to be contemned themselves of others, as he was of his shadow, and take up with a poor curate, or an old serving-man<sup>4</sup> at last, that might have had their choice of right good matches in their youth, like that generous Mare in <sup>5</sup>Plutarch, which would admit of none but great Horses, but when her tail was cut off, and mane shorn close, and she now saw herself so deformed in the water, when she came to drink, ab asino conscendi

Vincere vult animos, non satiare Venus.*

I love a maid, she loves me not : full fain
She would have me, but I not her again ;
So Love to crucify men's souls is bent :
But seldom doth it please or give content,

Their love danceth in a ring, and Cupid hunts them round about,
he dotes, is doted on again,

Dumque petit petitur, pariterque accendit et ardet,<sup>2</sup> their affection cannot be reconciled. Oftentimes they may and will not, 'tis their own foolish proceedings that mars all, they are too distrustful of themselves, too soon dejected : say she be rich, thou poor ; she young, thou old ; she lovely and fair, thou most ill-favoured and deformed ; she noble, thou base ; she spruce and fine, but thou an ugly Clown : nil desperandum,<sup>3</sup> there's hope enough yet : Mopso Nisa datur, quid non speremus amantes ?<sup>4</sup> put thyself forward once more, as unlikely matches have been and are daily made, see what will be the event. Many leave roses and gather thistles, loathe honey and love verjuice : our likings are as various as our palates. But commonly they omit opportunities, oscula qui sumpsit,<sup>5</sup> &c. they neglect the usual means and times.

He that will not when he may,
When he will he shall have nay.

They look to be wooed, sought after, and sued to. Most part they will and cannot, either for the above-named reasons, or for that there is a multitude of suitors equally enamoured, doting all alike ; and where one alone must speed, what shall become of the rest ? Hero was beloved of many, but one did enjoy her ; Penelope had a company of suitors, yet all missed of their aim. In such cases he or they must wisely and warily unwind themselves, unsettle his affections by those rules above prescribed, take her to you, God give you joy, Sir. The Fox in the Emblem would eat no grapes, but why? because he could not get them; care not thou for that which may not be had.

Many such inconveniences, lets and hindrances there are, which cross their projects, and crucify poor Lovers, which sometimes may, sometimes again cannot, be so easily removed. But put case they be reconciled all, agreed hitherto, suppose this love or good liking be betwixt two alone, both parties well pleased, there is mutuus amor, mutual love and great affection: yet their Parents, Guardians, Tutors, cannot agree, thence all is dashed, the match is unequal: one rich, another poor: durus pater, an hard-hearted, unnatural, a covetous Father will not marry his son, except he have so much money, ita in aurum omnes insaniunt, as <sup>3</sup>Chrysostom notes, nor join his daughter in marriage, to save her dowry, or for that he cannot spare her for the service she doth him, and is resolved to part with nothing whilst he lives, not a penny, though he may peradventure well give it, he will not till he dies, and then as a pot of money broke, it is divided amongst them that gaped after it so earnestly. Or else he wants means to set her out, he hath no money, and though it be to the manifest prejudice of her body and soul's health, he cares not, he will take no notice of it, she must and shall tarry. Many slack and careless Parents, iniqui patres, measure their children's affections by their own, they are now cold and decrepit themselves, past all such youthful conceits, and they will therefore starve their children's Genius, have them a pueris <sup>4</sup>illico nasci senes, they must not marry, nec earum affines esse rerum quas secum fert adolescentia: ex sua libidine moderatur quæ est nunc, non quæ olim fuit, as he said in the Comedy: they will stifle nature, their young bloods must not participate of youthful pleasures, but be as they are themselves, old on a sudden. And 'tis a general fault amongst most Parents in bestowing of their children, the Father wholly respects wealth, when through his own folly, riot, indiscretion, he hath embezzled his estate, to recover himself, he confines and prostitutes his eldest son's love and affection to some fool, or ancient, or deformed piece for money, and though his son utterly dislike, with Clitipho in the Comedy, Non possum, pater: if she be rich, Eia (he replies) ut elegans est, credas animum ibi esse; he must and shall have her, she is fair enough, young enough; if he look or hope to inherit his lands, he shall marry, not when or whom he loves, Archonidis hujus filiam, but whom his Father commands, when and where he likes, his affection must dance attendance upon him. His daughter is in the same predicament forsooth, as an empty boat<sup>2</sup> she must carry what, where, when, and whom, her Father will. So that in these businesses, the Father is still for the best advantage. Now the mother respects good kindred, most part the son a proper woman. All which <sup>3</sup>Livy exemplifies, dec. i. lib. 4. [cap. ix.]; a Gentleman and a Yeoman woo'd a wench in Rome (contrary to that statute that the gentry and commonalty must not match together) the matter was controverted: the Gentleman was preferred by the Mother's voice, quæ quam splendidissimis nuptiis iungi puellam volebat: the overseers stood for him that was most worth, &c. But parents ought not to be so strict in this behalf, Beauty is a dowry of itself all-sufficient, <sup>4</sup>Virgo formosa, et si oppidò pauper, abundè dotata est, <sup>5</sup>Rachel was so married by Jacob, and Bonaventure<sup>6</sup> in 4 sent. denies that he so much as venially sins, that marries a maid for comeliness of person. The Jews, Deut. 21. 11, sq., if they saw amongst the captives a beautiful woman, some small circumstances observed, might take her to wife. They should not be too severe in that kind, especially if there be no such urgent occasion, or grievous impediment. 'Tis good for a commonwealth. <sup>7</sup>Plato holds, that in their contracts young men should never avoid the affinity of poor folks, or seek after rich. Poverty and base parentage may be sufficiently recompensed by many other good qualities, modesty, virtue, religion, and choice bringing up. <sup>1</sup>I am poor, I confess, but am I therefore contemptible, and an object? Love itself is naked, the Graces, the Stars, and Hercules was clad in a Lion's skin. Give something to virtue, love, wisdom, favour, beauty, person; be not all for money. Besides, you must consider, that Amor cogi non potest, Love cannot be compelled, they must affect as they may: <sup>2</sup>Fatum est in partibus illis quas sinus abscondit, as the saying is, marriage and hanging goes by destiny, matches are made in Heaven.

It lies not in our power to love or hate,
For will in us is overrul'd by fate.<sup>3</sup>

A servant maid in 'Aristænetus loved her Mistress' Minion, which when her Dame perceived, furiosâ æmulatione, in a jealous humour she dragg'd her about the house by the hair of the head, and vexed her sore. The wench cried out, <sup>4</sup>O Mistress, fortune hath made my body your servant, but not my soul! Affections are free, not to be commanded. Moreover it may be to restrain their ambition, pride, and covetousness, to correct those hereditary diseases of a family, God in his just judgement assigns and permits such matches to be made. For I am of Plato and <sup>5</sup>Bodine's mind, that Families have their bounds and periods as well as Kingdoms, beyond which for extent or continuance they shall not exceed, six or seven hundred years, as they there illustrate by a multitude of examples, and which Peucer and <sup>6</sup>Melancthon approve, but in a perpetual tenor (as we see by many pedigrees of Knights, Gentlemen, Yeomen) continue as they began, for many descents with little alteration. Howsoever, let them I say, give something to youth, to love; they must not think they can fancy whom they appoint. <sup>7</sup>Amor enim non imperatur, affectus liber, siquis alius, et vices exigens, this is a free passion, as Pliny said in a Panegyrick of his, and may not be forced. Love craves liking, as the saying is, it requires mutual affections, a correspondency: invito non datur nec aufertur, it may not be learned,

Ovid himself cannot teach us how to love, Solomon describe, Apelles paint, or Helena express it. They must not therefore compel or intrude; <sup>1</sup>quis enim (as Fabius urgeth) amare alieno animo potest?<sup>2</sup> but consider withal the miseries of enforced marriages; take pity upon youth: and such above the rest as have daughters to bestow, should be very careful and provident to marry them in due time. Siracides, cap. 7. vers. 25, calls it a weighty matter to perform, so to marry a daughter to a man of understanding in due time. Virgines enim tempestivè locandæ, as <sup>3</sup>Lemnius admonisheth, lib. 1. cap. 6, virgins must be provided for in season, to prevent many diseases, of which <sup>4</sup>Rodericus a Castro, de morbis mulierum, lib. 2. cap. 3. and Lod. Mercatus, lib. 2. de mulier. affect. cap. 4, de melanch. virginum et viduarum, have both largely discoursed. And therefore as well to avoid these feral maladies, 'tis good to get them husbands betimes, as to prevent other gross inconveniences, and for a thing that I know besides; ubi nuptiarum tempus et ætas advenerit,<sup>5</sup> as Chrysostom adviseth, let them not defer it; they perchance will marry themselves else, or do worse. If Nevisanus the Lawyer do not impose, they may do it by right: for as he proves out of Curtius, and some other Civilians, Sylvæ Nup. lib. 2. numer. 30,<sup>6</sup> a Maid past 25 years of age, against her parents' consent, may marry such a one as is unworthy of, and inferior to her, and her Father by law must be compelled to give her a competent dowry. Mistake me not in the mean time, or think that I do apologize here for any headstrong unruly wanton flirts. I do approve that of S. Ambrose (comment in Genesis 24. 51.) which he hath written touching Rebecca's spousals, A woman should give unto her parents the choice of her husband,<sup>7</sup> lest she be reputed to be malapert and wanton, if she take upon her to make her own choice;<sup>8</sup> for she should rather seem to be desired by a man, than to desire a man herself. To those hard parents alone I retort that of Curtius (in the behalf of modester Maids) that are too remiss and careless of their due time and riper years. For if they tarry longer, to say truth, they are past date, and nobody will respect

A virgin, as the Poet holds, lasciva et petulans puella virgo, is like a flower, a Rose withered on a sudden.

So would much concord be in our city,
Less envy should we have, much more pity.

and he doth well that will accept of such a wife. Eubulides in <sup>3</sup>Aristænetus married a poor man's child, facie non illicetabili, of a merry countenance, and heavenly visage, in pity of her estate, and that quickly. Acontius, coming to Delos to sacrifice to Diana, fell in love with Cydippe, a noble lass, and wanting means to get her love, flung a golden apple into her lap, with this inscription upon it,

Juro tibi sane per mystica sacra Dianæ,
Me tibi venturum comitem, sponsumque futurum.<sup>4</sup>
I swear by all the Rites of Diana, let her means be what they will, take her without any more ado. <sup>1</sup>Dido and Aeneas were accidentally driven by a storm both into one cave, they made a match upon it; Masinissa was married to that fair captive Sophonisba, King Syphax' wife, the same day that he saw her first, to prevent Scipio and Laelius, lest they should determine otherwise of her.<sup>2</sup> If thou lovest the party, do as much: good education and beauty is a competent dowry, stand not upon money. Erant olim aurei homines (saith Theocritus) et adamantes redamabant,<sup>3</sup> in the golden world men did so (in the reign of <sup>4</sup>Ogyges belike, before staggering Ninus began to domineer) if all be true that is reported: and some few nowadays will do as much, here and there one; 'tis well done methinks, and all happiness befall them for so doing. <sup>5</sup>Leontius, a Philosopher of Athens, had a fair daughter called Athenais, multo corporis lepore ac Venere (saith mine author) of a comely carriage, he gave her no portion but her bringing up, occulto formæ præsigio, out of some secret fore-knowledge of her fortune, bestowing that little which he had amongst his other children. But she, thus qualified, was preferred by some friends to Constantinople to serve Pulcheria, the Emperor's sister, of whom she was baptized and called Eudocia. Theodosius the Emperor in short space took notice of her excellent beauty and good parts, and a little after, upon his sister's sole commendation, made her his wife: 'twas nobly done of Theodosius. <sup>6</sup>Rhodope was the fairest Lady in her days in all Egypt; she went to wash her, and by chance (her maids meanwhile looking but carelessly to her clothes) an Eagle stole away one of her shoes, and laid it in Psammetichus the King of Egypt's lap at Memphis: he wondered at the excellency of the shoe, and pretty foot, but more aquilæ factum, at the manner of the bringing of it: and caused forthwith proclamation to be made, that she that owned that shoe, should come presently to his Court; the Virgin came and was forthwith married to the King. I say this was heroically done, and like a Prince: I commend him for it, and all such as have means, that will either do (as he did) themselves, or so for love, &c. marry their children. If he be rich, let him take such a one as wants, if she be virtuously given ; for as Siracides cap. 7. ver. 19. adviseth, Forego not a wife and good woman ; for her grace is above gold. If she have fortunes of her own, let her make a man. Danaus of Lacedæmon had a many daughters to bestow, and means enough for them all, he never stood enquiring after great matches, as others used to do, but <sup>1</sup> sent for a company of brave young gallants home to his house, and bid his daughters choose every one one, whom she liked best, and take him for her husband, without any more ado. This act of his was much approved in those times. But in this Iron age of ours we respect riches alone (for a maid must buy her husband now, with a great dowry, if she will have him) covetousness and filthy lucre mars all good matches, or some such by-respects. Crales, a Servian Prince (as Nicephorus Gregoras, Rom. Hist. lib. 6, [cap. 9,] relates it) was an earnest suitor to Eudocia the Emperor's sister ; though her brother much desired it, yet she could not <sup>2</sup> abide him, for he had three former wives, all basely abused ; but the Emperor still, Cralis amicitiam magni faciens, because he was a great Prince, and a troublesome neighbour, much desired his affinity, and to that end betrothed his own daughter Simonida to him, a little girl five years of age (he being forty-five) and five<sup>3</sup> years elder than the Emperor himself : such disproportionable and unlikely matches can wealth and a fair fortune make. And yet not that alone, it is not only money, but sometimes vain-glory, pride, ambition, do as much harm as wretched covetousness itself in another extreme. If a Yeoman have one sole daughter, he must over-match her, above her birth and calling, to a Gentleman forsooth, because of her great portion, too good for one of her own rank, as he supposeth. A Gentleman's daughter and heir must be married to a Knight [banneret's] eldest son at least ; and a Knight's only daughter to a Baron himself, or an Earl, and so upwards, her great dowry deserves it. And thus striving for more honour to their wealth, they undo their children, many discontents follow, and oftentimes they ruin their Families. <sup>4</sup> Paulus Jovius gives instance in Galeatius the second, that Heroical Duke of Milan, externas affinitates, decoras quidem regio fastu, sed sibi et posteris

damnosas et ferè exitiales quæsit; he married his eldest son John Galeatius to Isabella, the King of France his sister, but she was socero tam gravis, ut ducentis millibus aureorum constiterit, her entertainment at Milan was so costly, that it a'most undid him. His daughter Violanta was married to Lionel, Duke of Clarence, the youngest son to Edward the Third, King of England, but, ad ejus adventum tantæ opes tam admirabili liberalitate profusæ sunt, ut opulentissimorum regum splendorem superasse videretur, he was welcomed with such incredible magnificence, that a King's purse was scarce able to bear it; for besides many rich presents of horses, arms, plate, money, jewels, &c. he made one dinner for him and his company, in which were thirty-two messes, and as much provision left, ut relatæ à mensa dapes decem millibus hominum sufficerent, as would serve ten thousand men: but a little after Lionel died, novæ nuptæ et intempestivis conviviis operam dans, &c. and to the Duke's great loss, the solemnity was ended. So can titles, honours, ambition, make many brave, but unfortunate matches, of all sides for by-respects, though both crazed in body and mind, most unwilling, averse, and often unfit; so love is banished, and we feel the smart of it in the end. But I am too lavish peradventure in this subject.

Another let or hindrance is strict and severe Discipline, Laws and rigorous customs that forbid men to marry at set times, and in some places: as Prentices, Servants, Collegiates, States of lives in Copy-holds, or in some base inferior Offices, 'velle licet in such cases, potiri non licet,<sup>2</sup> as he said. They see but as prisoners through a grate, they covet and catch but Tantalus à labris,<sup>3</sup> &c. Their love is lost, and vain it is in such an estate to attempt. 'Gravissimum est adamare nec potiri, 'tis a [very] grievous thing to love and not enjoy. They may indeed, I deny not, marry if they will, and have free choice some of them; but in the mean time their case is desperate, lupum auribus tenent,<sup>4</sup> they hold a Wolf by the ears, they must either burn or starve. 'Tis Cornutum sophisma,<sup>5</sup> hard to resolve. If they marry, they forfeit their estates, they are undone and starve themselves through beggary and want: if they do not marry, in this heroical passion they furiously rage, are tormented, and torn to pieces by their predominate affections.

Every man hath not the gift of continence, let him <sup>1</sup> pray for it then, as Beza adviseth in his Tract de Divortiiis, because God hath so called him to a single life, in taking away the means of marriage: <sup>2</sup> Paul would have gone from Mysia to Bithynia, but the Spirit suffered him not, and thou wouldst peradventure be a married man with all thy will, but that protecting Angel holds it not fit. The devil too sometimes may divert by his ill suggestions, and mar many good matches, as the same <sup>3</sup> Paul was willing to see the Romans, but hindered of Satan, he could not. There be those that think they are necessitated by Fate, their Stars have so decreed, and therefore they grumble at their hard fortune, they are well inclined to marry, but one rub or other is ever in the way: I know what Astrologers say in this behalf, what Ptolemy, quadripartit. Tract. 4. cap. 4, Skoner, lib. 1. cap. 12, what Leovititius, genitur. exempl. 1. which Sextus ab Heminga takes to be the Horoscope of Hieronimus Wolfius, what Pezelius, Origanus, and Leovititius his illustrator, Garceus, cap. 12. what Junctine, Protanus, Campanella, what the rest (to omit those Arabian conjectures à parte Conjugii, à parte lasciviæ, triplicitates Veneris, &c. and those resolutions upon a question, an amicâ potiatur, &c.) determine in this behalf, viz. an sit natus conjugem habiturus, facile an difficillè sit sponsam impetraturus, quot conjuges, quo tempore, quales decernantur nato uxores, de mutuo amore conjugum, both in men's and women's genitures, by the examination of the seventh house, the Almutens,<sup>4</sup> Lords and Planets there, a ☿<sup>a</sup> ☿<sup>a</sup> ☿<sup>a</sup> &c. by particular Aphorisms, Si dominus 7<sup>mæ</sup> in 7<sup>ma</sup> vel secunda nobilem decernit uxorem, servam aut ignobilem si duodecima. Si Venus in 12<sup>ma</sup>, &c. with many such, too tedious to relate. Yet let no man be troubled, or find himself grieved with such Predictions, as Hier. Wolfius well saith in his Astrological <sup>5</sup> Dialogue, non sunt prætoriana decreta, they be but conjectures, the Stars incline, but not enforce,

Sidera corporibus præsent coelestia nostris,
Sunt ea de vili condita namque luto
Cogere sed nequeunt animum ratione fruentem,
Quippe sub imperio solius ipse dei est.<sup>6</sup>

Wisdom, diligence, discretion, may mitigate, if not quite alter, such decrees, Fortuna sua à cujusque fingitur moribus,<sup>1</sup> Qui cauti, prudentes, voti compotes,<sup>2</sup> &c. Let no man then be terrified or molested with such Astrological Aphorisms, or be much moved, either to vain hope or fear, from such predictions, but let every man follow his own free will in this case, and do as he sees cause. Better it is indeed to marry than burn for their soul's health, but for their present fortunes by some other means to pacify themselves, and divert the stream of this fiery torrent, to continue as they are, rest satisfied, lugentes virginitalis florem sic aruisse, deploring their misery with that Eunuch in Libanius,<sup>3</sup> since there is no help or remedy, and with Jephthah's daughter to bewail their virginities.

Of like nature is superstition, those rash vows of Monks and Friars, and such as live in religious Orders, but far more tyrannical and much worse. Nature, youth, and his furious passion forcibly inclines, and rageth on the one side: but their Order and Vow checks them on the other.

What Merits and Indulgences they heap unto themselves by it, what commodities, I know not; but I am sure, from such rash vows, and inhuman manner of life proceed many inconveniences, many diseases, many vices, masturbation, satyriasis, <sup>7</sup> priapismus, melancholy, madness, fornication, adultery, buggary, sodomy, theft, murder, and all manner of mischiefs: read but Bale's Catalogue of Sodomites at the Visitation of Abbies here in England, Henry Stephan, his Apol. for Herodotus, that which Utricus writes in one of his Epistles, that Pope Gregory, when he saw 6,000 skulls and bones of infants taken out of a fish-pond near a Nunnery, thereupon retracted that decree of Priests' marriages, which was the cause of such a slaughter, was much grieved at it, and purged himself by repentance. Read many such, and then ask what is to be done, is this vow to be broke or not? No, saith Bellarmino, cap. 38. lib. de Monach., melius est scortari et uri quam de voto cælibatus ad nuptias transire, better burn or fly out than to break thy vow. And Coster, in his Enchirid. de cælibat. sacerdotum, saith it is absolutely gravius peccatum, <sup>1</sup>a greater sin for a Priest to marry, than to keep a concubine at home. Gregory de Valence, cap. 6. de cælibat. maintains the same, as those Essæi<sup>2</sup> and Montanists of old. Insomuch that many Votaries, out of a false persuasion of merit and holiness in this kind, will sooner die than marry, though it be to the saving of their lives. <sup>3</sup>Anno 1419, Pius 2, Pope, James Rossa, Nephew to the King of Portugal, and then elect Archbishop of Lisbon, being very sick at Florence, <sup>4</sup>when his Physicians told him, that his disease was such, he must either lie with a wench, marry, or die, cheerfully chose to die. Now they commended him for it: but S. Paul teacheth otherwise, Better marry than burn,<sup>5</sup> and as S. Hierome gravely delivers it, Aliæ sunt leges Cæsarum, aliæ Christi, aliud Papianus, aliud Paulus noster præcipit,<sup>6</sup> there's a difference betwixt God's ordinances, and men's laws: and therefore Cyprian, Epist. 8, boldly denounceth, impium est, adulterum est, sacrilegum est, quodcumque humano furore statuitur, ut dispositio divina violetur, it is abominable, impious, adulterous, and sacrilegious, what men make and ordain after their own furies to cross God's laws, <sup>7</sup>Georgius Wicelius, one of their own arch Divines (Inspect. Eccles. pag. 18,) exclaims against it, and all such rash monastical vows, and would have such persons seriously to consider what they do, whom they admit, ne in posterum querantur de inanibus stupris, lest they repent it at last. For either, as he follows it, <sup>8</sup>you must allow them Concubines, or suffer them to marry, for scarce shall you find three Priests of three thousand, qui per ætatem non ament, that are not troubled with burning lust [in their prime]. Wherefore I conclude, it is an unnatural and impious thing to bar men of this Christian liberty, too severe and inhuman an edict.

Many Lay-men repine still at Priests' marriages above the rest, and not at Clergymen only, but all of the meaner sort and condition, they would have none marry but such as are rich and able to maintain wives, because their parish belike shall be pestered with orphans, and the world full of beggars: but <sup>2</sup> these are hard-hearted, unnatural, monsters of men, shallow politicians, they do not <sup>3</sup> consider that a great part of the world is not yet inhabited as it ought, how many Colonies into America, Terra Australis Incognita, Africa, may be sent! Let them consult with S<sup>r</sup>. William Alexander's Book of Colonies, Orpheus Junior's Golden Fleece, Captain Whitburne, Mr. Hagthorpe, &c. and they shall surely be otherwise informed. Those politick Romans were of another mind, they thought their City and Country could never be too populous. Aurian the Emperor said, he had rather have men than money, malle se hominum adjectione ampliare imperium quam pecuniâ. <sup>4</sup> Augustus Cæsar made an oration in Rome ad cælibes to persuade them to marry; some countries compelled them to marry of old, as <sup>5</sup> Jews, Turks, Indians, Chinese, amongst the rest in these days, who much wonder at our discipline to suffer so many idle persons to live in Monasteries, and often marvel how they can live honest. <sup>7</sup> In the Isle of Maragnan the Governor and petty King there did wonder at the Frenchmen, and admire how so many Friars, and the rest of their company could live without wives, they thought it a thing impossible, and would not believe it. our multitudes of religious houses, observe our numbers of Monasteries all over Europe, 18 Nunneries in Padua, in Venice 31 Cloisters of Monks, 28 of Nuns, &c. ex ungue leonem,<sup>1</sup> 'tis to this proportion in all other Provinces and Cities, what would they think, do they live honest? Let them dissemble as they will, I am of Tertullian's mind, that few can continue but by compulsion. <sup>2</sup>O chastity (saith he) thou art a rare Goddess in the world, not so easily got, seldom continue: thou may'st now and then be compelled either for defect of nature, or if discipline persuade, decrees enforce: or for some such by-respects, sullenness, discontent, they have lost their first loves, may not have whom they will themselves, want of means, rash vows, &c. But can he willingly contain? I think not. Therefore, either out of commiseration of human imbecility, in policy, or to prevent a far worse inconvenience, for they hold it some of them as necessary as meat and drink, and because vigour of youth, the state and temper of most men's bodies, do so furiously desire it, they have heretofore in some Nations liberally admitted polygamy and stews, an hundred thousand Courtisans in grand Cairo in Egypt, as <sup>3</sup>Radzivilius observes, are tolerated, besides boys: how many at Fessa, Rome, Naples, Florence, Venice, &c. and still in many other Provinces and Cities of Europe they do as much, because they think young men, Church-men, and servants amongst the rest, can hardly live honest. The consideration of this belike made Vibius, the Spaniard, when his friend <sup>4</sup>Crassus that rich Roman gallant lay hid in the Cave ut voluptatis quam ætas illa desiderat copiam faceret, to gratify him the more, send two <sup>5</sup>lusty lasses to accompany him all the while he was there imprisoned; and Surenas the Parthian General, when he warred against the Romans, to carry about with him 200 Concubines,<sup>6</sup> as the Swiss Soldiers do now commonly their wives. But because this course is not generally approved, but rather contradicted as unlawful, and abhorred,<sup>7</sup> in most Countries they do much encourage them to marriage, give great rewards for such as have many children, and mulct those that will not marry, Ius trium liberorum, and in A. Gellius, lib. 2. cap. 15, Ælian, lib. 6.

They account him in some Countries unfortunate, that dies without a wife, a most unhappy man, as <sup>5</sup>Boethius infers, and if at all happy, yet infortunio felix, unhappy in his supposed happiness. They commonly deplore his estate, and much lament him for it; O my sweet son! &c. See Lucian, de luctu, [§, 13.] Sands, fol. 83, &c.

Yet notwithstanding many with us are of the opposite part, they are married themselves, and for others, let them burn, fire, and flame, they care not, so they be not troubled with them. Some are too curious, and some too covetous, they may marry when they will, both for ability and means, but so nice, that except, as Theophilus, the Emperor, was presented, by his Mother Euphrosyne, with all the rarest beauties of the Empire in the great Chamber of his Palace at once, and bid to give a golden apple to her he liked best.<sup>6</sup> If they might so take and choose whom they list out of all the fair Maids their Nation affords, they could happily condescend to marry: otherwise, &c. why should a man marry, saith another Epicurean rout, what's matrimony but a matter of money? why should free nature be entrenched on, confined or obliged, to this or that man or woman, with these manacles of body and goods? &c. There are those too, that dearly love, admire and follow women, all their lives long, sponsi Penelopes,<sup>7</sup> never well but in their companies, wistly gazing on their beauties, observing close, hanging after them, dallying still with them, and yet dare not, will not, marry. Many poor people, and of the meaner sort, are too distrustful of God's providence, they will not, dare not for such worldly respects, fear of want, woes, miseries, or that they shall light as <sup>8</sup>Lemnius saith, on a scold, a

But you shall have the story as he relates himself, in his Commentaries on the sixth of Apuleius. For a long time I lived a single life, et ab uxore ducenda semper abhorruî, nec quicquam libero lecto censui jucundius. I could not abide marriage, but as a rambler, erraticus ac volaticus amator (to use his own words) per multiplices amores discurrebam, I took a snatch where I could get it, nay more, I railed at marriage downright, and in a publick auditory when I did interpret that sixth Satire of Juvenal, out of Plutarch and Seneca, I did heap up all the dicteries<sup>7</sup> I could against women; but now recant with Stesichorus, Palinodiam cano, nec pœnitet censeri in ordine maritorum, I approve of marriage, I am glad I am a <sup>8</sup>married man, I am heartily glad I have a wife, so sweet a wife, so noble a wife, so young, so chaste a wife, so loving a wife, and I do wish and desire all other men to marry, and especially Scholars; that as of old Marcia did by Hortensius, Terentia by Tullius, Calphurnia to Plinius, Pudentilla to Apuleius,<sup>9</sup> hold the candle whilst their husbands did meditate and write, so theirs may do to them, and as my dear Camilla saith our Latin Homer,<sup>2</sup> she is still the same in sickness and in health, his eye, his hand, his bosom-friend, his partner at all times, his other self, not to be separated by any calamity, but ready to share all sorrow, discontent, and as the Indian women do, live and die with him, nay more, to die presently for him. Admetus, King of Thessaly, when he lay upon his death-bed, was told by Apollo's Oracle, that if he could get any body to die for him, he should live longer yet, but when all refused, his parents, etsi decrepiti,<sup>3</sup> friends and followers, forsook him, Alcestis<sup>4</sup> his wife, though young, most willingly undertook it; what more can be desired or expected? And although on the other side there be an infinite number of bad husbands (I should rail downright against some of them) able to discourage any women; yet there be some good ones again, and those most observant of Marriage-Rites. An honest Country-fellow (as Fulgosus relates it) in the Kingdom of Naples,<sup>5</sup> at plough by the Sea side, saw his wife carried away by Mauritanian Pirates, he ran after in all haste, up to the chin first, and when he could wade no longer, swam, calling to the Governour of the ship to deliver his wife, or if he must not have her restored, to let him follow as a prisoner, for he was resolved to be a Galley-slave, his drudge, willing to endure any misery, so that he might but enjoy his dear wife. The Moors, seeing the man's constancy, and relating the whole matter to their Governor at Tunis, set them both free, and gave them an honest pension to maintain themselves during their lives. I could tell many stories to this effect; but put case it often prove otherwise, because marriage is troublesome, wholly therefore to avoid it is no argument; <sup>6</sup>he that will avoid trouble must avoid the world (Eusebius præpar. Evangel. 5. cap. 50.) Some trouble there is in marriage, I deny not. Etsi grave sit matrimonium, saith Erasmus, edulcatur tamen multis, &c. yet there be many things to <sup>7</sup>sweeten it, a pleasant wife, placens uxor, pretty children, dulces nati, they [i.e. women] are necessary evils, and for our own ends we must make use of them to have issue, Supplet Venus ac restituit humanum genus, and to propagate the Church. For to what end is a man born? why lives he, but to increase the world? and how shall he do that well, if he do not marry? Matrimonium humano generi immortalitatem tribuit, saith Nevisanus, matrimony makes us immortal, and according to Tacitus, 'tis firmissimum imperii munimentum, the sole and chief prop of an Empire.

<sup>7</sup> which Pelopidas objected to Epaminondas, he was an unworthy member of a Common-wealth, that left not a child after him to defend it, and as Trismegistus to his son Tatius, have no commerce with a single man: holding belike that a bachelor could not live honestly as he should, and with Georgius Wicelius, a great Divine and holy man, who of late by twenty-six arguments commends marriage as a thing most necessary for all kind of persons, most laudable and fit to be embraced: and is persuaded withal, that no man can live and die religiously, and as he ought, without a wife, persuassus neminem posse neque piè vivere, neque benè mori citra uxorem, he is false, an enemy to the Common-wealth, injurious to himself, destructive to the world, an apostate to nature, a rebel against Heaven and Earth. Let our wilful, obstinate, and stale Bachelors ruminat of this. If we could live without wives, as Marcellus Numidicus said in A. Gellius, we would all want them,

Necessity therefore compels us to marry.

But what do I trouble myself, to find arguments to persuade to, or commend marriage? behold a brief abstract of all that which I have said, and much more, succinctly, pithily, pathetically, perspicuously, and elegantly delivered in twelve motions to mitigate the miseries of marriage, by <sup>3</sup>Jacobus de Voragine.

  1. Hast thou means? thou hast one to keep and increase it.
  2. Hast none? thou hast one to help to get it.
  3. Art in prosperity? thine happiness is doubled.
  4. Art in adversity? she'll comfort, assist, bear a part of thy burden to make it more tolerable.

5. Art at home? she'll drive away melancholy.
6. Art abroad? she looks after thee going from home, wishes for thee in thine absence, and joyfully welcomes thy return.
7. There's nothing delightful without society, no society so sweet as matrimony.
8. The band of conjugal love is adamantine.
9. The sweet company of kinsmen increaseth, the number of parents is doubled, of brothers, sisters, nephews.
10. Thou art made a father by a fair and happy issue.
11. Moses curseth the barrenness of matrimony, how much more a single life?
12. If nature escape not punishment, surely thy will shall not avoid it.

All this is true, say you, and who knows it not? but how easy a matter is it to answer these motives, and to make an Anti-parodia quite opposite unto it? To exercise myself I will essay.

1. Hast thou means? thou hast one to spend it.
2. Hast none? thy beggary is increased.
3. Art in prosperity? thy happiness is ended.
4. Art in adversity? like Job's wife, she'll aggravate thy misery, vex thy soul, make thy burden intolerable.
5. Art at home? she'll scold thee out of doors.
6. Art abroad? If thou be wise, keep thee so, she'll perhaps graft horns in thine absence, scowl on thee coming home.
7. Nothing gives more content than solitariness, no solitariness like this of a single life.
8. The band of marriage is adamantine, no hope of loosing it, thou art undone.
9. Thy number increaseth, thou shalt be devoured by thy wife's friends.
10. Thou art made a cornuto by an unchaste wife, and shalt bring up other folks' children instead of thine own.
11. Paul commends marriage, yet he prefers a single life.
12. Is marriage honourable? What an immortal crown belongs to virginity!

So Siracides himself speaks as much as may be for and against women, so doth almost every Philosopher plead pro and con, every Poet thus argues the case (though what cares vulgus homi-

There will not be found, I hope, <sup>2</sup> no, not in that severe family of Stoicks, who shall refuse to submit his grave beard, and supercilious looks to the clipping of a wife, or disagree from his fellows in this point. Can the world afford a better sight, sweeter content, a fairer object, a more gracious aspect?

Since then this of marriage is the last and best refuge and cure of Heroical love, all doubts are cleared, and impediments removed; I say again, what remains, but that according to both their desires, they be happily joined, since it cannot otherwise be helped. ### SECT. III. MEMB. I.

SUBJECT. I.—Jealousy, its Equivocations, Name, Definition, Extent, several kinds; of Princes, Parents, Friends. In Beasts, Men: before marriage, as Corrivals; or after, as in this place.

Valescus de Taranta, cap. de Melancholiâ, Ælian Montaltus, Felix Platerus, Guianerius, put Jealousy for a cause of Melancholy, others for a Symptom; because melancholy persons, amongst these passions and perturbations of the mind, are most obnoxious to it. But methinks for the latitude it hath, and that prerogative above other ordinary Symptoms, it ought to be treated of as a Species apart, being of so great and eminent note, so furious a passion, and almost of as great extent as Love itself, as <sup>2</sup>Benedetto Varchi holds, No Love without a mixture of Jealousy, qui non zelat, non amat.<sup>3</sup> For these causes I will dilate, and treat of it by itself, as a bastard-branch, or kind of Love-Melancholy, which, as Heroical Love goeth commonly before marriage, doth usually follow, torture, and crucify in like sort, deserves therefore to be rectified alike, requires as much care and industry, in setting out the several causes of it, prognosticks and cures. Which I have more willingly done, that he that is or hath been jealous, may see his error as in a glass; he that is not, may learn to detest, avoid it himself, and dispossess others that are any wise affected with it.

which the Lover hath of the party he chiefly loveth, lest he or she should be enamoured of another: or any eager desire to enjoy some beauty alone, to have it proper to himself only: a fear or doubt, lest any foreigner should participate or share with him in his love. Or (as <sup>1</sup>Scaliger adds) a fear of losing her favour, whom he so earnestly affects. Cardan calls it, a <sup>2</sup>zeal for love, and a kind of envy, lest any man should beguile us. <sup>3</sup>Ludovicus Vives defines it in the very same words, or little differing in sense.

There be many other Jealousies, but improperly so called all; as that of Parents, Tutors, Guardians, over their children, friends whom they love, or such as are left to their wardship or protection.

Storax, non rediit hac nocte a cœna Æschinus,
Neque servulorum quispiam qui adversum ierant: <sup>4</sup>

[Storax, young master's not returned from supper,
Nor any of the slaves that went to meet him:]

as the old man in the Comedy cried out in passion, and from a solicitous fear and care he had of his adopted son; <sup>5</sup>not of beauty, but lest they should miscarry, do amiss, or any way discredit, disgrace (as Vives notes) or endanger themselves and us. <sup>6</sup>Ægeus was so solicitous for his son Theseus, (when he went to fight with the Minotaur) of his success, lest he should be foiled, <sup>7</sup>Prona est timori semper in pejus fides. We are still apt to suspect the worst in such doubtful cases, as many wives in their husbands' absence, fond mothers in their children's, lest if absent they should be misled or sick, and are continually expecting news from them, how they do fare, and what is become of them, they cannot endure to have them long out of their sight. Oh my sweet son! O my dear child! &c. Paul was jealous over the Church of Corinth, as he confesseth, 2 Cor. 11. 2, 3, with a godly jealousy, to present them a pure Virgin to Christ; and he was afraid still lest, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so their minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ. God himself in some sense is said to be jealous, <sup>8</sup>I am a jealous God, and will visit: so Psal. 79. 5, Shall thy jealousy burn like fire for ever? But these are improperly called Jealousies, and by a Metaphor, to shew the care and solicitude they have of them. Although some Jealousies express all the Symptoms of this which we treat of, fear, sorrow, anguish, anxiety, suspicion, hatred, &c. the object only varied. That of some fathers is very eminent to their sons and heirs; for though they love them dearly being children, yet now coming towards man's estate they may not well abide them, the son and heir is commonly sick of the father, and the father again may not well brook his eldest son, inde simultates, plerumque contentiones et inimicitiae. But that of Princes is most notorious, as when they fear corrivals, (if I may so call them) successors, emulators, subjects, or such as they have offended. <sup>1</sup>Omnisque potestas impatiens consortis erit: they are still suspicious, lest their authority should be diminished, <sup>2</sup>as one observes; and as Commines hath it, <sup>3</sup>it cannot be expressed what slender causes they have of their grief and suspicion, a secret disease, that commonly lurks and breeds in Princes' families. Sometimes it is for their honour only, as that of Adrian the Emperor, <sup>4</sup>that killed all his emulators. Saul envied David; Domitian Agricola, because he did excel him, obscure his honour as he thought, eclipse his fame. Juno turned Prætus' daughters into Kine, for that they contended with her for beauty; Cyparissæ, King Eteocles' children, were envied of the Goddesses for their excellent good parts, and dancing amongst the rest, saith <sup>5</sup>Constantine, and for that cause flung down head-long from heaven, and buried in a pit, but the earth took pity of them, and brought out cypress trees to preserve their memories. <sup>6</sup>Niobe, Arachne, and Marsyas can testify as much. But it is most grievous when it is for a kingdom itself, or matters of commodity, it produceth lamentable effects, especially amongst Tyrants, in despotico imperio, and such as are more feared than beloved of their subjects, that get and keep their sovereignty by force, and fear; <sup>7</sup>Quod civibus tenere te invitis scias, &c. as Phalaris, Dionysius, Periander held theirs. For though fear, cowardice, and jealousy, in Plutarch's opinion, be the common causes of tyranny, as in Nero, Caligula, Tiberius, yet most take them to be symptoms. For <sup>1</sup>what slave, what hang-man (as Bodine well expresseth this passion, l. 2. c. 5. de rep.) can so cruelly torture a condemned person, as this fear and suspicion? Fear of death, infamy, torments, are those furies and vultures that vex and disquiet tyrants, and torture them day and night, with perpetual terrors and affrights, envy, suspicion, fear, desire of revenge, and a thousand such disagreeing perturbations, turn and affright the soul out of the hinges of health, and more grievously wound and pierce, than those cruel masters can exasperate and vex their prentices or servants, with clubs, whips, chains, and tortures. Many terrible examples we have in this kind, amongst the Turks especially, many jealous outrages; <sup>2</sup>Selimus killed Cornutus his youngest brother, five of his Nephews, Mustapha Bassa, and divers others. <sup>3</sup>Bajazet, the second Turk, jealous of the valour and greatness of Achmet Bassa, caused him to be slain. <sup>4</sup>Solyman the Magnificent murdered his own Son Mustapha; and 'tis an ordinary thing amongst them to make away their brothers, or any competitors, at the first coming to the Crown: 'tis all the solemnity they use at their fathers' funerals. What mad pranks in his jealous fury did Herod of old commit in Jewry, when he massacred all the children of a year old! <sup>5</sup>Valens the Emperor in Constantinople, when as he left no man alive of quality in his kingdom that had his name begun with Theo; Theodoti, Theognosti, Theodosii, Theoduli, &c. they went all to their long home, because a wizard told him that name should succeed in his Empire! And what furious designs hath <sup>6</sup>Io. Basilus, that Muscovian tyrant, practised of late! It is a wonder to read that strange suspicion, which Suetonius reports of Claudius Cæsar, [cap. 10.] and of Domitian, [cap. 14.] they were afraid of every man they saw: and which Herodian [reports] of Antoninus and Geta, those two jealous brothers, the one could not endure so much as the other's servants, but made away him, his chiefest followers, and all that belonged to him, or were his well-wishers.

 But to all his people universally ;
 And not to them but for their love alone,
 Which they account as placed worthily.
 He is so set, he hath no cause to be Jealous, or dreadful of disloyalty ;
 The pedestal whereon his greatness stands,
 Is held of all our hearts, and all our hands.

But I rove, I confess. These equivocations, Jealousies, and many such, which crucify the souls of men, are not here properly meant, or in this distinction of ours included, but that alone which is for beauty, tending to love, and wherein they can brook no corrival, or endure any participation : and this Jealousy belongs as well to brute beasts, as men. Some creatures, saith <sup>2</sup>Vives, Swans, Doves, Cocks, Bulls, &c. are jealous as well as men, and as much moved, for fear of communion.

In Bulls, Horses, Goats, this is most apparently discerned ; Bulls especially, alium in pascuis non admittit, he will not admit another Bull to feed in the same pasture, saith <sup>5</sup>Oppian : which Stephanus Bathorius, late king of Poland<sup>6</sup> used as an Impress, with that motto, non capit Regnum duos.<sup>7</sup> R. T. in his blason of Jealousy, telleth a story of a Swan about Windsor ; that finding a strange Cock with his mate, did swim I know not how many miles after to kill him, and when he had done so, came back and killed his hen ; a certain truth, he saith, done upon Thames, as many Water-men, and neighbour Gentlemen can tell. Fidem suam liberet ; for my part, I do believe it may be true ; for Swans have ever been branded with that Epithet of Jealousy.

I have read as much of <sup>5</sup>Crocodiles; and if Peter Martyr's authority be authentick, legat. Babylonicæ, lib. 3, you shall have a strange tale to that purpose confidently related. Another story of the jealousy of dogs, see in Hieron. Fabricius Tract, 3, cap. 5. de loquelâ animalium.

But this furious passion is most eminent in men, and is as well amongst Bachelors, as married men. If it appear amongst Bachelors, we commonly call them rivals or corrivals, a metaphor derived from a River, rivales à rivo; for as a River, saith Acron in Hor. art. Poet. and Donat. in Ter. Eunuch. divides a common ground betwixt two men, and both participate of it; so is a woman indifferent betwixt two suitors, both likely to enjoy her; and thence comes this emulation, which breaks out many times into tempestuous storms, and produceth lamentable effects, murder itself, with much cruelty, many single combats. They cannot endure the least injury done unto them before their Mistress, and in her defence will bite off one another's noses; they are most impatient of any flout, disgrace, least emulation or participation in that kind. <sup>7</sup>Lacerat lacertum Largi mordax Memmius. Memmius the Roman (as Tully tells the story, de oratore lib. 2. [59. 240.]) being corrival with Largus at Terracina, bit him by the arm, which fact of his was so famous, that it afterwards grew to a proverb in those parts. <sup>8</sup>Phædria could not abide his corrival Thraso; for when Parmeno demanded, numquid aliud imperas? whether he would command him any more service: No more (saith he) but to speak in his behalf, and to drive away his corrival if he could. Constantine, in the eleventh book of his husbandry, cap. 11, hath a pleasant tale of the Pine-tree: <sup>1</sup>she was once a fair Maid, whom Phineus and Boreas two corrivals, dearly sought; but jealous Boreas broke her neck, &c. And in his 18. chapter he telleth another tale of <sup>2</sup>Mars, that in his jealousy slew Adonis. Petronius calleth this passion amantium furiosam æmulationem, a furious emulation; <sup>3</sup>and their symptoms are well expressed by Sir Geoffrey Chaucer in his first Canterbury tale. It will make the nearest and dearest friends fall out; they will endure all other things to be common, goods, lands, monies, participate of each other's pleasures, and take in good part any disgraces, injuries in another kind; but as Propertius well describes it in an Elegy of his, in this they will suffer nothing, have no corrivals.

 Her to myself I crave,
 Nay, Love himself I'll not endure
 My Rival for to have.

This Jealousy which I am to treat of, is that which belongs to married men, in respect of their own wives; to whose estate, as no sweetness, pleasure, happiness, can be compared in the world, if they live quietly and lovingly together; so if they disagree or be jealous, those bitter pills of sorrow and grief, disastrous mischiefs, mischances, tortures, gripings, discontents, are not to be separated from them. A most violent passion it is where it taketh place, an unspeakable torment, a hellish torture, an infernal plague, as

Ariosto calls it,<sup>1</sup> a fury, a continual fever, full of suspicion, fear and sorrow, a martyrdom, a mirth-marring monster. The sorrow and grief of heart of one woman jealous of another, is heavier than death, Eccus. 26. 6. as <sup>2</sup>Peninnah did Hannah, vex her and upbraid her sore. 'Tis a main vexation, a most intolerable burden, a corrosive to all content, a frenzy, a madness itself, as <sup>3</sup>Benedetto Varchi proves out of that select Sonnet of Giovanni de la Casa, that reverend Lord, as he styles him.

SUBJECT. 2.—Causes of Jealousy. Who are most apt. Idleness, Melancholy, Impotency, long Absence, Beauty, Wantonness, naught themselves. Allurements from time, place, persons, bad usage, Causes.

ASTROLOGERS make the stars a cause or sign of this bitter passion, and out of every man's Horoscope will give a probable conjecture whether he will be jealous or no, and at what time, by direction of the significators to their several promissors: their Aphorisms are to be read in Alubator, Pontanus, Scheiner, Junctine, &c. Bodine cap. 5. meth. hist. ascribes a great cause to the country or clime, and discourseth largely there of this subject, saying, that Southern men are more hot, lascivious, and jealous, than such as live in the North; they can hardly contain themselves in those hotter climes, but are most subject to prodigious lusts. Leo Afer telleth incredible things almost of the lust and jealousy of his Countrymen of Africa, and especially such as live about Carthage, and so doth every Geographer of them in <sup>4</sup>Asia, Turkey, Spaniards, Italians. Germany hath not so many drunkards, England Tobaccoists, France Dancers, Holland Mariners, as Italy alone hath jealous husbands. And in <sup>5</sup>Italy some account them of Piacenza more jealous than the rest. In <sup>6</sup>Germany, France, Britain, Scandia, Poland, Muscovy, they are not so troubled with this feral malady, although Damianus à Goes, which I do much wonder at, in his Topography of Lapland, and Herbastein of Russia, against the stream of all other Geographers, would fasten it upon those Northern inhabitants. Altomarius, Poggius, and Munster in his description of Baden, reports that men and women of all sorts go commonly into the Baths together, without all suspicion, the name of Jealousy (saith Munster) is not so much as once heard of among them. In Friesland the women kiss him they drink to, and are kissed again of those they pledge. The virgins in Holland go hand in hand with young men from home, glide on the Ice; such is their harmless liberty, and lodge together abroad without suspicion, which rash Sansovinus, an Italian, makes it a great sign of unchastity. In France, upon small acquaintance, it is usual to court other men's wives, to come to their houses, and accompany them arm in arm in the streets, without imputation. In the most Northern Countries young men and maids familiarly dance together, men and their wives,<sup>1</sup> which, Siena only excepted, Italians may not abide. The <sup>2</sup>Greeks on the other side have their private baths for men and women, where they must not come near, not so much as see one another: and as <sup>3</sup>Bodine observes, lib. 5. de repub. the Italians could never endure this, or a Spaniard, the very conceit of it would make him mad: and for that cause they lock up their women, and will not suffer them to be near men, so much as in the Church, but with a partition between. He telleth moreover, how that, when he was Ambassador in England, he heard Mendoza the Spanish Legate finding fault with it, as a filthy custom for men and women to sit promiscuously in Churches together: but Dr. Dale, the Master of the Requests, told him again, that it was indeed a filthy custom in Spain, where they could not contain themselves from lascivious thoughts in their holy places, but not with us. Baronius in his Annals, out of Eusebius, taxeth Licinius the Emperor for a decree of his made to this effect, jubens ne viri simul cum mulieribus in Ecclesiâ interessent: for being prodigiously naught himself, aliorum na'uram ex suâ vitiosâ mente spectavit, he so esteemed others. But we are far from any such strange conceits, and will permit our wives and daughters to go to the Tavern with a friend, as Aubanus saith, modo absit lascivia, and suspect nothing, to kiss coming and going, as Erasmus writes in one of his Epistles,<sup>4</sup> which they cannot endure. England is a paradise for women, and hell for horses: Italy a paradise for horses, hell for women, as the proverb goes. Some make a question whether this headstrong passion rage more in women than men, as Montaigne, [Essays] l. 3. [ch. 5.] But sure it is more outrageous in women, as all other melancholy is, by reason of the weakness of their sex. Scaliger, Poet. lib. cap. 13, concludes against women. <sup>1</sup>Besides their inconstancy, treachery, suspicion, dissimulation, superstition, pride (for all women are by nature proud) desire of sovereignty, if they be great women (he gives instance in Juno) bitterness and jealousy are the most remarkable affections.

Fulmineo rabidos dum rotat ore canes,
Nec lea, &c. ———*

Tiger, boar, bear, viper, lioness,
A woman's fury cannot express.

<sup>3</sup>Some say red-headed women, pale-coloured, black-eyed, and of a shrill voice, are most subject to jealousy.

Naught are they, peevish, proud, malicious;
But worst of all, red, shrill, and jealous.

Comparisons are odious, I neither parallel them with others, nor debase them any more: men and women are both bad, and too subject to this pernicious infirmity. It is most part a symptom and cause of Melancholy, as Plater and Valescus teach us: melancholy men are apt to be jealous, and jealous apt to be melancholy.

Pale jealousy, child of insatiate love,
Of heart-sick thoughts which melancholy bred,
A hell-tormenting fear, no faith can move,
By discontent with deadly poison fed;
With heedless youth and error vainly led.
A mortal plague, a virtue-drowning flood,
A hellish fire not quenched but with blood.

If idleness concur with melancholy, such persons are most apt to be jealous; 'tis <sup>5</sup>Nevisanus' note, An idle woman is presumed to be lascivious, and often jealous. Mulier cum sola cogitat, male cogitat:

and 'tis not unlikely, for they have no other business to trouble their heads with.

More particular causes be these which follow. Impotency first, when a man is not able of himself to perform those dues which he ought unto his wife: for though he be an honest liver, hurt no man, yet Trebatius the Lawyer may make a question, an suum cuique tribuat, whether he give every one their own; and therefore when he takes notice of his wants, and perceives her to be more craving, clamorous, unsatiable and prone to lust, than is fit, he begins presently to suspect, that wherein he is defective, she will satisfy herself, she will be pleased by some other means. Cornelius Gallus hath elegantly expressed this humour in an Epigram to his Lycoris.

Jamque alios juvenes aliosque requirit amores,
Me vocat imbellem decrepitumque senem, &c.

[She now seeks other youths and other loves,
Calls me a worn out good for naught old man.]

For this cause is most evident in old men, that are cold and dry by nature, and married succi plenis,<sup>1</sup> to young wanton wives, with old doting Janivere in Chaucer, they begin to mistrust all is not well.

———*She was young, and he was old,
And therefore he feared to be a cuckold.*<sup>2</sup>

And how should it otherwise be? Old age is a disease of itself, loathsome, full of suspicion and fear; when it is at best, unable, unfit for such matters. <sup>3</sup>Tam apta nuptiis quàm bruma messibus, as welcome to a young woman as snow in harvest, saith Nevisanus: et si capis juvenulam, faciet tibi cornua; marry a lusty Maid, and she will surely graft horns on thy head. <sup>4</sup>All women are slippery, often unfaithful to their husbands (as Æneas Sylvius, epist. 38, seconds him) but to old men most treacherous: they had rather mortem amplexarier, lie with a corse, than such a one. <sup>5</sup>Oderunt illum pueri, contemnunt mulieres. On the other side, many men, saith Hieronimus, are suspicious of their wives, <sup>6</sup>if they be lightly given, but old folks above the rest. Insomuch that she did not complain without a cause, in <sup>1</sup>Apulcius, of an old bald bedridden knave she had to her Goodman. Poor woman as I am, what shall I do? I have an old grim sire to my husband, as bald as a coot, as little and as unable as a child, a bedfull of bones, he keeps all the doors barred and lockt upon me, woe is me, what shall I do? He was jealous, and she made him a cuckold for keeping her up: suspicion without a cause, hard usage, is able of itself to make a woman fly out, that was otherwise honest, bad usage aggravates the matter. Nam quando mulieres cognoscunt maritum hoc advertere, licentiùs peccant, as <sup>3</sup>Nevisanus holds, when a woman thinks her husband watcheth her, she will sooner offend; <sup>4</sup>Liberius peccant, et pudor omnis abest, rough handling makes them worse: as the good wife of Bath in Chaucer brags,

*In his own grease I made him frie,
For anger and for very jealousy.*<sup>5</sup>

Of two extremes, this of hard usage is the worst. 'Tis a great fault (for some men are uxorii<sup>6</sup>) to be too fond of their wives, to dote on them as <sup>7</sup>Senior Deliro on his Fallace, to be too effeminate, or as some do, to be sick for their wives, breed children for them, and like the <sup>8</sup>Tiberini lie in for them, as some birds hatch eggs by turns, they do all women's offices: Calius Rhodiginus ant. lect. lib. 6. cap. 24. makes mention of a fellow out of Seneca,<sup>9</sup> that was so besotted on his wife, he could not endure a moment out of her company, he wore her scarf when he went abroad next his heart, and would never drink but in that cup she began first. We have many such fondlings that are their wives' pack-horses and slaves, (nam grave malum uxor superans virum suum, as the Comical Poet hath it, there's no greater misery to a man than to let his wife domineer) to carry her muff, dog, and fan, let her wear the breeches, lay out, spend and do what she will, go and come, whither, when she will, they give consent.

many brave and worthy men have trespassed in this kind, multos foràs claros domestica hæc destruxit infamia, and many noble Senators and soldiers (as <sup>2</sup>Pliny notes) have lost their honour in being uxorii, so sottishly over-ruled by their wives ; and therefore Cato in Plutarch [Vita, § 8.] made a bitter jest on his fellow Citizens, the Romans, we govern all the world abroad, and our wives at home rule us. These offend in one extreme ; but too hard and too severe, are far more offensive on the other. As just a cause may be long absence of either party, when they must of necessity be much from home, as Lawyers, Physicians, Mariners, by their professions ; or otherwise make frivolous impertinent journeys, tarry long abroad to no purpose, lie out, and are gadding still, upon small occasions, it must needs yield matter of suspicion, when they use their wives unkindly in the mean time, and never tarry at home, it cannot choose but engender some such conceit.

Hippocrates the Physician had a smack of this disease ; for when he was to go from home as far as Abdera, and some other remote cities of Greece, he writ to his friend Dionysius (if at least those 'Epistles be his) <sup>4</sup>to oversee his wife in his absence, (as Apollo set a Raven to watch his Coronis) <sup>5</sup>although she lived in his house with her father and mother, whom he knew would have a care of her ; yet that would not satisfy his jealousy, he would have his special friend Dionysius to dwell in his house with her all the time of his peregrination, and to observe her behaviour, how she carried herself in her husband's absence, and that she did not lust after other men. <sup>1</sup>For a woman had need to have an overseer to keep her honest; they are bad by nature, and lightly given all, and if they be not curbed in time, as an unpruned tree, they will be full of wild branches, and degenerate of a sudden. Especially in their husbands' absence. Though one Lucretia were trusty, and one Penelope, yet Clytemnestra made Agamemnon cuckold; and no question there be too many of her conditions. If their husbands tarry too long abroad upon unnecessary business, well they may suspect: or if they run one way, their wives at home will fly out another, quid pro quo. Or if present, and give them not that content which they ought, <sup>2</sup>primum ingratae, mox invisae, noctes quae per somnum transiguntur, they cannot endure to lie alone, or to fast long. <sup>3</sup>Peter Godefridus, in his second book of Love, and sixth chapter, hath a story out of S. Anthony's life of a Gentleman, who, by that good man's advice, would not meddle with his wife in the Passion Week, but for his pains she set a pair of horns on his head. Such another he hath out of Abstemi, one persuaded a new married man <sup>4</sup>to forbear the three first nights, and he should all his life time after be fortunate in cattle, but his impatient wife would not tarry so long: well he might speed in cattle, but not in children. Such a tale hath Heinsius <sup>5</sup>of an impotent and slack scholar, a mere student, and a friend of his, that, seeing by chance a fine damsel sing and dance, would needs marry her; the match was soon made, for he was young and rich, genis gratus, corpore glabellus, arte multiscius, et fortunâ opulentus, like that Apollo in Apuleius. <sup>6</sup> <sup>7</sup>The first night, having liberally taken his liquor (as in that country they do) my fine scholar was so fuddled <sup>8</sup>that he no sooner was laid in bed, but he fell fast asleep, never waked till morning, and then much abashed, purpureis formosa rosis <sup>9</sup>cum Aurora ruberet, when the fair morn with purple hue 'gan shine, he made an excuse, I know not what, out of Hippocrates Cous,<sup>1</sup> &c. and for that time it went current; but when as afterward he did not play the man as he should do, she fell in league with a good fellow, and whilst he sat up late at his study about those Criticisms, mending some hard places in Festus or Pollux, came cold to bed, and would tell her still what he had done, she did not much regard what he said, &c. <sup>2</sup>She would have another matter mended much rather, which he did not perceive was corrupt: thus he continued at his study late, she at her sport, alibi enim festivas noctes agitabat, hating all scholars for his sake, till at length he began to suspect, and turned a little yellow, as well he might; for it was his own fault; and if men be jealous in such cases (<sup>3</sup>as oft it falls out) the mends is in their own hands, they must thank themselves. Who will pity them, saith Neander, or be much offended with such wives, si deceptæ prius viros decipiant, et cornutos reddant, if they deceive those that cozened them first? A Lawyer's wife in <sup>4</sup>Aristænetus, because her husband was negligent in his business, quando lecto danda opera, threatened to cornute him: and did not stick to tell Philinna, one of her gossips, as much, and that aloud for him to hear: If he follow other men's matters, and leave his own, I'll have an Orator shall plead my cause, I care not if he know it.

A fourth eminent cause of jealousy may be this, when he that is deformed, and, as Pindar says of Vulcan, sine gratiis natus, hirsute, ragged, yet virtuously given, will marry some fair nice piece, or light housewife, begins to misdoubt (as well he may) she doth not affect him. <sup>5</sup>Lis est cum formâ magna pudicitiae, beauty and honesty have ever been at odds. Abraham was jealous of his wife, because she was fair: so was Vulcan of his Venus, when he made her creaking shoes, saith <sup>6</sup>Philostratus, ne mœcharetur, sandalio scilicet deferente, that he might hear by them when she stirred, which Mars indignè ferre, <sup>7</sup>was not well pleased with. Good cause had Vulcan to do as he did, for she was no honest

Si pergit alienis negotiis operam dare sui negligens, erit alius mihi orator qui rem meam agat. [Boissonade in a note in his excellent edition of Aristænetus compares the case of Madame Wetenhall in Grammont's Memoirs, ch. 12.] <sup>5</sup> Ovid. than she should be. Your fine faces have commonly this fault, and it is hard to find; saith Francis Philolphus<sup>1</sup> in an Epistle to Saxola his friend, a rich man honest, a proper woman not proud or unchaste. Can she be fair and honest too?

<sup>2</sup>Sæpe etenim oculuit pictâ sese hydra sub herbâ,
Sub specie formæ, incauto se sæpè marito
Nequam animus vendit,——

He that marries a wife that is snowy fair alone, let him look, saith <sup>3</sup>Barbarus, for no better success than Vulcan had with Venus, or Claudius with Messalina. And 'tis impossible almost in such cases the wife should contain, or the good man not be jealous: for when he is so defective, weak, ill proportioned, unpleasing in those parts which women most affect, and she most absolutely fair and able on the other side, if she be not very virtuously given, how can she love him? and although she be not fair, yet if he admire her, and think her so, in his conceit she is absolute, he holds it impossible for any man living not to dote as he doth, to look on her, and not lust, not to covet, and if he be in company with her, not to lay siege to her honesty: or else out of a deep apprehension of his infirmities, deformities, and other men's good parts, out of his own little worth and desert, he distrusts himself (for what is jealousy but distrust?) he suspects she cannot affect him, or be not so kind and loving as she should, she certainly loves some other man better than himself.

<sup>4</sup>Nevisanus, lib. 4. num. 72, will have barrenness to be a main cause of Jealousy. If her husband cannot play the man, some other shall, they will leave no remedies unassayed, and thereupon the good man grows jealous; I could give an instance, but be it as it is.

I find this reason given by some men, because they have been formerly naught themselves, they think they may be so served by others, they turned up trump before the cards were shuffled, they shall have therefore legem talionis<sup>5</sup> like for like.

He straightway thinks his wife will tread that way.

To these two above named causes, or incendiaries of this rage, I may very well annex those circumstances of time, place, persons, by which it ebbs and flows, the fuel of this fury, as <sup>3</sup> Vives truly observes; and such like accidents or occasions, proceeding from the parties themselves, or others, which much aggravate and intend this suspicious humour. For many men are so lasciviously given, either out of a depraved nature, or too much liberty, which they do assume unto themselves, by reason of their greatness, in that they are Noblemen (for licentia peccandi, et multitudo peccantium<sup>4</sup> are great motives) though their own wives be never so fair, noble, virtuous, honest, wise, able, and well given, they must have change.

Noble and fair, fly out lascivious.

Quod licet ingratum est,<sup>6</sup> that which is ordinary is unpleasant. Nero (saith Tacitus<sup>7</sup>) abhorred Octavia his own wife, a noble virtuous Lady, and loved Acte, a base quean in respect. <sup>8</sup> Cerintus rejected Sulpicia, a nobleman's daughter, and courted a poor servant maid.

As Sun and Moon in Heaven change their course,
So they change loves, though often to the worse.

Or that some fair object so forcibly moves them, they cannot contain themselves, be it heard or seen, they will be at it. <sup>2</sup> Nessus the Centaur, was by agreement to carry Hercules and his wife over the River Evenus; no sooner had he set Deianira on the other side, but he would have offered violence unto her, leaving Hercules to swim over as he could: and though her husband was a spectator, yet would he not desist till Hercules with a poisoned arrow shot him to death. <sup>3</sup> Neptune saw by chance that Thessalian Tyro, Enipeus' wife, he forthwith in the fury of his lust counterfeited her husband's habit, and made him cuckold. Tarquin heard Collatine commend his wife, and was so far enraged, that in midst of the night to her he went. <sup>4</sup> <sup>5</sup> Theseus stole Ariadne, vi rapuit<sup>6</sup> that Troezenian Anaxo, Antiope, and, now being old, Helena, a girl not yet ready for an husband. Or that they care little for their own Ladies, and fear no Laws, they dare freely keep whores at their wives' noses. 'Tis too frequent with noblemen to be dishonest; pietas, probitas, fides, privata bona sunt, as <sup>10</sup> he said long since, piety, chastity, and such like virtues are for private men; not to be much looked after in great Courts: and which Suetonius said of the good Princes of his time, they might be all engraven in one Ring, we may truly hold of chaste potentates of our age. For great personages will familiarly run out in this kind, and yield occasion of offence. <sup>1</sup>Montaigne in his Essays gives instances in Cæsar, Mahomet the Turk, that sacked Constantinople, and Ladislaus King of Naples, that besieged Florence: great men, and great soldiers, are commonly great, &c. probatum est, they are good doers. Mars and Venus are equally balanced in their actions.

'Tis no marvel then, if poor women in such cases be jealous, when they shall see themselves manifestly neglected, contemned, loathed, unkindly used: their disloyal husbands to entertain others in their rooms, and many times to court Ladies to their faces: other men's wives to wear their jewels: how shall a poor woman in such a case moderate her passion?

How, on the other side, shall a poor man contain himself from this feral malady, when he shall see so manifest signs of his wife's inconstancy? when as, like Milo's wife,<sup>3</sup> she dotes upon every young man she sees, or as <sup>4</sup>Martial's Sota, sly tricks, which to cornute their husbands they commonly use, (dum ludis, ludos hæc te facit) they pretend love, honour, chastity, and seem to respect them before all men living, saints in shew, so cunningly can they dissemble, they will not so much as look upon another man in his presence, <sup>1</sup> so chaste, so religious, and so devout, they cannot endure the name or sight of a quean, an harlot, out upon her! and in their outward carriage are most loving and officious, will kiss their husband, and hang about his neck, (dear husband, sweet husband) and with a composed countenance, salute him, especially when he comes home, or if he go from home, weep, sigh, lament, and take upon them to be sick and swoon, (like Jocundo's wife in <sup>2</sup> Ariosto, when her husband was to depart) and yet arrant, <sup>3</sup> &c. they care not for him,

Aye me, the thought (quoth she) makes me so 'fraid,
That scarce the breath abideth in my breast;
Peace, my sweet love and wife, Jocundo said,
And weeps as fast, and comforts her his best, &c.
All this might not assuage the woman's pain,
Needs must I die before you come again,
Nor how to keep my life I can devise,

From meat my mouth, from sleep will keep mine eyes, &c.
That very night that went before the morrow,
That he had pointed surely to depart,
Jocundo's wife was sick, and swoon'd for sorrow,
Amid his arms, so heavy was her heart.

And yet for all these counterfeit tears and protestations, Jocundo coming back in all haste for a Jewel he had forgot,

The adulterer sleeping very sound,
Yet by his face was easily detected:

Many of them seem to be precise and holy forsooth, and will go to such a <sup>2</sup>Church, to hear such a good man by all means, an excellent man, when 'tis for no other intent (as he follows it) than to see and to be seen, to observe what fashions are in use, to meet some Pandar, Bawd, Monk, Friar, or to entice some good fellow. For they persuade themselves, as <sup>3</sup>Nevisanus shews, that it is neither sin nor shame to lie with a Lord or a parish Priest, if he be a proper man, and though she kneel often, and pray devoutly, 'tis (saith Platina) not for her husband's welfare, or children's good, or any friend, but for her sweetheart's return, her Pandar's health. If her husband would have her go, she feigns herself sick, <sup>4</sup>Et simulat subito condoluisse caput : her head aches, and she cannot stir : but if her Paramour ask as much, she is for him in all seasons, at all hours of the night. <sup>5</sup>In the kingdom of Malabar, and about Goa in the East-Indies, the women are so subtile, that with a certain drink they give them to drive away cares as they say, <sup>6</sup>they will make them sleep for twenty-four hours, or so intoxicate them, that they can remember nought of that they saw done, or heard, and by washing of their feet, restore them again, and so make their husbands cuckolds to their faces. Some are ill disposed at all times, to all persons they like, others more wary to some few, at such and such seasons, as Augusta Livia, non nisi plenâ navi vectorem tollebat.<sup>7</sup> But as he said, occasions in this humour of discontent, aggravate and yield matter of suspicion: but most part of the chief causes proceed from other adventitious accidents and circumstances, though the parties be free, and both well given themselves. The indiscreet carriage of some lascivious gallant (et à contra<sup>1</sup> of some light woman) by his often frequenting of an house, bold unseemly gestures, may make a breach, and by his over familiarity, if he be inclined to yellowness, colour him quite out. If he be poor, basely born, saith Benedetto Varchi, and otherwise unhandsome, he suspects him the less, but if a proper man, such as was Alcibiades in Greece, and Castrucius Castrucanus in Italy, well descended, commendable for his good parts, he taketh on the more, and watcheth his doings. <sup>2</sup>Theodosius the Emperor gave his wife Eudocia a golden apple, when he was a suitor to her, which she long after bestowed upon a young gallant in the Court, of her especial acquaintance. The Emperor, espying this apple in his hand, suspected forthwith, more than was, his wife's dishonesty, banished him the Court, and from that day following forbore to accompany her any more. <sup>3</sup>A rich merchant had a fair wife; according to his custom he went to travel; in his absence a good fellow tempted his wife: she denied him, yet he, dying a little after, gave her a legacy for the love he bore her. At his return her jealous husband, because she had got more by land than he had done at Sea, turned her away upon suspicion.

Now when those other circumstances of time and place, opportunity and importunity, shall concur, what will they not effect?

Fair opportunity can win the coyest she that is,
So wisely he takes time, as he'll be sure he will not miss:
Then he that loves her gamesome vein, and tempers toys with art,
Brings love that swimmeth in her eyes, to dive into her heart.

As at Plays, Masks, great feasts and banquets, one singles out his wife to dance, another courts her in his presence, a third tempts her, a fourth insinuates with a pleasing compliment, a sweet smile, ingratiates himself with an amphibological<sup>4</sup> speech; as that merry companion in the <sup>5</sup>Satirist did to his Glycerium, adsidens et interiorem palmam amabiliter concutiens,<sup>6</sup>

Or if they dwell in suspected places, as in an infamous Inn, near some Stews, near Monks, Friars, Nevisanus adds, where be many tempters and solicitors, idle persons, that frequent their companies, it may give just cause of suspicion. Martial of old inveighed against them that counterfeited a disease to go to the Bath, for so, many times,

Or if I shall see a Monk or a Friar climb up by a ladder at midnight into a Virgin's or Widow's chamber-window, I shall hardly think he then goes to administer the Sacraments, or to take her Confession. These are the ordinary causes of jealousy, which are intended or remitted, as the circumstances vary.

MEMB. II.

Symptoms of Jealousy, fear, sorrow, suspicion, strange actions, gestures, outrages, locking up, oaths, trials, laws, &c.

OF all passions, as I have already proved, Love is most violent, and of those bitter potions which this Love Melancholy affords, this bastard Jealousy is the greatest, as appears by those prodigious Symptoms which it hath, and that it produceth. For besides Fear and Sorrow, which is common to all Melancholy, anxiety of mind, suspicion, aggravation, restless thoughts, paleness, meagreness, neglect of business, and the like, these men are farther yet misaffected, and in an higher strain. 'Tis a more vehement passion, a more furious perturbation, a bitter pain, a fire, a pernicious curiosity, a gall corrupting the honey of our life, madness, vertigo, plague, hell, they are more than ordinarily disquieted, they lose bonum pacis,<sup>3</sup> as Chrysostom observes; and though they be rich, keep sumptuous tables, be nobly allied, yet miserrimi omnium sunt, they are most miserable, they are more than ordinarily discontent, more sad, nihil tristius, more than ordinarily suspicious. Jealousy, saith <sup>6</sup>Vives, begets unquietness in

'Tis proper to Jealousy so to do,*

Pale hag, infernal fury, pleasure's smart,

Besides those strange gestures of staring, frowning, grinning, rolling of eyes, menacing, ghastly looks, broken pace, interrupt, precipitate, half-turns. He will sometimes sigh, weep, sob for anger, swear and belie, slander any man, curse, threaten, brawl, scold, fight; and sometimes again flatter, and speak fair, ask forgiveness, kiss and coll, condemn his rashness and folly, vow, protest and swear he will never do so again; and then eftsoons, impatient as he is, rave, roar, and lay about him like a mad man, thump her sides, drag her about perchance, drive her out of doors, send her home, he will be divorced forthwith, she is a whore, &c., by and by with all submiss compliment intreat her fair, and bring her in again, he loves her dearly, she is his sweet, most kind, and loving wife, he will not change, not leave her for a Kingdom; so he continues off and on, as the toy takes him, the object moves him, but most part brawling, fretting, unquiet he is, accusing and suspecting not strangers only, but Brothers and Sisters, Father and Mother, nearest and dearest friends. He thinks with those Italians,

Chi non tocca parentado,
Tocca mai e rado.

And through fear conceives unto himself things almost incredible and impossible to be effected. As an Heron when she fishes, still prying on all sides, or as a Cat doth a Mouse, his eye is never off hers; he gloats on him, on her, accurately observing on whom she looks, who looks at her, what she saith, doth, at dinner, at supper, sitting, walking, at home, abroad, he is the same, still inquiring, mandering,<sup>1</sup> gazing, listening, affrighted with every small object; why did she smile, why did she pity him, commend him? why did she drink twice to such a man? why did she offer to kiss, to dance? &c., a whore, a whore, an arrant whore! All this he confesseth in the Poet,

<sup>2</sup>Omnia me terrent, timidus sum, ignosce timori,
Et miser in tunica suspicor esse virum.
Me lædit si multa tibi dabit oscula mater,
Me soror, et cum qua dormit amica simul.

Each thing affrights me, I do fear,
Ah pardon me my fear,
I doubt a man is hid within
The clothes that thou dost wear.

Is't not a man in woman's apparel? is not somebody in that great chest, or behind the door, or hangings, or in some of those barrels? May not a man steal in at the window with a ladder of ropes, or come down the chimney, have a false key, or get in when he is asleep? If a Mouse do but stir, or the wind blow, a casement clatter, that's the villain, there he is; by his good will no man shall see her, salute her, speak with her, she shall not go forth of his sight, so much as to do her needs. <sup>3</sup>Non ita bovem Argus, &c., Argus did not so keep his Cow,<sup>4</sup> that watchful Dragon the Golden fleece, or Cerberus the coming in<sup>5</sup> of Hell, as he keeps his wife. If a dear friend or near kinsman come as guest to his house, to visit him, he will never let him be out of his own sight and company, lest peradventure, &c. If the necessity of his business be such that he must go from home, he doth either lock her up, or commit her with a deal of injunctions and protestations to some trusty friends, him and her he sets and bribes to oversee: one servant is set in his absence to watch another, and all to observe his wife, and yet all this will not serve, though his business be very urgent, he will, when he is half way, come back again in all post haste, rise from supper, or at midnight, and be gone, and sometimes leave his business undone, and as a stranger court his own wife in some disguised habit. Though there be no danger at all, no cause of suspicion, she live in such a place, where Messalina herself could not be dishonest if she would, yet he suspects her as much as if she were in a bawdy house, some Prince's Court, or in a common Inn, where all comers might have free access. He calls her on a sudden all to naught, she is a strumpet, a light-housewife, a bitch, an arrant whore. No persuasion, no protestation, can divert this passion, nothing can ease him, secure or give him satisfaction. It is most strange to report, what outrageous acts by men and women have been committed in this kind; by women especially, that will run after their husbands into all places and companies, as 'Jovianus Pontanus' wife did by him, follow him whithersoever he went, it matters not, or upon what business, raving, like Juno in the Tragedy, miscalling, cursing, swearing, and mistrusting every one she sees. Gomesius, in his third Book of the life and deeds of Francis Ximenes, sometime Archbishop of Toledo, hath a strange story of that incredible jealousy of Joan Queen of Spain, wife to King Philip, mother of Ferdinand and Charles the Fifth, Emperors; when her husband Philip, either for that he was tired with his wife's jealousy, or had some great business, went into the Low Countries, she was so impatient and melancholy upon his departure, that she would scarce eat her meat, or converse with any man; and though she were with child, the season of the year very bad, the wind against her, in all haste she would to sea after him. Neither Isabella her Queen Mother, the Archbishop, or any other friend, could persuade her to the contrary, but she would after him. When she was now come into the Low Countries, and kindly entertained by her husband, she could not contain herself, 'but in a rage ran upon a yellow-hair'd wench, with whom she suspected her husband to be naught, cut off her hair, did beat her black and blue, and so dragged her about. It is an ordinary thing for women in such cases to scrat the faces, slit the noses, of such as they suspect; as Henry the Second's importune Juno did by Rosamond at Woodstock: for she complains in a 'modern Poet, she scarce spake,

But flies with eager fury to my face,
 Offering me most unwomanly disgrace.
 Look how a tigress, &c.
 So fell she on me in outrageous wise,
 As could disdain and jealousy devise.

Or if it be so they dare not, or cannot execute any such tyrannical injustice, they will miscall, rail and revile, bear them deadly hate and malice, as <sup>1</sup> Tacitus observes, the hatred of a jealous woman is inseparable against such as she suspects.

<sup>2</sup> Nulla vis flammæ tumidique venti

As raving women turn all topsy-turvy.

So did Agrippina by Lollia and Calpurnia in the days of Claudius.<sup>3</sup> But women are sufficiently curbed in such cases, the rage of men is more eminent, and frequently put in practice. See but with what rigour those jealous husbands tyrannize over their poor wives. In Greece, Spain, Italy, Turkey, Africa, Asia, and generally over all those hot Countries, <sup>4</sup> mulieres vestræ terra vestra, arate sicut vultis; Mahomet in his Alcoran gives this power to men; your wives are as your land, till them, use them, intreat them fair or foul, as you will yourselves.

they lock them still in their houses, which are as so many prisons to them, will suffer nobody to come at them, or their wives to be seen abroad,

They must not so much as look out. And if they be great persons, they have Eunuchs to keep them, as the Grand Seignior among the Turks, the Sophies of Persia, those Tartarian Mogors, and Kings of China. Infantes masculos castrat innumeros ut regi serviant, saith <sup>7</sup> Riccius, they geld innumerable infants to this purpose; the King of <sup>8</sup> China maintains 10,000 Eunuchs in his family to keep his wives. The Xeriffes of Barbary keep their Courtesans in such strict manner, that if any man come but in sight of them, he dies for it; and if they chance to see a man, and do not instantly cry out, though from their windows, they must be put to death. The Turks have I know not how many black deformed Eunuchs (for the white serve for other ministeries) to this purpose sent commonly from Egypt, deprived in their childhood of all their privities, and brought up in the Seraglio at Constantinople, to keep their wives; which are so penned up they may not confer with any living man, or converse with younger women, have a Cucumber or Carrot sent in to them for their diet, but sliced, for fear, &c. and so live, and are left alone to their unchaste thoughts all the days of their lives. The vulgar sort of women, if at any time they come abroad, which is very seldom, to visit one another, or to go to their Baths, are so covered, that no man can see them, as the Matrons were in old Rome, lecticâ aut sellâ tectâ vectæ,<sup>1</sup> so <sup>2</sup> Dion and Seneca record velatæ totæ incendunt,<sup>3</sup> which Alexander ab Alexandro relates of the Parthians, lib. 5, cap. 24. which, with Andreas Tiraquellus his Commentator, I rather think should be understood of Persians. I have not yet said all, they do not only lock them up, sed et pudendis seras adhibent: hear what Bembus relates, lib. 6, of his Venetian History, of those inhabitants that dwell about Quiloo in Africa. Lusitani, inquit, quorundam civitates adierunt, qui natis statim fœminis naturam suunt, quoad urinæ exitus ne impediatur, easque quum adoleverint sic consutas in matrimonium collocant, ut sponsi prima cura sit conglutinatâs puellæ oras ferro interscindere. In some parts of Greece at this day, like those old Jews, they will not believe their wives are honest, nisi pannum menstruatam prima nocte videant: our countryman <sup>4</sup> Sands, in his Perigrination, saith, it is severely observed in Zacynthus, or Zante; and Leo Afer in his time at Fez, in Africa, non credunt virginem esse nisi videant sanguineam mappam; si non, ad parentes pudore rejicitur. did,' the King himself being a spectator, with the like. We read in Nicephorus that Cunegunda, the wife of Henricus Bavarus, Emperor, suspected of adultery, insimulata adulterii per ignitos vomeres illasa transiit, trod upon red hot coulter, and had no harm :<sup>2</sup> such another story we find in Regino, lib. 2 ; in Aventinus and Sigonius, of Charles the Third, and his wife Richarda, An. 887, that was so purged with hot irons. Pausanias saith that he was once an eye-witness of such a miracle at Diana's Temple, a maid without any harm at all walked upon burning coals. Pius secund. in his description of Europe, c. 46, relates as much, that it was commonly practised at Diana's Temple, for women to go barefoot over hot coals, to try their honesties. Plinius, Solinus, and many writers, make mention of Feronia's Temple, and Dionysius Halicarnasseus, lib. 3. of Memnon's statue, which were used to this purpose, Tatius, lib. 8. Some, saith Austin, compel their wives to swear they be honest, as if perjury were a lesser sin than adultery ; <sup>7</sup> some consult Oracles, as Pheron that blind King of Egypt. Others reward, as those old Romans use to do ; if a woman were contented with one man, coronâ pudicitie donabatur, she had a crown of Chastity bestowed on her. Prognosticks of Jealousy, Despair, Madness, to make away themselves and others.

Divers in deep despair to die have sought,
By which a man to madness near is brought,
As well with causeless as with just suspect.

In their madness many times, saith <sup>4</sup> Vives, they make away themselves, and others. Which induceth Cyprian to call it fecundam et multiplicem perniciem, fontem cladum et seminarium delictorum, a fruitful mischief, the seminary of offences, and fountain of murders. Tragical examples are too common in this kind, both new and old, in all ages, as of <sup>5</sup> Cephalus and Procris, <sup>6</sup> Pheron of Egypt, Tereus, Atreus, and Thyestes. <sup>7</sup> Alexander Pheræus was murdered of his wife, ob pellicatûs suspicionem, Tully saith. Antoninus Verus was so made away by Lucilla; Demetrius, the son of Antigonus, and Nicanor, by their wives; Hercules poisoned by Deianira, <sup>8</sup> Cæcinna murdered by Vespasian, Justina a Roman Lady by her husband. <sup>9</sup> Amestris, Xerxes' wife, because she found

<sup>1</sup>Paulus Æmilius, in his History of France, hath a Tragical story of Chilpericus the First his death, made away by Frédégonde his Queen. In a jealous humour he came from hunting, and stole behind his wife, as she was dressing and combing her head in the Sun, gave her a familiar touch with his wand, which she mistaking for her lover, said, Ah Landre, a good Knight should strike before, and not behind: but when she saw herself betrayed by his presence, she instantly took order to make him away. Hierome Osorius, in the eleventh book of the deeds of Emanuel, King of Portugal, to this effect hath a Tragical Narration of one Ferdinandus Calderia, that wounded Gotherinus, a noble Countryman of his, at Goa in the East Indies, <sup>2</sup>and cut off one of his legs, for that he looked, as he thought, too familiarly upon his wife, which was afterwards a cause of many quarrels, and much bloodshed. Guianerius, cap. 36. de ægritud. matr. speaks of a silly jealous fellow, that seeing his child new born, included in a kell, thought sure a <sup>3</sup>Franciscan, that used to come to his house, was the father of it, it was so like the Friar's Cowl, and thereupon threatened the Friar to kill him: Fulgosus, of a woman in Narbonne, that cut off her husband's privities in the night, because she thought he played false with her. The story of Jonuses Bassa, and fair Manto his wife, is well known to such as have read the Turkish History,<sup>4</sup> and that of Joan of Spain, of which I treated in my former Section. Her jealousy, saith Gomesius, was cause of both their deaths: King Philip died for grief a little after, as <sup>5</sup>Martian his Physician gave it out, and she for her part, after a melancholy discontented life, misspent in lurking-

'Tis a common sign this; for when once the humours are stirred, and the imagination misaffected, it will vary itself in divers forms; and many such absurd symptoms will accompany even madness itself. Sckenkius, Observat. lib. 4. cap. de Uter. hath an example of a jealous woman, that by this means had many fits of the mother: and in his first book, of some that through jealousy ran mad: of a Baker that gelded himself to try his wife's honesty, &c. Such examples are too common.

MEMB. IV.

SUBJECT. 1.—Cure of Jealousy: by avoiding occasions, not to be idle: of good counsel: to condemn it, not to watch or lock them up: to dissemble it, &c.

As of all other Melancholy, some doubt whether this malady may be cured or no, they think 'tis like the <sup>4</sup> Gout, or Switzers, whom we commonly call Walloons,<sup>5</sup> those hired Soldiers, if once they take possession of a Castle they can never be got out.

Qui timet, ut sua sit, ne quis sibi detrahat illam,

A wound that so infects the soul and heart,
 As all our sense and reason it doth master :
 A wound whose pang and torment is so durable,
 As it may rightly called be incurable.

Yet what I have formerly said of other Melancholy, I will say again, it may be cured, or mitigated at least, by some contrary passion, good counsel and persuasion, if it be withstood in the beginning, maturely resisted, and as those Ancients hold,<sup>1</sup> the nails of it be pared before they grow too long. No better means to resist or repel it, than by avoiding idleness, to be still seriously busied about some matters of importance, to drive out those vain fears, foolish fantasies, and irksome suspicions out of his head, and then to be persuaded by his judicious friends, to give ear to their good counsel and advice, and wisely to consider, how much he discredits himself, his friends, dishonours his children, disgraceth his family, publisheth his shame, and as a Trumpeter of his own misery, divulgeth, macerates, grieves himself and others ; what an argument of weakness it is, how absurd a thing in its own nature, how ridiculous, how brutish a passion, how sottish, how odious ; for as <sup>2</sup>Hierome well hath it, odium sui facit, et ipse novissimè sibi odio est, others hate him, and at last he hates himself for it ; how hare-brain a disease, mad and furious ! If he will but hear them speak, no doubt he may be cured. <sup>3</sup>Joan, Queen of Spain, of whom I have formerly spoken, under pretence of changing air, was sent to Complutum, or Alcala de Henares, where Ximenes the Archbishop of Toledo then lived,<sup>4</sup> that by his good counsel (as for the present she was) she might be eased. <sup>5</sup>For a disease of the soul, if concealed, tortures and overturns it, and by no physick can sooner be removed than by a discreet man's comfortable speeches. I will not here insert any consolatory sentences to this purpose, or forestall any man's invention, but leave it every one to dilate and amplify as he shall think fit in his own judgment : let him advise with Siracides, cap. 9. 1. Be not jealous over the wife of thy bosom ; read that comfortable and pithy speech to this purpose of Ximenes in the Author himself, as it is recorded by Gomesius ; consult with Chaloner, lib. 9. de repub. Anglor. or Cælia in her Epistles, &c.

Only this I will add, that if it be considered aright, which causeth this jealous passion, be it just or unjust, whether with or without cause, true or false, it ought not so heinously to be taken; 'tis no such real or capital matter, that it should make so deep a wound. 'Tis a blow that hurts not, an insensible smart, grounded many times upon false suspicion alone, and so fostered by a sinister conceit. If she be not dishonest, he troubles and macerates himself without a cause; or put case, which is the worst, he be a cuckold, it cannot be helped, the more he stirs in it, the more he aggravates his own misery. How much better were it in such a case to dissemble, or contemn it! why should that be feared, which cannot be redressed? Multæ tandem deposuerunt (saith Vives) quum flecti maritos non posse vident, many women when they see there is no remedy, have been pacified; and shall men be more jealous than women? 'Tis some comfort in such a case to have companions,

Who can say he is free? who can assure himself he is not one de præterito<sup>3</sup> or secure himself de futuro?<sup>4</sup> If it were his case alone, it were hard; but being as it is almost a common calamity, 'tis not so grievously to be taken. If a man have a lock, which every man's key will open, as well as his own, why should he think to keep it private to himself? In some Countries they make nothing of it, ne nobiles quidem, saith Leo Afer, in many parts of Africa (if she be past fourteen) there's not a Nobleman that marries a maid, or that hath a chaste wife; 'tis so common; as the Moon gives horns once a month to the world, do they to their husbands at least. And 'tis most part true which that Caledonian Lady, Argentocoxus a British Prince his wife, told Julia Augusta, when she took her up for dishonesty, We Britons are naught at least with some few choice men of the better sort, but you Romans lie with every base knave, you are a company of common whores. Severus the Emperor in his time made laws for the restraint of this vice; and as Dion Niceus relates in his life, tri-

the Miller sees not all the water that goes by his mill : no doubt, but as in our days, these were of the Commonalty, all the great ones were not so much as called in question for it. <sup>1</sup>Martial's Epigram, I suppose, might have been generally applied in those licentious times, Omnia solus habes, &c. thy goods, lands, money, wits, are thine own, Uxorem sed habes, Candide, cum populo ; but, neighbour Candidus, your wife is common. Husband and Cuckold in that age, it seems, were reciprocal terms ; the Emperors themselves did wear Actæon's badge ; how many Cæsars might I reckon up together, and what a catalogue of cornuted Kings and Princes in every story ! Agamemnon, Menelaus, Philip of Greece, Ptolemæus of Egypt, Lucullus, Cesar, Pompeius, Cato, Augustus, Antonius, Antoninus, &c. that wore fair plumes of Bull's feathers<sup>2</sup> in their crests. The bravest Soldiers and most Heroical spirits could not avoid it. They have been active and passive in this business, they have either given or taken horns. <sup>3</sup>King Arthur, whom we call one of the Nine Worthies, for all his great valour, was unworthily served by Mordred one of his Round-Table Knights : and Guithera, or Helena Alba, his fair wife, as Leland interprets it, was an arrant honest woman. Parcerem libenter (saith mine <sup>4</sup>Author) heroinarum læsæ majestati, si non historiæ veritas aurem vellicaret, I could willingly wink at a fair Lady's faults, but that I am bound by the laws of History to tell the truth : against his will, God knows, did he write it, and so do I repeat it. I speak not of our times all this while, we have good, honest, virtuous men and women, whom fame, zeal, fear of God, Religion and superstition contains ; and yet for all that, we have too many Knights of this order, so dubbed by their wives, many good women abused by dissolute husbands. In some places, and such persons, you may as soon enjoin them to carry water in a sieve, as to keep themselves honest. What shall a man do now in such a case? What remedy is to be had? How shall he be eased? By suing a divorce? that is hard to be effected: si non castè, tamen cautè, they carry the matter so cunningly, that though it be as common as Simony, as clear and as manifest as the nose in a man's face, yet it cannot be evidently proved, or they likely taken in the fact: they will have a knave Gallus<sup>1</sup> to watch, or with that Roman Sulpicia, all made fast and sure,

Ne se Cadurcis destitutam fasciis,
Nudam Caleno concumbentem videat.

She will hardly be surprised by her husband, be he never so wary. Much better then to put it up, the more he strives in it, the more he shall divulge his own shame; make a virtue of necessity, and conceal it. Yea, but the world takes notice of it, 'tis in every man's mouth: let them talk their pleasure, of whom speak they not in this sense? From the highest to the lowest, they are thus censured all: there is no remedy then but patience. It may be 'tis his own fault, and he hath no reason to complain, 'tis quid pro quo, she is bad, he is worse. <sup>3</sup>Bethink thyself, hast thou not done as much for some of thy neighbours? why dost thou require that of thy wife, which thou wilt not perform thyself? Thou rangest like a Town Bull, <sup>4</sup>why art thou so incensed if she tread a law?

<sup>5</sup> Be it that some woman break chaste wellock's laws,
And leaves her husband and becomes unchaste.
Yet commonly it is not without cause,
She sees her man in sin her goods to waste,
She feels that he his love from her withdraws,
And hath on some perhaps less worthy placed,
Who strike with sword, the scabbard them may strike,
And sure love craveth love, like asketh like.

Ea semper studebit, saith <sup>6</sup>Nevisanus, pares reddere vices, she will quit it if she can. And therefore, as well adviseth Siracides, cap. 9. 1, teach her not an evil lesson against thyself, which as Jansenius, Lyranus, on this text, and Carthusianus interpret, is no otherwise to be understood, then that she do thee not a mischief. I do not excuse her in accusing thee; but if both be naught, mend thyself first; for as the old saying is, A good husband makes a good wife.

Yea, but thou repliest, 'Tis not the like reason betwixt man and woman, through her fault my children are bastards, I may not endure it, <sup>1</sup> sit amarulenta, sit imperiosa, prodiga, &c. let her scold, brawl, and spend, I care not, modò sit casta, so she be honest, I could easily bear it; but this I cannot, I may not, I will not; my faith, my fame, mine eye must not be touched, as the proverb is,

Non patitur tactum fama, fides, oculus.

I say the same of my wife, touch all, use all, take all but this. I acknowledge that of Seneca to be true, nullius boni jucunda possessio sine socio,<sup>2</sup> there is no sweet content in the possession of any good thing, without a companion, this only excepted, I say, This. And why this? Even this which thou so much abhorrest, it may be for thy progeny's good, <sup>3</sup> better be any man's son than thine, to be begot of base Irus, poor Seius, or mean Mævius, the Town Swineherd's, a Shepherd's son: and well is he that, like Hercules, he hath any two fathers; for thou thyself hast peradventure more diseases than an horse, more infirmities of body and mind, a canker'd soul, crabbed conditions; make the worst of it, as it is vulnus insanabile, sic vulnus insensibile; as it is incurable, so it is insensible. But art thou sure it is so?

doth he so indeed? It may be thou art over suspicious, and without a cause, as some are: if it be octomestris partus, born at eight months, or like him, and him they fondly suspect, he got it; if she speak or laugh familiarly with such or such men, then presently she is naught with them, such is thy weakness: whereas charity, or a well-disposed mind, would interpret all unto the best. S. Francis, by chance, seeing a Friar familiarly kissing another man's wife, was so far from misconceiving it, that he presently kneeled down, and thanked God there was so much charity left: but they, on the other side, will ascribe nothing to natural causes, indulge nothing to familiarity, mutual society, friendship; but out of a sinister suspicion, presently lock them close, watch them, thinking by those means to prevent all such inconveniences, that's the way to help it; whereas by such tricks they do aggravate the mischief. 'Tis but in vain to watch that which will away.

 None can be kept resisting for her part;
 Though body be kept close, withun her heart
 Advoutry lurks, t' exclude it there's no art.

Argus with an hundred eyes cannot keep her, et hunc unus sæpè fefellit amor,<sup>2</sup> as in <sup>3</sup>Ariosto.

If all our hairs were eyes, yet sure, they said,
 We husbands of our wives should be betrayed.

Hierome holds, uxor impudica servari non potest, pudica non debet, infida custos castitatis est necessitas, to what end is all your custody? A dishonest woman cannot be kept, an honest woman ought not to be kept, necessity is a keeper not to be trusted. Difficile custoditur quod plures amant; that which many covet, can hardly be preserved, as <sup>4</sup>Salisburyensis thinks. I am of Æneas Sylvius' mind, <sup>5</sup>Those jealous Italians do very ill to lock up their wives; for women are of such a disposition, they will most covet that which is denied most, and offend least when they have free liberty to trespass. It is in vain to lock her up if she be dishonest; et tyrannicum imperium, as our great Mr. Aristotle calls it,<sup>6</sup> too tyrannical a task, most unfit: for when she perceives her husband observes her and suspects, liberius peccat, saith <sup>7</sup>Nevisanus. Toxica zelotypo dedit uxor mæcha marito, she is exasperated, seeks by all means to vindicate herself, and will therefore offend, because she is unjustly suspected. The best course then is to let them have their own wills, give them free liberty, without any keeping.

 For beauty will be where is most resort.<sup>8</sup>

If she be honest, as Lucretia to Collatinus, Laodamia to Protesilaus, Penelope to her Ulysses, she will so continue her honour, good name, credit,

Penelope conjux semper Ulyssis ero; <sup>10</sup>

Turn her loose to all those Tarquins and Satyrs, she will not be tempted. asked his wife, how she liked Cyrus, and what she did especially commend in him? she swore she did not observe him; when he replied again, what then she did observe, whom she looked on? She made answer, her husband that said he would die for her sake. Such are the properties and conditions of good women: and if she be well given, she will so carry herself; if otherwise she be naught, use all the means thou canst, she will be naught. Non deest animus sed corruptor,<sup>1</sup> she hath so many lies, excuses, as an hare hath muses,<sup>4</sup> tricks, Pandars, Bawds, shifts to deceive, 'tis to no purpose to keep her up, or to reclaim her by hard usage. Fair means peradventure may do somewhat.

Men and women are both in a predicament in this behalf, so sooner won, and better pacified. Duci volunt, non cogi: though she be as arrant a scold as Xanthippe, as cruel as Medea, as clamorous as Hecuba, as lustful as Messalina, by such means (if at all) she may be reformed. Many patient Grizels by their obsequiousness in this kind, have reclaimed their husbands from their wandering lusts. In Nova Francia and Turkey (as Leah, Rachel, and Sarah did to Abraham and Jacob) they bring their fairest damsels to their husbands' beds; Livia seconded the lustful appetites of Augustus:<sup>5</sup> Stratonice wife to King Deiolarus did not only bring Electra, a fair maid, to her goodman's bed, but brought up the children begot on her, as carefully as if they had been her own.<sup>6</sup> Tertius Æmilius' wife, Cornelia's mother, perceiving her husband's intemperance, rem dissimulavit, made much of the maid, and would take no notice of it. A new married man, when a pick-thank friend of his, to curry favour, had shewed him his wife familiar in private with a young gallant, courting and dallying, &c. Tush, said he, let him do his worst, I dare trust my wife, though I dare not trust him. The best remedy then is by fair means; if that will not take place, to dissemble it, as I say, or turn it off with a jest: hear Guevara's advice in this case, vel joco excipies, vel silentio eludes; for if you take exceptions at every thing your wife doth, Solomon's wisdom, Hercules' valour, Homer's learning, Socrates' patience, Argus' vigilancy will not serve [your] turn.

Therefore minus malum,<sup>1</sup> a less mischief Nevisanus holds, dis-simulare, to be <sup>2</sup>cuniarum emptor, a buyer of cradles, as the proverb is, than to be too solicitous. <sup>3</sup>A good fellow when his wife was brought to bed before her time, bought half a dozen of Cradles beforehand for so many children, as if his wife should continue to bear children at every two months. <sup>4</sup>Pertinax the Emperor, when one told him a Fiddler was too familiar with his Empress, made no reckoning of it. And when that Macedonian Philip was up-braided with his wife's dishonesty, cum tot victor regnorum ac populorum esset, &c. a Conqueror of Kingdoms could not tame his wife, (for she thrust him out of doors) he made a jest of it. Sapientes portant cornua in pectore, stulti in fronte, saith Nevisanus, wise men bear their horns in their hearts, fools on their foreheads. Eumenes, King of Pergamus, was at deadly feud with Perseus of Macedonia, insomuch that Perseus, hearing of a journey he was to take to Dolphi,<sup>5</sup> set a company of soldiers to intercept him in his passage; they did it accordingly, and as they supposed, left him stoned to death. The news of this fact was brought instantly to Pergamus; Attalus, Eumenes brother, proclaimed himself King forthwith, took possession of the Crown, and married Stratonice the Queen. But by and by, when contrary news was brought, that King Eumenes was alive, and now coming to the City, he laid by his Crown, left his wife, as a private man went to meet him, and congratulate his return. Eumenes, though he knew all particulars passed, yet dissembling the matter, kindly embraced his brother, and took his wife into his favour again, as if no such matter had been heard of or done. Jocundo, in Ariosto, [Lib. 28.] found his wife in bed with a knave, both asleep, went his ways, and would not so much as wake them, much less reprove them for it. <sup>1</sup> An honest fellow finding in like sort his wife had played false at Tables,<sup>2</sup> and borne a man too many, drew his dagger, and swore if he had not been his very friend, he would have killed him. Another hearing one had done that for him, which no man desires to be done by a Deputy, followed him in a rage with his sword drawn, and having overtaken him, laid adultery to his charge; the offender hotly pursued, confessed it was true, with which confession he was satisfied, and so left him, swearing, that if he had denied it, he would not have put it up. How much better is it to do thus, than to macerate himself, impatiently to rave and rage, to enter an Action (as Arnoldus Tilius did in the Court of Toulouse, against Martin Guerre his fellow-soldier, for that he counterfeited his habit, and was too familiar with his wife) so to divulge his own shame, and to remain for ever a Cuckold on record! SUBJECT. 2.—By prevention before, or after marriage, Plato's community, marry a Courtesan, Philters, Stews, to marry one equal in years, fortunes, of a good family, education, good place, to use them well, &c.

OF such medicines as conduce to the cure of this malady, I have sufficiently treated; there be some good remedies remaining, by way of prevention, precautions, or admonitions, which, if rightly practised, may do much good. Plato, in his Common-wealth,<sup>7</sup> to prevent this mischief belike, would have all things common, wives and children all as one: and which Cæsar in his Commentaries [v. 14.] observed of those old Britons, that first inhabited this Land, they had ten or twelve wives allotted to such a family, or promiscuously to be used by so many men: not one to one, as with us, or four five or six to one, as in Turkey. The "Nicholaites, a Sect that sprung, saith Austin, from Nicholas the Deacon, would have women indifferent; and the cause of this filthy sect was Nicholas the Deacon's jealousy, for which, when he was condemned, to purge himself of his offence, he broached his heresy that it was lawful to lie with one another's wives, and for any man to lie with his : like to those Anabaptists<sup>1</sup> in Munster, that would consort with other men's wives as the spirit moved them : or as <sup>2</sup>Mahomet, the seducing Prophet, would needs use women as he list himself, to beget Prophets ; 205, their Alcoran saith, were in love with him, and <sup>3</sup>he as able as forty men. Amongst the old Carthaginians, as <sup>4</sup>Bohemus relates out of Sabellicus, the King of the Country lay with the bride the first night, and once in a year they went promiscuously altogether. Munster, Cosmog. lib. 3. cap. 497, ascribes the beginning of this brutish custom (unjustly) to one Picardus, a French-man, that invented a new sect of Adamites, to go naked as Adam did, and to use promiscuous venery at set times.<sup>5</sup> When the Priest repeated that of Genesis, Increase and multiply, out <sup>6</sup>went the candles in the place where they met, and without all respect of age, persons, conditions, catch that catch may, every man took her came next, &c. Some fasten this on those ancient Bohemians and Russians : <sup>7</sup>others on the inhabitants of Mambrium, in the Lucerne valley in Piedmont ; and, as I read, it was practised in Scotland amongst Christians themselves, until King Malcolm's time, the King or the Lord of the Town had their maiden-heads. In some parts of <sup>8</sup>India in our age, and those <sup>9</sup>Jeelanders, <sup>10</sup>as amongst the Babylonians of old, they will prostitute their wives and daughters (which Chalcocondylas, a Greek modern writer, for want of better intelligence, puts upon us Britons) to such travellers or sea-faring men, as come amongst them by chance, to shew how far they were from this feral vice of Jealousy, and how little they esteemed it. The Kings of Calicut, as <sup>11</sup>Lod. Vertomannus relates, will not touch their wives, till one of their Biarmi or high Priests have lain first with them, to sanctify their wombs. But those Essæi<sup>12</sup> and Montanists, two strange sects of old, were in another extreme, they would not marry at all, or have any society with women, <sup>1</sup>because of their intemperance they held them all to be naught. Nevisanus the Lawyer, lib. 4. num. 33. syl. nupt. would have him that is inclined to this malady, to prevent the worst, marry a quean, capiens meretricem, hoc habet saltem boni, quod non decipitur, quia scit eam sic esse, quod non contingit aliis. A fornicator in Seneca<sup>2</sup> constuprated two wenches in a night; for satisfaction the one desired to hang him, the other to marry him. <sup>3</sup>Hieronimus, King of Syracuse in Sicily, espoused himself to Peitho, keeper of the Stews;<sup>4</sup> and Ptolemy took Thais a common Whore to be his wife, had two sons, Leontiscus and Lagus, by her, and one daughter Irene: 'tis therefore no such unlikely thing. <sup>5</sup>A Citizen of Eugubine gelded himself to try his wife's honesty, and to be freed from jealousy: so did a Baker in <sup>6</sup>Basil, to the same intent. But of all other precedents in this kind, that of <sup>7</sup>Com-babus is most memorable: who to prevent his Master's suspicion, for he was a beautiful young man, and sent by Seleucus his Lord and King, with Stratonice the Queen, to conduct her into Syria, fearing the worst, gelded himself before he went, and left his genitals behind him in a box sealed up. His Mistress by the way fell in love with him, but he not yielding to her, was accused to Seleucus of incontinency (as that Bellerophon was in like case, falsely traduced by Sthenobœa, to King Prætus her husband, cum non posset illum ad coitum inducere) and that by her, and was therefore at his coming home cast into prison: the day of hearing appointed, he was sufficiently cleared and acquitted by shewing his privities, which to the admiration of the beholders he had formerly cut off. The Lydians used to geld women whom they suspected, saith Leonicius, var. hist. lib. 3. cap. 59, as well as men. To this purpose <sup>8</sup>Saint Francis, because he used to confess women in private, to prevent suspicion, and prove himself a Maid, stripped himself before the Bishop of Assisi and others: and Friar Leonard for the same cause went through Viterbo in Italy without any garments.

Our Pseudo-Catholicks, to help these inconveniences which proceed from Jealousy, to keep themselves and their wives honest, make severe Laws; against adultery present death; and withal [for] fornication, a venial sin, as a sink to convey that furious and swift stream of concupiscence, they appoint and permit stews, those punks and pleasant sinners, the more to secure their wives in all populous Cities, for they hold them as necessary as Churches; and howsoever unlawful, yet to avoid a greater mischief to be tolerated in policy, as usury, for the hardness of men's hearts; and for this end they have whole Colleges of Courtesans in their Towns and Cities. Of <sup>1</sup> Cato's mind belike, that would have his servants (cum ancillis congrédi coitus causa, definito ære, ut graviora facinora evitarent, cæteris interim interdicens) familiar with some such feminine creatures, to avoid worse mischiefs in his house, and made allowance for it. They hold it impossible for idle persons, young, rich, and lusty, so many servants, Monks, Friars, to live honest, too tyrannical a burden to compel them to be chaste, and most unfit to suffer poor men, younger brothers and soldiers at all to marry, as also diseased persons, votaries, priests, servants. Therefore as well to keep and ease the one as the other, they tolerate and wink at these kind of Brothel-houses and Stews. Many probable arguments they have to prove the lawfulness, the necessity, and a toleration of them, as of usury; and without question in policy they are not to be contradicted: but altogether in Religion. Others prescribe philters, spells, charms to keep men and women honest. <sup>2</sup> Mulier ut alienum virum non admittat præter suum: Accipe fel hirci, et adipem, et exsicca, calescat in oleo, &c. et non alium præter te amabit. In Alexi, Porta, &c. plura invenies, et multò his absurdiora, uti et in Rhasi, ne mulier virum admittat, et maritum solum diligat, &c. But these are most part Pagan, impious, irreligious, absurd, and ridiculous devices.

The best means to avoid these and like inconveniences, are, to take away the causes and occasions. To this purpose <sup>3</sup> Varro writ Satiram Menippeam, but it is lost. <sup>4</sup> Patricius prescribes four rules to be observed in choosing of a wife (which whoso will may read); Fonseca the Spaniard in his 45. c. Amphitheat Amoris, [14,]) not to be too rash and precipitate in his election, to run upon the first he meets, or dote on every stout fair piece he sees, but to choose her as much by his ears as eyes, to be well advised whom he takes, of what age, &c. and cautious<sup>3</sup> in his proceeding. An old man should not marry a young woman, or a young woman an old man,

Talis apud Sophoclem nostra puella sedet.

So lies a wench with Sophocles in bed.

For Sophocles, as <sup>6</sup>Athenæus describes him, was a very old man, as cold as January, a bed-fellow of bones, and doted yet upon Archippe a young Courtesan, than which nothing can be more odious. <sup>7</sup>Senex maritus uxori juveni ingratus est, an old man is a most unwelcome guest to a young wench, unable, unfit:

Omnis horret Amor Venusque Hymenque.

And as in like case a good fellow that had but a peck of corn weekly to grind, yet would needs build a new Mill for it, found his error eftsoons, for either he must let his Mill be waste, pull it quite down, or let others grind at it: so these men, &c.

Seneca therefore disallows all such unseasonable matches, habent enim maledicti locum crebræ nuptiæ. And as <sup>9</sup>Tully farther inveighs,

(so he calls them) with a remembrance of their former pleasures, against nature they stir up their dead flesh; but an old lecher is abominable; mulier tertio nubens, <sup>1</sup>Nevisanus holds, presumitur lubrica et inconstans, a woman that marries a third time may be presumed to be no honestest than she should. Of them both, thus Ambrose concludes in his comment upon Luke, [i. 24, 25.] <sup>2</sup>they that are coupled together, not to get children, but to satisfy their lust, are not husbands, but fornicators, with whom St. Austin consents: matrimony without hope of children, non matrimonium, sed concubium dici debet, is not a wedding but a jumbling or coupling together.<sup>3</sup> In a word (except they wed for mutual society, help, and comfort, one of another, in which respects, though <sup>4</sup>Tiberius deny it, without question old folks may well marry) for sometimes a man hath most need of a wife, according to Puccius, when he hath no need of a wife; otherwise it is most odious, when an old Acherontick dizzard, that hath one foot in his grave, a silicernium,<sup>5</sup> shall flicker after a lusty young wench that is blythe and bonny, famous precedents we have in that kind; but not à contra; <sup>1</sup> 'tis not fit for an ancient woman to match with a young man. For as Varro will, annus dum ludit morti delicias facit, <sup>2</sup> 'tis Charon's match between Cascus and Casca, <sup>3</sup> and the Devil himself is surely well pleased with it. And therefore, as the <sup>4</sup> Poet inveighs, thou old Vetustilla, bed-ridden quean, that art now skin and bones,

Thou hast three hairs, four teeth, a breast

Must thou marry a youth again? And yet ducentas ire nuptum post mortes amant: <sup>5</sup> howsoever it is, as <sup>6</sup> Apuleius gives out of his Meroe, congressus annosus, pestilens, abhorrendus, a pestilent match, abominable, and not to be endured. In such case how can they otherwise choose but be jealous? how should they agree one with another? This inequality is not in years only, but in birth, fortunes, conditions, and all good qualities,

'Tis my counsel, saith Anthony Guevara, to choose such a one. Civis Civem ducat, Nobilis Nobilem, let a Citizen match with a Citizen, a Gentleman with a Gentlewoman: he that observes not this precept (saith he) non generum, sed malum genium, non nurum, sed furiam, non vitæ comitem, sed litis fomitem domi habebit, instead of a fair wife, shall have a fury, for a fit son-in-law a mere fiend, &c. Examples are too frequent.

Another main caution fit to be observed, is this, that though they be equal in years, birth, fortunes, and other conditions, yet they do not omit virtue and good education, which Musonius and Antipater so much inculcate in Stobæus.

Dos est magna parentum
Virtus, et metuens alterius viri

If as Plutarch adviseth,<sup>1</sup> one must eat modium salis, a bushel of salt with him, before he choose his friend, what care should he had in choosing a wife, his second self, how solicitous should he be to know her qualities and behaviour! and when he is assured of them, not to prefer birth, fortune, beauty, before bringing up, and good conditions. <sup>2</sup>Coguage, god of Cuckolds, as one merrily said, accompanies the goddess Jealousy, both follow the fairest, by Jupiter's appointment, and they sacrifice to them together: beauty and honesty seldom agree; straight personages have often crooked manners; fair faces, foul vices; good complexions, ill conditions. Suspicionis plena res est, et insidiarum, beauty (saith <sup>3</sup>Chrysostom) is full of treachery and suspicion: he that hath a fair wife, cannot have a worse mischief, and yet most covet it, as if nothing else in marriage but that and wealth were to be respected. <sup>4</sup>Francis Sforza, Duke of Milan, was so curious in this behalf, that he would not marry the Duke of Mantua's daughter, except he might see her naked first: which Lycurgus appointed in his Laws,<sup>5</sup> and More in his Utopian Commonwealth approves.<sup>6</sup> <sup>7</sup>In Italy, as a traveller observes, if a man have three or four daughters, or more, and they prove fair, they are married eftsoons: if deformed, they change their lovely names of Lucia, Cynthia, Camæna, call them Dorothy, Ursula, Bridget, and so put them into Monasteries, as if none were fit for marriage, but such as are eminently fair: but these are erroneous tenents: a modest Virgin well conditioned, to such a fair snout piece, is much to be preferred. If thou wilt avoid them, take away all causes of suspicion and jealousy, marry a coarse piece, fetch her from <sup>8</sup>Cassandra's Temple, which was wont in Italy to be a Sanctuary of all deformed Maids, and so thou shalt be sure that no man will make thee cuckold, but for spite. A Citizen of Byzantium in Thrace, had a filthy dowdy, deformed slut to his wife, and finding her in bed with another man, cried out as one amazed: O miser! quæ te necessitas huc adegit?<sup>9</sup> O thou wretch! what necessity brought thee hither? as well he might ; for who can affect such a one ? But this is warily to be understood, most offend in another extreme, they prefer wealth before beauty, and so she be rich, they care not how she look ; but these are all out as faulty as the rest. Attendenda uxoris forma, as <sup>1</sup>Sarisburiensis adviseth, ne si alteram aspexeris, mox eam sordere putes, as that Knight in Chaucer, that was married to an old woman,

I can perhaps give instance. Molestum est possidere, quod nemo habere dignetur,<sup>4</sup> [it is] a misery to possess that which no man likes : on the other side, difficile custoditur quod plures amant.<sup>5</sup> And as the bragging soldier vaunted in the Comedy, nimia est miseria pulchrum esse hominem nimis.<sup>6</sup> Scipio did never so hardly besiege Carthage, as these young gallants will beset thine house, one with wit or person, another with wealth, &c. If she be fair, saith Guazzo, she will be suspected howsoever. Both extremes are naught, pulchra citò adamat, fœda facile concupiscit,<sup>7</sup> the one is soon beloved, the other loves : one is hardly kept, because proud and arrogant, the other not worth keeping ; what is to be done in this case ? Ennius in Menelippe<sup>8</sup> adviseth thee as a friend to take statam formam, si vis habere incolumem pudicitiam, one of a middle size, neither too fair nor too foul, man, I will tell you as good cheap, saith Nicostratus in <sup>1</sup>Stobæus, to avoid future strife, and for quietness' sake, when you are in bed, take heed of your wives' flattering speeches overnight, and curtain sermons in the morning. Let them do their endeavour likewise to maintain them to their means, which <sup>2</sup>Patricius ingeminates, and let them have liberty with discretion, as time and place requires: many women turn queans by compulsion, as <sup>3</sup>Nerisanius observes, because their husbands are so hard, and keep them so short in diet and apparel, paupertas cogit eas meretricari, poverty and hunger, want of means, makes them dishonest, or bad usage; their churlish behaviour forceth them to fly out, or bad examples, they do it to cry quittance. In the other extreme some are too liberal, as the proverb is, turdus ipse malum sibi cacat,<sup>4</sup> they make a rod for their own tails, as Candaules did to Gyges in <sup>5</sup>Herodotus, commend his wife's beauty himself, and besides would needs have him see her naked. Whilst they give their wives too much liberty to gad abroad, and bountiful allowance, they are accessory to their own miseries; animæ uxorum pessimè olent, as Plautus jibes,<sup>6</sup> they have deformed souls, and by their painting and colours procure odium mariti, their husband's hate, especially,

Besides, their wives (as <sup>8</sup>Basil notes) impudenter se exponunt masculorum aspectibus, jactantes tunicas, et coram tripudiantes, impudently thrust themselves into other men's companies, and by their undecent wanton carriage provoke and tempt the spectators. woman abroad and alone is like a Deer broke out of a Park, quam mille venatores insequuntur, whom every hunter follows; and besides in such places she cannot so well vindicate herself, but as that virgin Dinah (Gen. 34. 2.) going for to see the daughters of the land, lost her virginity, she may be defiled and overtaken on a sudden.

And therefore I know not what Philosopher he was, that would have women come but thrice abroad all their time, <sup>2</sup> to be baptized, married, and buried; but he was too strait-laced. Let them have their liberty in good sort, and go in good sort, modò non annos viginti ætatis suæ domi relinquunt, as a good fellow said, so that they look not twenty years younger abroad than they do at home, they be not spruce, neat, Angels abroad, beasts, dowdies, sluts at home; but seek by all means to please and give content to their husbands; to be quiet above all things, obedient, silent and patient; if they be incensed, angry, chide a little, their wives 'must not cample' again, but take it in good part. An honest woman, I cannot now tell where she dwelt, but by report an honest woman she was, hearing one of her gossips by chance complaining of her husband's impatience, told her an excellent remedy for it, and gave her withal a glass of water, which when he brawled she should hold still in her mouth, and that toties quoties, as often as he chid; she did so two or three times with good success, and at length seeing her neighbour, gave her great thanks for it, and would needs know the ingredients, <sup>3</sup> she told her in brief what it was, fair water, and no more: for it was not the water, but her silence which performed the cure. Let every froward woman imitate this example, and be quiet within doors, and (as M. Auræus prescribes) a necessary caution it is to be observed of all good matrons that love their credits, to come little abroad, but follow their work at home, look to their household affairs and private business, æconomæ incumbentes, be sober, thrifty, wary, circumspect, modest, and compose themselves to live to their husbands' means, as a good housewife should do.

These cautions concern him ; and if by those or his own discretion otherwise he cannot moderate himself, his friends must not be wanting by their wisdom, if it be possible, to give the party grieved satisfaction, to prevent and remove the occasions, objects, if it may be to secure him. moreover, when he came home to Athens, that he had a son should be King of the Lacedæmonians. If such objects were removed, no doubt but the parties might easily be satisfied, or that they could use them gently, and intreat them well, not to revile them, scoff at, hate them, as in such cases commonly they do; 'tis an inhuman infirmity, a miserable vexation, and they should not add grief to grief, nor aggravate their misery, but seek to please, and by all means give them content, by good counsel, removing such offensive objects, or by mediation of some discreet friends. In old Rome there was a Temple erected by the Matrons to that <sup>1</sup> Viriplaca Dea; another to Venus Verticordia,<sup>2</sup> quæ maritos uxoris rellebat benevolos, whither (if any difference happened betwixt man and wife) they did instantly resort: there they did offer sacrifice, a white Hart, Plutarch records, sine felle, without the gall (some say the like of Juno's Temple) and make their prayers for conjugal peace: before some <sup>3</sup> indifferent arbitrators and friends, the matter was heard betwixt man and wife, and commonly composed. In our times we want no sacred Churches, or good men, to end such Controversies, if use were made of them. Some say, that precious stone called <sup>4</sup> Beryllus, others a Diamond, hath excellent virtue, contra hostium injurias, et conjugatos invicem conciliare, to reconcile men and wives, to maintain unity and love; you may try this when you will, and as you see cause. If none of all these means and cautions will take place, I know not what remedy to prescribe, or whither such persons may go for ease, except they can get into the same <sup>5</sup> Turkey Paradise, where they shall have us many fair wives as they will themselves, with clear eyes, and such as look on none but their own husbands, no fear, no danger of being Cuckolds; or else I would have them observe that strict rule of <sup>6</sup> Alphonsus, to marry a deaf and dumb man to a blind woman. If this will not help, let them, to prevent the worst, consult with an <sup>7</sup> Astrologer, and see whether the Significators in her Horoscope agree with his, that they be not in signis et partibus odiose intuentibus aut imperantibus, sed mutuo et amicè antisciis et obedientibus, otherwise (as they hold) there will be intolerable enmities between them: or else get him Sigillum Veneris, a Characteristical Seal stamped in the day and hour of Venus, when she is fortunate, with such and such set words and charms, which Villanovanus and Leo Suavius prescribe, ex sigillis magicis Salomonis, Hermetis, Raguelis, &c. with many such, which Alexis, Albertus, and some of our Natural Magicians put upon us: ut mulier cum aliquo adulterare non possit, incide de Capillis ejus, &c. and he shall surely be gracious in all women's eyes, and never suspect or disagree with his own wife, so long as he wears it. If this course be not approved, and other remedies may not be had, they must in the last place sue for a divorce: but that is somewhat difficult to effect, and not all out so fit. For as Felisacus, in his Tract de justa uxore, urgeth, if that law of Constantine the great, or that of Theodosius and Valentinian, concerning divorce, were in use in our times, innumeras propemodum viduas haberemus, et cœlibes viros, we should have almost no married couples left. Try therefore those former remedies: or as Tertullian reports of Democritus, that put out his eyes<sup>1</sup> because he could not look on a woman without lust, and was much troubled to see that which he might not enjoy; let him make himself blind, and so he shall avoid that care and molestation of watching his wife. One other sovereign remedy I could repeat, an especial Antidote against Jealousy, an excellent cure; but I am not now disposed to tell it, not that like a covetous Empirick, I conceal it for any gain, but some other reasons, I am not willing to publish it; if you be very desirous to know it, when I meet you next, I will peradventure tell you what it is in your ear. ## SECT. IV. MEMB I.

SUBJECT. I.—Religious Melancholy. Its object God; what his beauty is; how it allureth. The parts and parties affected.

THAT there is such a distinct species of Love-Melancholy, no man hath ever yet doubted; but whether this subdivision of <sup>1</sup>Religious Melancholy be warrantable, it may be controverted.

<sup>2</sup> Pergite Pierides, medio nec calle vagantem
Nulla rotæ currus testantur signa priores.

I have no pattern to follow, as in some of the rest, no man to imitate. No Physician hath as yet distinctly written of it, as of the other; all acknowledge it a most notable symptom, some a cause, but few a species or kind. <sup>3</sup>Areteus, Alexander, Rhasis, Avicenna, and most of our late Writers, as Gordonius, Fuchsius, Plater, Bruel, Montaltus, &c. repeat it as a symptom. <sup>4</sup>Some seem to be inspired of the Holy Ghost, some take upon them to be Prophets, some are addicted to new opinions, some foretell strange things, de statu mundi et Antichristi, saith Gordonius. Some will prophesy of the end of the World to a day almost, and the fall of the Antichrist, as they have been addicted or brought up; for so melancholy works with them, as <sup>5</sup>Laurentius holds. If they have been precisely given, all their meditations tend that way, and in conclusion produce strange effects, the humour imprints symptoms according to their several inclinations and conditions, which makes <sup>6</sup>Guianerus and <sup>7</sup>Felix Plater, put too much devotion, blind zeal, fear of eternal punishment, and that last judgment, for a cause of those Enthusiasticks and desperate persons; but some do not obscurely make a distinct species of it, dividing Love-Melancholy into that whose object is women; and into the other, whose object is God. Plato, in Convivio, makes mention of two distinct furies; and amongst our Neotericks, Hercules de Saxonâ, lib. 1. pract. med. cap. 16. cap. de Melanch. doth expressly treat of

Give me but a little leave, and I will set before your eyes in brief a stupend, vast, infinite Ocean of incredible madness and folly: a Sea full of shelves and rocks, sands, gulfs, Euripuses, and contrary tides, full of fearful monsters, uncouth shapes, roaring waves, tempests, and Siren calms, Hælyonian Seas, unspeakable misery, such Comedies and Tragedies, such absurd and ridiculous, feral and lamentable fits, that I know not whether they are more to be pitied or derided, or may be believed, but that we daily see the same still practised in our days, fresh examples, nova novitia, fresh objects of misery and madness in this kind, that are still represented unto us, abroad, at home, in the midst of us, in our bosoms.

But before I can come to treat of these several errors and obliquities, their causes, symptoms, affections, &c. I must say something necessarily of the object of this love, God himself, what this love is, how it allureth, whence it proceeds, and (which is the cause of all our miseries) how we mistake, wander, and swerve from it.

Amongst all those Divine Attributes that God doth vindicate to himself, Eternity, Omnipotency, Immutability, Wisdom, Majesty, Justice, Mercy, &c., his <sup>1</sup>Beauty is not the least, One thing, saith David, have I desired of the Lord, and that I will still desire, to behold the beauty of the Lord, Psal. 27. 4. And out of Sion, which is the perfection of beauty, hath God shined, Psal. 50. 2. All other creatures are fair, I confess, and many other objects do much enamour us, a fair house, a fair horse, a comely person. <sup>2</sup>I am amazed, saith Austin, when I look up to Heaven, and behold the beauty of the Stars, the beauty of Angels, Principalities, Powers, who can express it? who can sufficiently commend, or set out this beauty which appears in us? so fair a body, so fair a face, eyes, nose, cheeks, chin, brows, all fair and lovely to behold, besides the beauty of the soul, which cannot be discerned. If we so labour, and be so much affected, with the comeliness of creatures, how should we be ravished with that admirable lustre of God himself? If ordinary beauty have such a prerogative and power, and what is amiable and fair, to draw the eyes and ears, hearts and affections, of all spectators unto it, to move, win, entice, allure: how shall this divine form ravish our souls, which is the fountain and quintessence of all beauty? Cælum pulchrum, sed pulchrior cæli fabricator, if Heaven be so fair, the Sun so fair, how much fairer shall he be that made them fair? For by the greatness and beauty of the creatures, proportionally the maker of them is seen, Wisd. 13. 5. If there be such pleasure in beholding a beautiful person alone, and, as a plausible Sermon, he so much affect us, what shall this beauty of God himself, that is infinitely fairer than all creatures, men, angels? &c.

This lustre, pulchritudo omnium pulcherrima. This beauty and <sup>2</sup> splendour of the divine Majesty, is it that draws all creatures to it, to seek it, love, admire, and adore it; and those Heathens, Pagans, Philosophers, out of those reliques they have yet left of God's Image, are so far forth incensed, as not only to acknowledge a God, but, though after their own inventions, to stand in admiration of his bounty, goodness, to adore and seek him; the magnificence and structure of the world itself, and beauty of all his creatures, his goodness, providence, protection, enforceth them to love him, seek him, fear him, though a wrong way to adore him; but for us that are Christians, Regenerate, that are his Adopted sons, Illuminated by his Word, having the eyes of our hearts and understandings opened; how fairly doth he offer and expose himself! Ambit nos Deus (Austin saith) donis et formâ suâ, he woos us by his beauty, gifts, promises, to come unto him; <sup>3</sup> the whole Scripture is a message, an exhortation, a love-letter to this purpose, to incite us, and invite us, <sup>4</sup> God's Epistle, as Gregory calls it, to his creatures. He sets out his Son and his Church in that Epithalamium, or mystical Song of Solomon, to enamour us the more, comparing his head to fine gold, his locks curled, and black as a Raven, Cant. 5. 11, sq. his eyes like doves on rivers of waters, washed with milk; his lips as lilies, dropping down pure juice; his hands as rings of gold set with chrysolite. and his Church to a vineyard, a garden enclosed, a fountain of living waters, an orchard of Pomegranates, with sweet scents of saffron, spike, calamus and cinnamon, and all the trees of incense, as the chief spices; the fairest amongst women, no spot in her, his sister, his Spouse, undefiled, the only daughter of her mother, dear unto her, fair as the Moon, pure as the Sun, looking out as the morning; that by these figures, that glass, these spiritual eyes of contemplation, we might perceive some resemblance of his beauty, the love betwixt his Church and him. And so in the 45th Psalm, [vv. 9, 11.] this beauty of his Church is compared to a Queen in a vesture of gold of Ophir, embroidered raiment of needle-work, that the King might take pleasure in her beauty. To incense us further yet, <sup>1</sup>John in his Apocalypse, makes a description of that heavenly Jerusalem, the beauty of it, and in it the maker of it; likening it to a city of pure gold, like unto clear glass, shining and garnished with all manner of precious stones, having no need of Sun or Moon: for the Lamb is the light of it, the glory of God doth illuminate it: to give us to understand the infinite glory, beauty and happiness of it. Not that it is no fairer than these creatures to which it is compared, but that this vision of his, this lustre of his divine majesty, cannot otherwise be expressed to our apprehensions, no tongue can tell, no heart can conceive it, as Paul saith.<sup>2</sup> Moses himself, Exod. 33. 18, 23. when he desired to see God in his glory, was answered, that he might not endure it, no man could see his face and live. Sensibile forte destruit sensum, a strong object overcometh the sight, according to that axiom in Philosophy: fulgorem Solis ferre non potes, multo magis Creatoris: if thou canst not endure the Sun beams, how canst thou endure that fulgor and brightness of him that made the Sun? The Sun itself, and all that we can imagine, are but shadows of it, 'tis visio præcellens, as <sup>3</sup>Austin calls it, the quintessence of beauty this, which far exceeds the beauty of Heavens, Sun and Moon, Stars, Angels, gold and silver, woods, fair fields, and whatsoever is pleasant to behold. All those o her beauties fail, vary, are subject to corruption, to loathing; <sup>4</sup>but this is an immortal vision, a divine beauty, an immortal love, an indefatigable love and beauty, with sight of which we shall never be tired, nor wearied, but still the more we see the more we shall covet him. For as <sup>5</sup>one saith, where this vision is, there is absolute beauty; and where is that beauty, from the same fountain comes all pleasure and happiness; neither can beauty, pleasure, happiness, be separated from his vision or sight, or his vision from beauty, pleasure, happiness. In this life we have but a glimpse of this beauty and happiness : we shall hereafter, as John saith, see him as he is :<sup>1</sup> thine eyes, as Isaiah promiseth, chap. 33. ver. 17, shall behold the King in his glory, then shall we be perfectly enamoured, have a full fruition of it, desire,<sup>2</sup> behold and love him alone as the most amiable and fairest object, or summum bonum, or chiefest good.

This likewise should we now have done, had not our will been corrupted ; and as we are enjoined to love God with all our heart, and all our soul : for to that end were we born, to love this object, as <sup>3</sup> Melancthon discourseth, and to enjoy it. And him our will would have loved and sought alone as our summum bonum, or principal good, and all other good things for God's sake : and nature, as she proceeded from it, would have sought this fountain ; but in this infirmity of human nature this order is disturbed, our love is corrupt : and a man is like that monster in <sup>4</sup> Plato, composed of a Scylla, a lion, and a man. We are carried away headlong with the torrent of our affections : the world and that infinite variety of pleasing objects in it, do so allure and enamour us, that we cannot so much as look towards God, seek him, or think on him as we should : we cannot, saith Austin, rempub. cœlestem cogitare, we cannot contain ourselves from them, their sweetness is so pleasing to us. Marriage, saith <sup>5</sup> Gualter, detains many, a thing in itself laudable, good and necessary, but many deceived and carried away with the blind love of it, have quite laid aside the love of God, and desire of his glory. Meat and drink hath overcome as many, whilst they rather strive to please, satisfy their guts and belly, than to serve God and nature. Some are so busied about merchandise to get money, they lose their own souls, whiles covetously carried ; and with an unsatiable desire of gain, they forget God ; as much we may say of honour, leagues, friendships, health, wealth, and all other profits or pleasures in this life whatsoever. <sup>6</sup> in this world there be so many beautiful objects, splendours and brightness of gold, majesty of glory, assistance of friends, fair promises, smooth words, victories, triumphs, and such an infinite company of pleasing beauties to allure us, and draw us from God, that we cannot look after him. And this is it which Christ himself, those Prophets and Apostles, so much thundered against, 1 John. 2. 15. dehort us from; Love not the world, nor the things that are in the world: if any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him, 16, 17; For all that is in the world, as the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and pride of life, is not of the Father, but of the world: and the world passeth away and the lust thereof; but he that fulfilleth the will of God abideth for ever. No man, saith our Saviour, can serve two masters, but he must love the one and hate the other;<sup>1</sup> &c., bonos vel malos mores, boni vel mali faciunt amores, Austin well infers: and this is that which all the fathers inculcate. He cannot (<sup>2</sup>Austin admonisheth) be God's friend, that is delighted with the pleasures of the world: make clean thine heart, purify thine heart, if thou wilt see this beauty, prepare thyself for it. It is the eye of contemplation, by which we must behold it, the wing of meditation which lifts us up and rears our souls with the motion of our hearts, and sweetness of contemplation: so saith Gregory, cited by <sup>3</sup>Bonaventure. And as <sup>4</sup>Philo Judæus seconds him, He that loves God will soar aloft and take him wings; and leaving the earth fly up to Heaven, wander with Sun and Moon, Stars, and that heavenly troop, God himself being his guide. If we desire to see him, we must lay aside all vain objects, which detain us and dazzle our eyes, and as <sup>5</sup>Ficinus adviseth us, get us solar eyes, spectacles as they that look on the Sun: to see this divine beauty, lay aside all material objects, all sense, and then thou shalt see him as he is. Thou covetous wretch, as <sup>6</sup>Austin expostulates, why dost thou stand gaping on this dross, muck-hills, filthy excrements? behold a far fairer object, God himself wooes thee; behold him, enjoy him, he is sick for love, Cant. 5. He invites thee to his sight, to come into his fair Garden, to eat and drink with him, to be merry with him, to enjoy his presence for ever. <sup>1</sup>Wisdom cries out in the streets, besides the gates, in the top of high places, before the City, at the entry of the door, and bids them give ear to her instruction, which is better than gold or precious stones; no pleasures can be compared to it: leave all then and follow her, vos exhortor, o amici, et obsecro. In <sup>2</sup>Ficinus' words, I exhort and beseech you, that you would embrace and follow this divine love with all your hearts and abilities, by all offices and endeavours make this so loving God propitious unto you. For whom alone saith <sup>3</sup>Plotinus, we must forsake the Kingdoms and Empires of the whole earth, Sea, Land, and Air, if we desire to be engrafted into him, leave all and follow him.

Now forasmuch as this love of God is an habit infused of God, as <sup>4</sup>Thomas holds, 1. 2. quest. 23, by which a man is inclined to love God above all, and his neighbour as himself, we must pray to God that he will open our eyes, make clear our hearts, that we may be capable of his glorious rays, and perform those duties that he requires of us, Deut. 6. and Jos. 23. to love God above all, and our neighbour as ourself, to keep his commandments. In this we know, saith John, c. 5. 2 we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments. This is the love of God that he keep his commandments; he that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love, cap. 4. 8, and he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in God, and God in him, for love presupposeth knowledge, faith, hope, and unites us to God himself, as <sup>5</sup>Leon Hebræus delivereth unto us, and is accompanied with the fear of God, humility, meekness, patience, all those virtues, and charity itself. For if we love God, we shall love our neighbour, and perform the duties which are required at our hands, to which we are exhorted, 1 Cor. 13. 4. 5. Ephes. 4. Colos. 3. Rom. 12. We shall not be envious or puffed up, or boast, disdain, think evil, or be provoked to anger, but suffer all things; endeavour to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace; forbear one another, forgive one another, clothe the naked, visit the sick, and perform all those works of mercy, which <sup>6</sup>Clemens Alexandrinus calls amoris et amicitiae impletionem et extensionem, the extent and complement of Love; and that not for fear or worldly respects, but ordine ad Deum, for the love of God himself. This we shall do if we be truly enamoured; but we come short in both, we neither love God nor our neighbour as we should. Our love in spiritual things is too <sup>1</sup>defective, in worldly things too excessive, there is a jar in both. We love the world too much; God too little; our neighbour not at all, or for our own ends.

The chief thing we respect is our commodity: and what we do, is for fear of worldly punishment, for vain-glory, praise of men, fashion, and such by-respects, not for God's sake. We neither know God aright, nor seek, love, or worship him as we should. And for these defects, we involve ourselves into a multitude of errors, we swerve from this true love and worship of God: which is a cause unto us of unspeakable miseries; running into both extremes, we become fools, madmen, without sense, as now in the next place I will shew you.

The parties affected are innumerable almost, and scattered over the face of the earth, far and near, and so have been in all precedent ages, from the beginning of the world to these times, of all sorts and conditions. For method's sake I will reduce them to a twofold division, according to those two extremes of Excess and Defect, Impiety and Superstition, Idolatry and Atheism. Not that there is any excess of divine worship or love of God; that cannot be, we cannot love God too much, or do our duty as we ought, as Papists hold, or have any perfection in this life, much less supererogate; when we have all done, we are unprofitable servants. But because we do aliud agere, are zealous without knowledge, and too solicitous about that which is not necessary, busying ourselves about impertinent, needless, idle, and vain ceremonies, populo ut placerent,<sup>3</sup> as the Jews did about sacrifices, oblations, offerings, incense, new Moons, feasts, &c. but as Isaiah taxeth them i. 12, Who required this at your hands? We have too great opinion of our own worth, that we can satisfy the Law; and do more than is required at our hands, by performing those Evangelical Counsels, and such works of supererogation, merit for others, which Bellarmino, Gregory de Valentia, all their Jesuits and champions defend, that if God should deal in rigour with them, some of their Franciscans and Dominicans are so pure, that nothing could be objected to them. Some of us again are too dear, as we think, more divine and sanctified than others, of a better metal, greater gifts, and with that proud Pharisee, condemn others in respect of ourselves, we are better Christians, better learned, choice spirits, inspired, know more, have special revelation, perceive God's secrets, and thereupon presume, say and do many times which is not fitting to be said or done. Of this number are all superstitious Idolaters, Ethnicks, Mahometans, Jews, Hereticks, <sup>1</sup>Enthusiasts, Divinators, Prophets, Sectaries, and Schismatics. Zanchius reduceth such infidels to four chief sects; but I will insist and follow mine own intended method: all which, with many other curious persons, Monks, Hermits, &c. may be ranged in this extreme, and fight under this superstitious banner, with those rude Idiots, and infinite swarms of people that are seduced by them. In the other extreme or in defect, march those impious Epicures, Libertines, Atheists, Hypocrites, Infidels, worldly, secure, impenitent, unthankful, and carnal-minded men, that attribute all to natural causes, that will acknowledge no supreme power; that have cauterized consciences,<sup>2</sup> or live in a reprobate sense: or such desperate persons as are too distrustful of his mercies. Of these there be many subdivisions, divers degrees of madness and folly, some more than other, as shall be shewed in the symptoms: and yet all miserably out, perplexed, doting, and besides themselves for religion's sake. For as <sup>3</sup>Zanchius well distinguished, and all the world knows, Religion is twofold, true or false; False is that vain superstition of Idolaters, such as were of old, Greeks, Romans, present Mahometans, &c. Timorem deorum inanem, <sup>4</sup>Tully could term it; or as Zanchius defines it, ubi falsi dii, aut falso cultu colitur Deus, when false gods or that God is falsely worshipped. And 'tis a miserable plague, a torture of the Soul, a mere madness, religiosa insania, <sup>5</sup>Meteran calls it, or insanus error as <sup>6</sup>Seneca, a frantick error; or as Austin, insanus animi morbus, a furious disease of the Soul; insania omnium insanissima, a quintessence of madness; <sup>7</sup>for he that is superstitious can never be quiet. 'Tis proper to man alone, uni superbia, avaritia, superstitio, saith Plin. lib. 7. cap. 1. atque etiam post sævit de futuro, which wrings his soul for the present and to come: the greatest misery belongs to mankind, a perpetual servitude, a slavery, ex timore timor, an heavy yoke, the seal of damnation, an intolerable burthen. They that are superstitious, are still fearing, suspecting, vexing themselves with auguries, prodigies, false tales, dreams, idle, vain works, unprofitable labours, as **Boterus* observes, curâ mentis ancipite versantur: enemies to God and to themselves. In a word, as Seneca concludes, Religio Deum colit, superstitio destruit,<sup>1</sup> superstition destroys, but true Religion honours God. True Religion, ubi verus Deus verè colitur, where the true God is truly worshipped, is the way to Heaven, the mother of all virtues, Love, Fear, Devotion, Obedience, Knowledge, &c. It rears the dejected Soul of man, and amidst so many cares, miseries, persecutions, which this world affords, it is a sole ease, an unspeakable comfort, a sweet reposal, jugum suave, et leve, a light yoke, an anchor, and an Haven. It adds courage, boldness, and begets generous spirits: although tyrants rage, persecute, and that bloody Lictor or Serjeant be ready to martyr them, aut lita, aut morere,<sup>2</sup> (as in those persecutions of the primitive Church, it was put in practise, as you may read in Eusebius,<sup>3</sup> and others) though enemies be now ready to invade, and all in an uproar, **Si fractus illabatur orbis, impavidum ferient ruinæ*, though heaven should fall on his head, he would not be dismayed. But as a good Christian prince once made answer to a menacing Turk, facile scelerata hominum arma contemnit, qui dei præsidio tutus est: or as **Phalaris* writ to Alexander in a wrong cause, he nor any other enemy could terrify him, for that he trusted in God. Si Deus nobiscum, quis contra nos?<sup>4</sup> In all calamities, persecutions whatsoever, as David did, 2 Sam. 22. 2. he will sing with him, The Lord is my rock, my fortress, my strength, my refuge, the tower and horn of my salvation, &c. In all troubles and adversities, Psal. 46. 1. God is my hope and help, still ready to be found, I will not therefore fear, &c. 'tis a fear expelling fear; he hath peace of conscience, and is full of hope, which is (saith **Austin*) vita vita mor-

talis, the life of this our mortal life, hope of immortality, the sole comfort of our misery: otherwise as Paul saith, we of all others were most wretched,<sup>1</sup> but this makes us happy, counterpoising our hearts in all misery; superstition torments, and is from the Devil, the author of lies; but this is from God himself, as Lucian that Antiochian Priest made his divine confession in Eusebius, Auctor nobis de Deo Deus est, God is the author of our Religion himself, his word is our rule, a lanthorn to us,<sup>2</sup> dictated by the holy Ghost, he plays upon our hearts as so many harp-strings, and we are his Temples, he dwelleth in us, and we in him.

The part affected of superstition, is the brain, heart, will, understanding, soul itself, and all the faculties of it, totum compositum, all is mad, and dotes. Now for the extent, as I say, the world itself is the subject of it, (to omit that grand sin of Atheism) all times have been misaffected, past, present, There is not one that doth good, no not one, from the Prophet to the Priest, &c.<sup>3</sup> A lamentable thing it is to consider, how many myriads of men this Idolatry and Superstition (for that comprehends all) hath insatuated in all ages, besotted by this blind zeal, which is Religion's Ape, Religion's Bastard, Religion's shadow, false glass. For where God hath a Temple, the Devil will have a chapel: where God hath sacrifices, the Devil will have his oblations; where God hath ceremonies, the Devil will have his traditions; where there is any Religion, the Devil will plant superstition; and 'tis a pitiful sight to behold and read, what tortures, miseries it hath procured, what slaughter of souls it hath made, how it raged amongst those old Persians, Syrians, Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, Tuscans, Gauls, Germans, Britons, &c. Britannia jam hodiè celebrat eam [magicen] attonitè, saith Pliny, tantis ceremoniis (speaking of Superstition) ut dedisse Persis videri possit. The Britons are so stupendly superstitious in their ceremonies, that they go beyond those Persians. He that shall but read in Pausanias alone, those Gods, Temples, Altars, Idols, Statues, so curiously made, with such infinite cost and charge, amongst those old Greeks, such multitudes of them, and frequent varieties, as Gerbélius truly observes, may stand amazed, and never enough wonder at it; and thank God withal, that by

The Patriarchs and their families, the Israelites, a handful in respect, Christ and his Apostles, and not all of them neither. Into what straits hath it been compinged, a little flock ! how hath superstition on the other side dilated herself, error, ignorance, barbarism, folly, madness, deceived, triumphed, and insulted over the most wise, discreet, and understanding men ! Philosophers, Dynasts, Monarchs, all were involved and over-shadowed in this mist, in more than Cimmerian darkness. <sup>2</sup>Adeo ignara superstilio mentes hominum depravat, et nonnunquam sapientum animos transversos agit. At this present, quota pars !<sup>3</sup> How small a part is truly Religious ! How little in respect ! Divide the World into six parts, and one, or not so much, is Christians ; Idolaters and Mahometans possess almost Asia, Africa, America, Magellanica. The Kings of China, great Cham, Siam, and Bornaye, Pegu, Decan, Narsinga, Japan, &c. are Gentiles, Idolaters, and many other petty Princes in Asia, Monomotapa, Congo, and I know not how many Negro Princes in Africa, all Terra Australis Incognita, most of America Pagans, differing all in their several superstitions ; and yet all Idolaters. The Mahometans extend themselves over the Great Turk's dominions in Europe, Africa, Asia, to the Xeriffes in Barbary, and his Territories in Fez, Sus,<sup>4</sup> Morocco, &c. The Tartar, the great Mogor, the Sophy of Persia, with most of their dominions and subjects, are at this day Mahometans. See how the Devil rageth ! The Jews, as a company of vagabonds, are scattered over all parts ; whose story, present estate, progress from time to time, is fully set down by <sup>7</sup>M. Thomas Jackson, Doctor of Divinity, in his Comment on the Creed. A fifth part of the world, and hardly that, now professeth CHRIST, but so enlarged and interlaced with several superstitions, that there is scarce a sound part to be found, or any agreement amongst them. Presbyter John in Africa, Lord of those Abyssines, or Ethiopians, is by his profession a Christian, but so different from us, with such new absurdities and ceremonies, such liberty, such a mixture of Idolatry and Paganism, <sup>1</sup>that they keep little more than a bare title of Christianity. They suffer Polygamy, Circumcision, stupend fastings, divorce as they will themselves, &c. and as the Papists call on the Virgin Mary, so do they on Thomas Didymus, before Christ. <sup>2</sup>The Greek or Eastern Church is rent from this of the West; and as they have four chief Patriarchs, so have they four subdivisions, besides those Nestorians, Jacobins, Syrians, Armenians, Georgians, &c. scattered over Asia Minor, Syria, Egypt, &c. Greece, Valachia, Circassia, Bulgary, Bosnia, Albania, Illyricum, Slavonia, Croatia, Thrace, Servia, Rascia, and a sprinkling amongst the Tartars. The Russians, Muscovites, and most of that Great Duke's <sup>3</sup> subjects, are part of the Greek Church, and still Christians: but as <sup>4</sup>one saith, temporis successu multas illi addiderunt superstitiones; in process of time they have added so many superstitions, they be rather semi-Christians than otherwise. That which remains is the Western Church with us in Europe, but so eclipsed with several schisms, heresies, and superstitions, that one knows not where to find it. The Papists have Italy, Spain, Savoy, part of Germany, France, Poland, and a sprinkling in the rest of Europe. In America they hold all that which Spaniards inhabit, Hispania Nova, Castella Aurea, Peru, &c. In the East Indies, the Philippina, some small holds about Goa, Malacca, Zelan, Ormus, &c. which the Portuguese got not long since, and those land-leaping Jesuits have assayed in China, Japan, as appears by their yearly letters; in Africa they have Melinda, Quiloe, Mombaze, &c. and some few towns, they drive out one superstition with another. Poland is a receptacle of all Religions, where Samosetans, Socinians, Photinians (now protected in Transylvania and Poland) Arians, Anabaptists, are to be found, as well as in some German Cities.

Scandia is Christian, but as <sup>1</sup>Damianus A-Goes the Portugal Knight complains, so mixt with Magick, Pagan Rites and Ceremonies, they may be as well counted Idolaters: what Tacitus formerly said of a like Nation, is verified in them, <sup>2</sup>a people subject to superstition, contrary to Religion. And some of them, as about Lapland, and the Pilapians, the Devil's possession, to this day, misera hæc gens (saith mine <sup>3</sup>Author) Satanæ hactenus possessio, — et quod maxime mirandum et dolendum, and which is to be admired and pitied, if any of them be baptized, which the Kings of Sweden much labour, they die within seven or nine days after; and for that cause they will hardly be brought to Christianity, but worship still the Devil, who daily appears to them. In their Idolatrous courses, gaudentibus diis patriis, quos religiose colunt, &c. Yet are they very superstitious, like our wild Irish. Though they of the better note, the Kings of Denmark and Sweden themselves, that govern them, be Lutherans; the remnant are Calvinists, Lutherans, in Germany equally mixt: and yet the Emperor himself, Dukes of Lorraine, Bavaria, and the Princes Electors, are most part professed Papists. And though some part of France and Ireland, Great Britain, half the Cantons in Switzerland, and the Low Countries be Calvinists, more defecate<sup>4</sup> than the rest, yet at odds amongst themselves, not free from superstition. And which <sup>5</sup>Brochard the Monk, in his description of the Holy Land, after he had censured the Greek Church, and shewed their errors, concluded at last, faxit Deus ne Latinis multæ irrepserint stultitiæ, I say, God grant there be no fopperies in our Church. As a dam of water stopt in one place breaks out into another, so doth superstition. I say nothing of Anabaptists, Socinians, Brownists, Barrowists, Familists, &c. There is superstition in our prayers, often in our hearing of Sermons, bitter contentions, invectives, persecutions, strange conceits, besides diversity of opinions, schisms, factions, &c. But as the Lord (Job cap. 42, v. 7.) said to Eliphaz the Temanite, and his two friends, his wrath was kindled against them, for they had not spoken of him things that were right, we may justly of these Schismatics, and Hereticks, how wise soever in their own conceits, non rectè loquuntur de Deo, they speak not, they think not, they write not well of God, and as they ought. And therefore, Quid, quæso, mi Dorpi, as Erasmus concludes to Dorpius, hisce Theologis faciamus, aut quid preceris, nisi forte fidelem medicum, qui cerebro medeatur? What shall we wish them, but sanam mentem,<sup>1</sup> and a good Physician? WE are taught in holy Scripture, that the Devil rangeth abroad like a roaring Lion, still seeking whom he may devour:<sup>2</sup> and as in several shapes, so by several engines and devices, he goeth about to seduce us; sometimes he transforms himself into an Angel of Light;<sup>3</sup> and is so cunning, that he is able, if it were possible, to deceive the very Elect.<sup>4</sup> He will be worshipped as God himself, and is so adored by the Heathen, and esteemed. And in imitation of that divine power, as Eusebius observes, 'to abuse or emulate God's glory, as Dandinus adds, he will have all homage, sacrifices, oblations, and whatsoever else belongs to the worship of God, to be done likewise unto him, similis erit altissimo,<sup>5</sup> and by this means infatuates the world, deludes, entraps, and destroys many a thousand souls. Sometimes by dreams, visions (as God to Moses by familiar conference) the Devil in several shapes talks with them: in the Indies it is common, and in China nothing so familiar as apparitions, inspirations, oracles, by terrifying them with false prodigies, counterfeit miracles, sending storms, tempests, diseases, plagues (as of old in Athens there was Apollo, Alexicacus, Apollo λοιμικός, pestifer et malorum depulsor) raising wars, seditions by Spectrums, troubling their Consciences, driving them to despair, terrors of mind, intolerable pains; by promises, rewards, benefits, and fair means, he raiseth such an opinion of his Deity and greatness, that they dare not do otherwise than adore him, do as he will have them, they dare not offend him. And to compel them more to stand in awe of him, <sup>1</sup> he sends and cures diseases, disquiets their spirits (as Cyprian saith) torments and terrifies their souls, to make them adore him: and all his study, all his endeavour is to divert them from true Religion to superstition: and because he is damned himself, and in an error, he would have all the world participate of his errors, and be damned with him. The primum mobile therefore, and first mover of all superstition, is the Devil, that great enemy of mankind, the principal agent, who in a thousand several shapes, after divers fashions, with several engines, illusions, and by several names, hath deceived the inhabitants of the earth, in several places and Countries, still rejoicing at their falls. All the world over before Christ's time he freely domineered, and held the souls of men in most slavish subjection, saith <sup>2</sup> Eusebius, in divers forms, ceremonies, and sacrifices, till Christ's coming, as if those Devils of the Air had shared the Earth amongst them, which the Platonists held for Gods, ('ludus deorum sumus) and were our governors and keepers. In several places, they had several rites, orders, names, of which read Wierus de præstigiis demonum, lib. 1. cap. 5, <sup>3</sup> Strozius Cicogna, and others; Adonided amongst the Syrians; Adrammelech amongst the Capernaites; Asinæ amongst the Emathites; Astarte with the Sidonians: Astaroth with the Palestines; Dagon with the Philistines; Tartary with the Hanæi; Milcom amongst the Ammonites: Bel amongst the Babylonians, Beelzebub and Baal with the Samaritans and Moabites; Apis, Isis, and Osiris, amongst the Egyptians: Apollo Pythius at Delphi, Colophon, Ancyra,

What strange Sacraments, like ours of Baptism and the Lord's Supper, what goodly Temples, Priests, Sacrifices, they had in America, when the Spaniards first landed there, let Acosta the Jesuit relate, lib. 5. cap. 1, 2, 3, 4, &c. and how the Devil imitated the Ark, and the children of Israel's coming out of Egypt: with many such. For as Lipsius well discourseth out of the doctrine of the Stoicks, maximè cupiunt adorationem hominum, now and of old, they still and most especially desire to be adored by men. See but what Vertomannus, l. 5. c. 2, Marco Polo, Lerijs, Benzo, P. Martyr, in his Ocean Decades, Acosta, and Mat. Riccius, Expedit. Christ. in Sinas, lib. 1. relate. <sup>1</sup>Eusebius wonders how that wise City of Athens and flourishing Kingdoms of Greece should be so besotted; and we in our times, how those witty China's, so perspicacious in all other things, should be so gulled, so tortured with superstition, so blind, as to worship stocks and stones! But it is no marvel, when we see all out as great effects amongst Christians themselves: how are those Anabaptists, Arians, and Papists above the rest, miserably infatuated! Mars, Jupiter, Apollo, and Æsculapius, have resigned their interest, names and offices to Saint George,

The manner how, as I say, is by rewards, promises, terrors, affrights, punishments: in a word, fair and foul means, Hope and Fear. So Plutarch in the life of Lucullus [§ 10.] relates, how Mithridates, King of Pontus, at the siege of Cyzicum, with all his Navy was overthrown by Proserpina, for neglecting of her holy-day. She appeared in a vision to Aristagoras in the night, Cras, inquit, tibicinem Libycum cum tibicine Pontico committam,<sup>4</sup> and the day following this Enigma was understood; for with a great South-wind which came from Libya, she quite overwhelmed Mithridates' army. His ordinary instruments or factors which he useth, as God himself did good Kings, Lawful Magistrates, patriarchs, prophets, to the establishing of his Church, <sup>3</sup>are Politicians, Statesmen, Priests, Hereticks, blind guides, Impostors, pseudo-prophets, to propagate his superstition. And first to begin with Politicians, it hath ever been a principal axiom with them, to maintain religion, or superstition, which they determine of, alter and vary upon all occasions, as to them seems best, they make Religion mere policy, a cloak, a human invention ; nil æquè valet ad regendos vulgi animos ac superstitio, as <sup>4</sup>Tacitus and Tully <sup>5</sup>hold. Austin, l. 4. de civitat. Dei c. 9, censures Scævola saying and acknowledging, expedire civitates religione falli, that it was a fit thing cities should be deceived by religion, according to the proverb, Si mundus vult decipi, decipiatur,<sup>6</sup> if the world will be gulled, let it be gulled, 'tis good howsoever to keep it in subjection. 'Tis that <sup>7</sup>Aristotle and <sup>8</sup>Plato inculcate in their Politicks, Religion neglected, brings plagues to the city, opens a gap to all naughtiness. 'Tis that which all our late Politicians ingeminate ; Cromerus, l. 2. pol. hist. Boterus, l. 3. de incrementis urbium, Clapmarius, l. 2. c. 9, de Arcanis rerump. Arnesius cap. 4. lib. 2. polit. Captain Machiavel<sup>9</sup> will have a prince by all means to counterfeit religion, to be superstitious in shew at least, to seem to be devout, frequent holy exercises, honour divines, love the Church, affect priests, as Numa, Lycurgus, and such law-makers were, and did, non ut his fidem habeant, sed ut subditos religionis metu facilius in officio contineant, to keep people in obedience. <sup>1</sup> Nam naturaliter (as Cardan writes) lex Christiana lex est pietatis, justitiæ, fidei, simplicitatis, &c. But this error of his, Innocentius Jentilettus a French Lawyer, Theorem. 9. comment. 1. de Relig. and Thomas Bozsius, in his book de ruinis gentium et Regnorum, have copiously confuted. Many Politicians, I dare not deny, maintain Religion as a true means, and sincerely speak of it without hypocrisy, are truly zealous and religious themselves. Justice and Religion are the two chief props and supporters of a well-governed commonwealth; but most of them are but Machiavellians, counterfeits only for political ends; for Solus Rex (which Campanella cap. 18. Atheismi Triumphati observes) as amongst our modern Turks, Reipub. Finis, as knowing <sup>2</sup> magnum ejus in animos imperium; and that as <sup>3</sup> Sabellicus delivers, A man without Religion, is like a horse without a bridle. No way better to curb than superstition, to terrify men's consciences, and to keep them in awe: they make new laws, statutes, invent new religions, ceremonies, as so many stalking-horses, to their own ends. <sup>4</sup> Hæc enim (religio) si falsa sit, dummodo vera credatur, animorum ferociam domat, libidines coerces, subditos principi obsequentes efficit. Therefore (saith <sup>5</sup> Polybius of Lycurgus) did he maintain ceremonies, not that he was superstitious himself, but that he perceived mortal men more apt to embrace Paradoxes than ought else, and durst attempt no evil things for fear of the gods. This was Zamolxis' stratagem amongst the Thracians, Numa's plot, when he said he had conference with the Nymph Egeria, and that of Sertorius with an Hart; <sup>6</sup> to get more credit to their Decrees, by deriving them from the gods; or else they did all by divine instinct, which Nicholas Damascen well observes of Lycurgus, Solon, and Minos, they had their laws dictated, monte sacro, by Jupiter himself. So Mahomet referred his new laws to the <sup>7</sup> Angel Gabriel, by whose direction he gave out they were made. Caligula in Dion <sup>8</sup> feigned himself to be familiar with Castor and Pollux, and many such, which kept those Romans under (who, as Machiavel proves, lib. 1. disput. cap. 11, & 12, were religione maximè moti, most superstitious : and did curb the people more by this means, than by force of arms, or severity of human laws. Sola plebecula eam agnoscebat (saith Vaninus, dial. 1, lib. 4, de admirandis naturæ arcanis) speaking of Religion, quæ facillè decipitur, magnates vero et Philosophi nequaquam, your Grandeës and Philosophers had no such conceit, sed ad imperii confirmationem et amplificationem, quam sine prætextu religionis tueri non poterant ; and many thousands in all ages have ever held as much, Philosophers especially, animadvertēbant hi semper hæc esse fabellas, attamen ob metum publicæ potestatis silere cogeantur they were still silent for fear of Laws, &c. To this end, that Scyrian Pherecydes,<sup>1</sup> Pythagoras his Master, broached in the East amongst the Heathens first the immortality of the Soul, as Trismegistus did in Egypt, with a many of feigned Gods. Those French and British Druids in the West first taught, saith <sup>2</sup>Cæsar, non interire animas, but after death went from one to another, that so they might encourage them to virtue. 'Twas for a politick end, and to this purpose the old <sup>3</sup>Poets feigned those Elysian fields, their Æacus, Minos, and Rhadamanthus, their infernal Judges, and those Stygian lakes, fiery Phlegethons, Pluto's Kingdom, and variety of torments after death. Those that had done well went to the Elysian fields, but evil doers to Cocytus, and to that burning lake of <sup>4</sup>Hell, with fire and brimstone for ever to be tormented. 'Tis this which <sup>5</sup>Plato labours for in his Phædo, [pp. 113, 114] & 3. de rep. [p. 387 B.] The Turks in their Alcoran, when they set down rewards and several punishments for every particular virtue and vice, <sup>6</sup>when they persuade men, that they that die in battle, shall go directly to Heaven, but wicked livers to eternal torment, and all of all sorts (much like our Papistical Purgatory) for a set time shall be tortured in their graves, as appears by that tract which John Baptist Alsaqui that Mauritanian Priest, now turned Christian, hath written in his confutation of the Alcoran. After a man's death two black Angels, Nunquir and Nequir (so they call them) come to him to his grave, and punish him for his precedent sins ; if he lived well, they torture him the less; if ill, per indefinites cruciatus ad diem judicii, they incessantly punish him to the day of judgment. Nemo viventium qui ad horum mentionem non totus horret et contremiscit, the thought of this crucifies them all their lives long, and makes them spend their days in fasting and prayer, ne mala hæc contingant, &c. A Tartar Prince, saith Marco Polo, lib. 1. cap. 28, [24 (ed. Yule)] called Senex de montibus, the better to establish his government amongst his subjects, and to keep them in awe, found a convenient place in a pleasant valley, environed with hills, in <sup>1</sup>which he made a delicious Park full of oderiferous flowers and fruits, and a Palace of all worldly contents, that could possibly be devised, Musick, Pictures, variety of meats, &c., and chose out a certain young man, whom with a <sup>2</sup>soporiferous potion he so benumbed, that he perceived nothing: and so fast asleep as he was, caused him to be conveyed into this fair Garden. Where after he had lived awhile in all such pleasures a sensual man could desire, <sup>3</sup>he cast him into a sleep again, and brought him forth, that when he awaked, he might tell others he had been in Paradise. The like he did for Hell, and by this means brought his people to subjection. Because Heaven and Hell are mentioned in the Scriptures, and to be believed necessary by Christians: so cunningly can the Devil and his Ministers, in imitation of true Religion, counterfeit and forge the like, to circumvent and delude his superstitious followers. Many such tricks and impostures are acted by Politicians, in China especially, but with what effect I will discourse in the Symptoms.

Next to Politicians, if I may distinguish them, are some of our Priests, (who make Religion Policy) if not far beyond them, for they domineer over Princes and Statesmen themselves. Carnificinam exercent, one saith, they tyrannize over men's consciences more than any other tormenters whatsoever, partly for their commodity and gain; religionum enim omnium abusus (as <sup>4</sup>Postellus holds) quæstus scilicet sacrificum in causa est: for sovereignty, credit, to maintain their state and reputation, out of Ambition and Avarice, which are their chief supporters. What have they not made the common people believe? Impossibilities in nature, incredible things; what devices, traditions, ceremonies, have they not invented in all ages to keep men in obedience, to enrich themselves? Quibus quæstui sunt capti superstitione animi, as Livy saith. Those Egyptian Priests of old got all the sovereignty into their hands, and knowing, as Curtius insinuates, nulla res efficacius multitudinem regit quam superstitio; melius vatibus quam ducibus parent, vana religione capti, etiam impotentes fœminæ; the common people will sooner obey Priests than Captains, and nothing so forcible as superstition, or better than blind zeal to rule a multitude; have so terrified and galled them, that it is incredible to relate. All nations almost have been besotted in this kind; amongst our Britons and old Gauls the Druids; Magi in Persia; Philosophers in Greece; Chaldeans amongst the Oriental; Brachmanni in India; Gymnosophists in Æthiopia; the Turdetani<sup>1</sup> in Spain; Augurs in Rome, have insulted; Apollo's Priests in Greece, Phœbades and Pythonissæ, by their oracles and phantasms; Amphiaræus and his companions; now Mahometan and Pagan Priests, what can they not effect? How do they not infatuate the world? Adeo ubique (as Scaliger writes of the Mahometan Priests) tum gentium tum locorum, gens ista sacrorum ministra, vulgi secat spes, ad ea quæ ipsi fingunt somnia, so cunningly can they gull the commons in all places and Countries. But above all others, that High Priest of Rome, the dam of that monstrous and superstitious brood, the bull-bellowing Pope, which now rageth in the West, that three-headed Cerberus, hath played his part. <sup>2</sup> Whose religion at this day is mere policy, a state wholly composed of superstition and wit, and needs nothing but wit and superstition to maintain it, that useth Colleges and religious houses to as good purpose as Forts and Castles, and doth more at this day by a company of scribbling Parasites, fiery-spirited friars, Zealous Anchorites, hypocritical Confessors, and those Prætorian soldiers, his Janissary Jesuits, that dissociable society, as <sup>3</sup> Langius terms it, postremus diaboli conatus et sæculi excrementum, that now stand in the fore-front of the battle, will have a monopoly of, and ingross all other learning but domineer in Divinity.

and fight alone almost (for the rest are but his dromedaries and asses) than ever he could have done by garrisons and armies. What power of Prince, or penal Law, be it never so strict, could enforce men to do that which for conscience' sake they will voluntarily undergo? As to fast from all flesh, abstain from marriage, rise to their prayers at midnight, whip themselves, with stupend fasting and penance, abandon the world, wilful poverty, perform canonical and blind obedience, to prostrate their goods, fortunes, bodies, lives, and offer up themselves at their Superior's feet, at his command? What so powerful an engine as superstition? which they right well perceiving, are of no religion at all themselves. Primum enim (as Calvin rightly suspects, the tenor and practice of their life proves) arcanae illius Theologiæ, quod apud eos regnat, caput est, nullum esse deum, they hold there is no God, as Leo 10. did, Hildebrand the Magician,<sup>2</sup> Alexander 6, Julius 2, mere Atheists, and which the common proverb amongst them approves, <sup>3</sup> The worst Christians of Italy are the Romans, of the Romans the Priests are wildest, the lewdest Priests are preferred to be Cardinals, and the baddest man among the Cardinals is chosen to be Pope, that is an Epicure, as most part the Popes are, Infidels, and Lucianists, for so they think and believe; and what is said of Christ to be fables and impostures, of Heaven and Hell, day of Judgement, Paradise, Immortality of the soul, are all, dreams, toys, and old wives' tales. Yet as so many <sup>5</sup>whetstones to make other tools cut, but cut not themselves, though they be of no religion at all, they will make others most devout and superstitious, by promises and threats compel, enforce from, and lead them by the nose like so many Bears in a line; when as their end is not to propagate the Church, advance God's Kingdom, seek his glory or common good, but to enrich themselves, to enlarge their territories, to domineer and compel them to stand in awe, to live in subjection to the See of Rome. And what <sup>2</sup>Austin cites from Varro to maintain his Roman religion, we may better apply to them: multa vera, quæ vulgus scire non est utile; pleraque falsa, quæ tamen aliter existimare populum expedit; some things are true, some false, which for their own ends they will not have the gullish commonalty take notice of. As well may witness their intolerable covetousness, strange forgeries, sopperies, fooleries, unrighteous subtilties, impostures, illusion, new doctrines, paradoxes, traditions, false miracles, which they have still forged to enthrall, circumvent, and subjugate them, to maintain their own estates. <sup>3</sup>One while by Bulls, Pardons, Indulgences, and their doctrine of good works; that they be meritorious, hope of Heaven, by that means they have so fleeced the commonalty, and spurred on this free superstitious horse, that he runs himself blind, and is an Ass to carry burdens. They have so amplified Peter's patrimony, that from a poor Bishop he is become Rex Regum, Dominus Dominantium, a Demi-god, as his Canonists make him (Felinus and the rest) above God himself. The Jesuits, a new sect begun in this age, have, as <sup>7</sup>Midendropius and <sup>8</sup>Pelargus reckon up, three or four hundred Colleges in Europe, and more revenues than many Princes. In France, as Arnoldus proves, in thirty years they have got bis centum librarum millia annua, £200,000 [annually]. I say nothing of the rest of their orders. We have had in Eng- land, as Armachanus demonstrates, above thirty thousand Friars at once, and, as <sup>1</sup> Speed collects out of Leland and others, almost 600 religious houses, and near two hundred thousand pound in revenues of the old rent belonging to them, besides Images of Gold, Silver, Plate, furniture, goods and ornaments, as <sup>2</sup> Weever calculates, and esteems them at the dissolution of the Abbies, worth a million of gold. How many Towns in every Kingdom hath superstition enriched! What a deal of money by musty reliques, Images, Idolatry, have their Mass-Priests engrossed, and what sums have they scraped by their other tricks! Loretto in Italy, Walsingham in England, in those days, ubi omnia auro nitent, saith Erasmus,<sup>3</sup> S. Thomas' Shrine, &c. may witness. Delphi so renowned of old in Greece for Apollo's oracle, Delos commune conciliabulum et emporium solâ religione munitum; Dodona, whose fame and wealth were sustained by religion, were not so rich, so famous. If they can get but a relique of some Saint, the Virgin Mary's picture, Idols, or the like, that City is for ever made, it needs no other maintenance. Now if any of these their impostures, or juggling tricks be controverted, or called in question; if a magnanimous or zealous Luther, an heroical Luther, as <sup>4</sup> Dithmarus calls him, dare touch the Monk's bellies, all is in a combustion, all is in an uproar: Demetrius and his associates are ready to pull him in pieces, to keep up their trades, Great is Diana of the Ephesians: with a mighty shout of two hours long they will roar and not be pacified.

Now for their authority, what by auricular confession, satisfaction, penance, Peter's keys, thunderings, excommunications, &c. roaring bulls, this High Priest of Rome, shaking his Gorgon's head, hath so terrified the soul of many a silly man, insulted over Majesty itself, and swaggered generally over all Europe for many ages, and still doth to some, holding them as yet in slavish subjection, as never tyrannizing Spaniards did by their poor Negroes, or Turks by their galley-slaves. <sup>5</sup> The Bishop of Rome (saith Stapleton, a parasite of his, *de mag. done that without arms, which those Roman Emperors could never achieve with forty legions of soldiers, deposed Kings, and crowned them again with his foot, made friends, and corrected at his pleasure, &c. <sup>1</sup> 'Tis a wonder, saith Machiavel, Florentinae hist. lib. 1. what slavery King Henry the Second endured for the death of Th. Becket, what things he was enjoined by the Pope, and how he submitted himself to do that which in our times a private man would not endure, and all through superstition. <sup>2</sup> Henry the Fourth, deposed of his Empire, stood bare-footed with his wife at the gates of Canossa. <sup>3</sup> Frederick the Emperor was trodden on by Alexander the Third. Another held Adrian's stirrup. King John kissed the knees of Pandulph the Pope's Legate, &c. What made so many thousand Christians travel from France, Britain, &c. into the Holy land, spend such huge sums of money, go a pilgrimage so familiarly <sup>4</sup> to Jerusalem, to creep and crouch, but slavish superstition? What makes them so freely venture their lives, to leave their native Countries, to go seek martyrdom in the Indies, but superstition? to be assassinated, to meet death, murder Kings, but a false persuasion of merit, of canonical or blind obedience which they instill into them, and animate them by strange illusions, hope of being Martyrs and Saints? Such pretty feats can the Devil work by Priests, and so well for their own advantage can they play their parts. And if it were not yet enough by Priests and Politicians to delude mankind, and crucify the souls of men, he hath more actors in his Tragedy, more Irons in the fire, another Scene of Hereticks, factious, ambitious wits. insolent spirits, Schismatics, Impostors, false Prophets, blind guides, that out of pride, singularity, vain glory, blind zeal, cause much more madness yet, set all in an uproar by their new doctrines, paradoxes, figments, crotchets, make new divisions, sub-divisions, new sects, oppose one superstition to another, one Kingdom to another, commit Prince and subjects, brother against brother, father against son, to the ruin and destruction of a Common-wealth, to the disturbance of peace, and to make a general confusion of all estates. How did those Arians rage of old! How many did they circumvent! Those Pelagians, Manichees, &c. their names alone would make a just volume. How many silly souls have Impostors still deluded, drawn away, and quite alienated from Christ! Lucian's Alexander,<sup>1</sup> Simon Magus, whose statue was to be seen and adored in Rome, saith Justin Martyr, Simoni deo sancto, &c. after his decease,<sup>2</sup> Apollonius Tyanæus, Cynops, Eumo, who by counterfeiting some new ceremonies and juggling tricks of that Dea Syria, by spitting fire, and the like, got an army together of forty thousand men, and did much harm: with Eudo de Stellis, of whom Nubrigensis speaks, lib. 1. cap. 19, that in King Stephen's days imitated most of Christ's miracles, fed I know not how many people in the wilderness, and built castles in the air, &c. to the seducing of multitudes of poor souls. In Franconia, 1476, a base illiterate fellow took upon him to be a Prophet, and preach, John Beheim by name, a neatherd at Nicho'hansen, he seduced 30,000 persons, and was taken by the Commonalty to be a most holy man, come from Heaven. Tradesmen left their shops, women their distaves, servants ran from their Masters, children from their Parents, scholars left their Tutors, all to hear him, some for novelty, some for zeal. He was burnt at last by the Bishop of Wartzburg, and so he and his heresy vanished together. How many such Impostors, false Prophets, have lived in every King's Reign! What Chronicle will not afford such examples! that as so many ignes fatui, have led men out of the way, terrified some, deluded others, that are apt to be carried about with the blast of every wind,<sup>3</sup> a rude inconstant multitude, a silly company of poor souls, that follow all, and are cluttered together like so many pebbles in a tide! What prodigious follies, madness, vexations, persecutions, absurdities, impossibilities, these impostors, hereticks, &c. have thrust upon the world, what strange effects, shall be shewed in the Symptoms.

Now the means by which, or advantages the Devil and his infernal Ministers take, so to delude and disquiet the world with such idle ceremonies, false doctrines, superstitious fopperies, are from themselves, innate fear, ignorance, simplicity, Hope and Fear, those two battering Canons, and principal Engines, with their objects, reward and punishment, Purgatory, Limbus Patrum, &c.

For the common people are as a flock of sheep, a rude illiterate rout, void many times of common sense, a mere beast, bellua multorum capitum,<sup>2</sup> will go whithersoever they are led: as you lead a Ram over a gap by the horns, all the rest will follow, <sup>3</sup> non quâ eundum, sed quâ itur, they will do as they see others do, and as their Prince will have them, let him be of what Religion he will, they are for him. Now for those Idolaters, Maxentius and Licinius, then for Constantine a Christian. ‘Qui Christum negant malè pereant, acclamatum est decies, for two hours space; qui Christum non colunt, Augusti inimici sunt, acclamatum est ter decies; and by and by Idolaters again under that Apostate Julian; all Arians under Constantius, good Catholicks again under Jovinian. And little difference there is betwixt the discretion of men and children in this case, especially of old folks and women, as <sup>4</sup> Cardan discourseth, when as they are tossed with fear and superstition, and with other men's folly and dishonesty. So that I may say, their ignorance is a cause of their superstition, a symptom, and madness itself.

Supplicii causa est, suppliciumque sul.

our Idolaters, you shall still find that the parties first affected, are silly, rude, ignorant people, old folks, that are naturally prone to superstition, weak women, or some poor rude illiterate persons, that are apt to be wrought upon, and gulled in this kind, prone without either examination or due consideration (for they take up Religion a<sup>1</sup> trust, as at Mercers they do their wares) to believe any thing. And the best means they have to broach first or to maintain it when they have done, is to keep them still in ignorance: for Ignorance is the mother of devotion, as all the world knows, and these times can amply witness. This hath been the Devil's practice, and his infernal Ministers in all ages; not as our Saviour, by a few silly Fishermen, to confound the wisdom of the world, to save Publicans and Sinners, but to make advantage of their ignorance, to convert them and their associates, and that they may better effect what they intend, they begin, as I say, with poor,<sup>2</sup> stupid, illiterate persons. So Mahomet did when he published his Alcoran, which is a piece of work (saith <sup>3</sup>Bredembachius) full of nonsense, barbarism, confusion without rhyme, reason, or any good composition, first published to a company of rude rusticks, hog-rubbers, that had no discretion, judgment, art, or understanding, and is so still maintained. For it is a part of their policy to let no man comment, dare to dispute or call in question to this day any part of it, be it never so absurd, incredible, ridiculous, fabulous as it is, it must be believed implicite upon pain of death, no man must dare to contradict it, God and the Emperor, &c. What else do our Papists but, by keeping the people in ignorance, vent and broach all their new ceremonies and traditions, when they conceal the Scripture, read it in Latin, and to some few alone, feeding the slavish people in the mean time with tales out of Legends, and such like fabulous narrations? Whom do they begin with but collapsed Ladies, some few tradesmen, superstitious old folks, illiterate persons, weak women, discontent, rude, silly companions, or sooner circumvent? So do all our schismatics and hereticks, Marcus and Valentinian, hereticks in <sup>4</sup>Irenæus, seduced first I know not how many women, and made them believe they were Prophets.

<sup>1</sup> Friar Cornelius of Dort seduced a company of silly women. What are all our Anabaptists, Brownists, Barrowists, Familists, but a company of rude, illiterate, capricious base fellows? What are most of our Papists, but stupid, ignorant and blind Bayards? How should they otherwise be, when as they are brought up, and kept still in darkness? <sup>2</sup>If their Pastors (saith Lavater) had done their duties, and instructed their flocks as they ought, in the Principals of Christian Religion, or had not forbidden them the reading of Scriptures, they had not been as they are. But being so misled all their lives in superstition, and carried hood-winked like Hawks, how can they prove otherwise than blind Idiots, and superstitious Asses? What shall we expect else at their hands? Neither is it sufficient to keep them blind, and in Cimmerian darkness, but withal, as a School-master doth by his boys, to make them follow their books, sometimes by good hope, promises and encouragements, but most of all by fear, strict discipline, severity, threats and punishment, do they colloque and sooth up their silly Auditors, and so bring them into a fool's paradise. Rex eris, aiunt, si recte facies,<sup>3</sup> do well, thou shalt be crowned; but for the most part by threats, terrors and affrights, they tyrannize and terrify their distressed souls: knowing that fear alone is the sole and only means to keep men in obedience, according to that Hemistichium of Petronius, Primus in orbe deos fecit timor,<sup>4</sup> the fear of some divine and supreme powers, keeps men in obedience, makes the people do their duties: they play upon their consciences; <sup>5</sup> which was practised of old in Egypt by their Priests; when there was an Eclipse, they made the people believe God was angry, great miseries were to come; they take all opportunities of natural causes, to delude the people's senses, and with fearful tales out of purgatory, feigned apparitions, earth-quakes in Japan or China, tragical examples of Devils, possessions, obsessions, false miracles, counterfeit visions, &c. They do so insult over, and restrain them, never Hobby so dared a Lark,<sup>6</sup> that they will not<sup>7</sup> offend the least tradition, tread, or scarce look awry. Deus bone, (<sup>8</sup> Lavater exclaims) quot hoc commentum de purgatorio

To these advantages of Hope and Fear, ignorance and simplicity, he hath several engines, traps, devices, to batter and enthrall, omitting no opportunities, according to men's several inclinations, abilities, to circumvent and humour them, to maintain his superstitions; sometimes to stupify, besot them; sometimes again by oppositions, factions, to set all at odds, and in an uproar; sometimes he infects one man, and makes him a principal agent; sometimes whole Cities, Countries. If of meaner sort, by stupidity, canonical obedience, blind zeal, &c. If of better note, by pride, ambition, popularity, vain-glory. If of the Clergy and more eminent, of better parts than the rest, more learned, eloquent, he puffs them up with a vain conceit of their own worth, scientiâ inflati,<sup>1</sup> they begin to swell and scorn all the world in respect of themselves, and thereupon turn hereticks, schismatics, broach new doctrines, frame new crochets, and the like; or else out of too much learning become mad, or out of curiosity they will search into God's secrets, and eat of the forbidden fruit; or out of presumption of their holiness and good gifts, inspirations, become Prophets, Enthusiasts, and what not? or else if they be displeased, discontent, and have not (as they suppose) preferment to their worth, have some disgrace, repulse, neglected, or not esteemed, as they fondly value themselves, or out of emulation, they begin presently to rage and rave, cælum terræ miscent,<sup>2</sup> they become so impatient in an instant, that the whole Kingdom cannot contain them, they will set all in a combustion, all at variance, to be revenged of their adversaries.

<sup>3</sup>Donatus, when he saw Cæcilia preferred before him in the Bishoprick of Carthage, turned heretick, and so did Arius, because Alexander was advanced:<sup>4</sup> we have examples at home, and too many experiments of such persons. If they be laymen of better note, the same engines of pride, ambition, emulation and jealousy take place, they will be gods themselves: <sup>5</sup>Alexander after his victories in India, became so insolent, he would be adored for a god: and those Roman Emperors came to that height of madness they must have Temples built to them, sacrifices to their deities, Divus Augustus, D. Claudius, D. Adrianus: <sup>1</sup>Heliogabalus put out that Vestal fire at Rome, expelled the Virgins, and banished all other Religions all over the world, and would be the sole God himself. Our Turks, China Kings, great Chams, and Mogors, do little less, assuming divine and bombast titles to themselves; the meaner sort are too credulous, and led with blind zeal, blind obedience, to prosecute and maintain whatsoever their sottish leaders shall propose, what they in pride and singularity, revenge, vain glory, ambition, spleen, for gain, shall rashly maintain and broach, their disciples make a matter of conscience, of hell and damnation, if they do it not, and will rather forsake wives, children, house and home, lands, goods, fortunes, life itself, than omit or abjure the least tittle of it, and to advance the common cause, undergo any miseries, turn traitors, assassinate, pseudo-martyrs,<sup>2</sup> with full assurance and hope of reward in that other world, that they shall certainly merit by it, win heaven, be canonized for Saints.

Now when they are truly possessed with blind zeal, and misled with superstition, he hath many other baits to inveigle and infatuate them farther yet, to make them quite mortified and mad, and that under colour of perfection, to merit by penance, going woolward, whipping, alms, fasting, &c. An. 1320, there was a Sect of <sup>3</sup>whippers in Germany, that to the astonishment of the beholders, lashed, and cruelly tortured themselves. I could give many other instances of each particular. But these works so done are meritorious, ex opere operato, ex condigno, for themselves and others, to make them macerate and consume their bodies, specie virtutis et umbrâ,<sup>4</sup> those Evangelical counsels are propounded, as as our Pseudo-Catholicks call them, canonical obedience, wilful poverty, <sup>5</sup>vows of chastity, monkery, and a solitary life, which extend almost to all religions and superstitions, to Turks, Chinese, Gentiles, Abyssinians, Greeks, Latins, and all Countries. Amongst the rest, fasting, contemplation, solitariness, are as it were certain rams by which the devil doth batter and work upon the strongest constitutions. Nonnulli (saith Peter Forestus) ob longas inedia, studia et meditationes cælestes, de rebus sacris et religione semper agitant, [some] by fasting overmuch, and divine meditations, are overcome. Not that fasting is a thing of itself to be discommended, for it is an excellent means to keep the body in subjection, a preparative to devotion, the physick of the soul, by which chaste thoughts are engendered, true zeal, a divine spirit, whence wholesome counsels do proceed, concupiscence is restrained, vicious and predominant lusts and humours are expelled. The Fathers are very much in commendation of it, and, as Calvin notes, sometimes immoderate. <sup>1</sup>The mother of health, key of heaven, a spiritual wing to rear us, the chariot of the holy Ghost, banner of faith, &c. And 'tis true they say of it, if it be moderately and seasonably used, by such parties as Moses, Elias, Daniel, CHRIST, and as his <sup>2</sup>Apostles made use of it; but when by this means they will supererogate, and as <sup>3</sup>Erasmus well taxeth, cælum non sufficere putant suis meritis, Heaven is too small a reward for it; they make choice of times and meats, buy and sell their merits, attribute more to them than to the ten commandments, and count it a greater sin to eat meat in Lent than to kill a man, and as one saith, plus respiciunt assum piscem quam Christum crucifixum, plus salmonem quam Salomonem, quibus in ore Christus, Epicurus in corde; when some counterfeit, and some attribute more to such works of theirs than to Christ's death and passion; the devil sets in a foot, strangely deludes them, and by that means makes them to overthrow the temperature of their bodies, and hazard their souls. Never any strange illusions of devils amongst hermits, Anachorites, never any visions, phantasms, apparitions, Enthusiasms, Prophets, any revelations, but immoderate fasting, bad diet, sickness, melancholy, solitariness, or some such things were the precedent causes, the forerunners or concomitants of them. The best opportunity and sole occasion the Devil takes to delude them. Marcilius Cognatus, lib. 1. cont. cap. 7, hath many stories to this purpose, of such as after long fasting have been seduced by devils: and <sup>4</sup>'tis a miraculous thing to relate (as Cardan writes) what strange accidents proceed from fasting; dreams, superstition, contempt of torments, desire of death, prophesies, paradoxes, madness; fasting naturally prepares men to these things.

in this kind, as such as live solitary lives, they hear and act strange things in their dotage. <sup>1</sup> Polydore Virgil, lib. 2. de prodigiis, holds that those prophesies, and Monks' revelations, Nuns' dreams, which they suppose come from God, do proceed wholly ab instinctu dæmonum, by the Devil's means: and so those Enthusiasts, Anabaptists, pseudo-Prophets from the same cause. <sup>2</sup> Fracastorius lib. 2. de intellect. will have all your Pythonisses, Sibyls, and pseudo-prophets to be mere melancholy; so doth Wierus prove, lib. 1. cap. 8. & l. 3. cap. 7, and Arculanus in 9. Rhasis, that melancholy is a sole cause, and the Devil together, with fasting and solitariness, of such Sibylline prophesies, if there were ever such, which with <sup>3</sup> Casaubon and others I justly except at; for it is not likely that the Spirit of God should ever reveal such manifest revelations and predictions of Christ to those Pythonissæ, Apollo's witches, priests, the Devil's ministers, (they were no better) and conceal them from his own prophets; for these Sibyls set down all particular circumstances of Christ's coming, and many other future accidents, far more perspicuous and plain than ever any prophet did. But howsoever there be no Phæbades or Sibyls, I am assured there be other Enthusiasts, prophets, dii Fatidici, Magi, (of which read Jo. So did the Devil of old with Apollo's priests. Amphiaraus, and his fellows, those Egyptians, still enjoin long fasting before he would give any Oracles, triduum à cibo et vino abstinerent,<sup>6</sup> <sup>7</sup> before they gave any answers, as Volateram, lib. 13. cap. 4. records, and Strabo Geog. lib. 14. describes Charon's den,<sup>8</sup> in the way betwixt Tralles and Nysa, whither the Priests led sick and fanatick men : but nothing performed without long fasting, no good to be done. melancholy dark chamber, where he shall see no light for many days together, no company, little meat, ghastly pictures of Devils all about him, and leave him to lie as he will himself, on the bare floor in this chamber of meditation, as they call it, on his back, side, belly, till by his strange usage they make him quite mad and beside himself. And then after some ten days, as they find him animated and resolved, they make use of him. The Devil hath many such factors, many such engines, which what effect they produce, you shall hear in these following Symptoms.

SUBJECT. 3.—Symptoms general, love to their own sect, hate of all other Religions, obstinacy, peevishness, ready to undergo any danger or cross for it; Martyrs, blind zeal, blind obedience, fastings, vows, belief of incredibilities, impossibilities: Particular of Gentiles, Mahometans, Jews, Christians; and in them, Hereticks old and new, Schismatics, Schoolmen, Prophets, Enthusiasts, &c.

Fleat Heraclitus, an rideat Democritus? in attempting to speak of these Symptoms, shall I laugh with Democritus, or weep with Heraclitus? they are so ridiculous and absurd on the one side, so lamentable and tragical on the other; a mixt Scene offers itself, so full of errors, and a promiscuous variety of objects, that I know not in what strain to represent it. When I think of that Turkish Paradise, those Jewish fables, and pontifical rites, those pagan superstitions, their sacrifices, and ceremonies, as to make images of all matter, and adore them when they have done, to see them kiss the pyx, creep to the cross, &c. I cannot choose but laugh with Democritus: but when I see them whip and torture themselves, grind their souls for toys and trifles, desperate, and now ready to die, I cannot choose but weep with Heraclitus. When I see a Priest say mass, with all those apish gestures, murmurings, &c. read the customs of the Jews' Synagogue, or Mahometan Mosque, I must needs <sup>1</sup> laugh at their folly, risum teneatis amici? <sup>2</sup> but when I see them make matters of conscience of such toys and trifles, to adore the Devil, to endanger their souls, to offer their children to their Idols, &c. I must needs condole their misery. When I see two superstitious Orders contend pro aris et focus,<sup>1</sup> with such have and hold de lana caprina,<sup>2</sup> some write such great Volumes to no purpose, take so much pains to so small effect, their Satires, invectives, apologies, dull and gross fictions; when I see grave learned men rail and scold like butter-women, methinks 'tis pretty sport, and fit <sup>3</sup>for Calphurnius and Democritus to laugh at. But when I see so much blood spilt, so many murders and massacres, so many cruel battles fought, &c. 'tis a fitter subject for Heracitus to lament. 'As Merlin when he sat by the lake side with Vortigern, and had seen the white and red dragon fight, before he began to interpret or to speak, in fletum prorupit, fell a weeping, and then proceeded to declare to the King what it meant; I should first pity and bewail this misery of human kind with some passionate preface, wishing mine eyes a fountain of tears, as Jeremy did,<sup>4</sup> and then to my task. For it is that great torture, that infernal plague of mortal man, omnium pestium pestilentissima superstitio, and able of itself alone to stand in opposition to all other plagues, miseries, and calamities whatsoever; far more cruel, more pestiferous, more grievous, more general, more violent, of a greater extent. Other fears and sorrows, grievances of body and mind, are troublesome for the time; but this is for ever, eternal damnation, hell itself, a plague, a fire: an inundation hurts one Province alone, and the loss may be recovered; but this superstition involves all the world almost, and can never be remedied. Sickness and sorrows come and go, but a superstitious soul hath no rest; <sup>5</sup>superstitione imbutus animus nunquam quietus esse potest, no peace, no quietness. True Religion and Superstition are quite opposite, longè diversa carnificina et pietas, as Lactantius describes, the one erears, the other dejects; illorum pietas, mera impietas; the one is an easy yoke, the other an intolerable burden, an absolute tyranny; the one a sure anchor, an haven; the other a tempestuous Ocean; the one makes, the other mars; the one is wisdom, the other is folly, madness, indiscretion; the one unfeigned, the other a counterfeit; the one a diligent observer, the other an ape; one leads to heaven, the other to hell. But these differences will more evidently appear by their particular symptoms. What Religion is, and of what parts it doth consist, every Catechism

will tell you, what Symptoms it hath, and what effects it produceth : but for their superstitions, no tongue can tell them, no pen express, they are so many, so diverse, so uncertain, so unconstant, and so different from themselves. Tot mundi superstitiones, quot cælo stellæ, one saith, there be as many superstitions in the world, as there be stars in heaven, or devils themselves that are the first founders of them : with such ridiculous, absurd symptoms and signs, so many several rites, ceremonies, torments and vexations accompanying, as may well express and beseeem the devil to be the author and maintainer of them. I will only point at some of them, ex ungue leonem,<sup>1</sup> guess at the rest, and those of the chief kinds of superstition, which beside us Christians now domineer and crucify the world, Gentiles, Mahometans, Jews, &c.

Of these symptoms some be general, some particular to each private sect : general to all, are, an extraordinary love and affection they bear and shew to such as are of their own sect, and more than Vatinian<sup>2</sup> hate to such as are opposite in Religion, as they call it, or disagree from them in their superstitious rites, blind zeal, (which is as much a symptom as a cause,) vain fears, blind obedience, needless works, incredibilities, impossibilities, monstrous rites and ceremonies, wilfulness, blindness, obstinacy, &c. For the first, which is love and hate, as Montanus saith, nulla firmior amicitia quàm quæ contrahitur hinc ; nulla discordia major, quàm quæ à religione fit ; no greater concord, no greater discord then than which proceeds from Religion. It is incredible to relate, did not our daily experience evince it, what factions, quam teterrimæ factiones, (as Rich. Dinoth writes) have been of late for matters of Religion in France, and what hurly burlies all over Europe for these many years. Nihil est quod tam impotenter rapiat homines, quam suscepta de salute opinio ; siquidem pro ea omnes gentes corpora et animas devovere solent, et arctissimo necessitudinis vinculo se invicem colligare. We are all brethren in Christ, servants of one Lord, members of one body, and therefore are or should be at least dearly beloved, inseparably allied in the greatest bond of love and familiarity, united partakers not only of the same cross, but coadjutors, comforters, helpers, at all times, upon all occasions : as they did in the primitive Church, Acts iv. [44, 45,] they sold their patrimonies, and laid them at the Apostles' feet, and many such memorable examples of mutual love we have had under the ten general persecutions, many since. Examples on the other side of discord none like, as our Saviour saith, he came therefore into the world to set father against son, &c.<sup>1</sup> In imitation of whom the Devil belike (nam superstitio irrepsit veræ religionis imitatrix, superstition is still Religion's ape, as in all other things, so in this) doth so combine and glue together his superstitious followers in love and affection, that they will live and die together : and what an innate hatred hath he still inspired to any other superstition opposite ! How those old Romans were affected, those ten persecutions may be a witness, and that cruel executioner in Eusebius, aut lita aut morere, sacrifice or die.<sup>2</sup> No greater hate, more continue, bitter faction, wars, persecution in all ages, than for matters of Religion, no such feral opposition, father against son, mother against daughter, husband against wife, City against City, Kingdom against Kingdom : as of old at Tentyra and Ombos :

Inde furor vulgo, quod numina vicinorum
Odit uterque locus, quum solos credat habendos
Esse deos quos ipse colit. ———

Immortal hate it breeds, a wound past cure
And fury to the commons still to endure :
Because one City t' other's gods as vain
Deride, and his alone as good maintain.

The Turks at this day count no better of us than of dogs, so they commonly call us Giaours, infidels, miscreants, make that their main quarrel and cause of Christian persecution. If he will turn Turk, he shall be entertained as a brother, and had in good esteem, a Mussulman or a believer, which is a greater tie to them than any affinity or consanguinity. The Jews stick together like so many burrs, but as for the rest whom they call Gentiles, they do hate and abhor, they cannot endure their Messias should be a common Saviour to us all, and rather as <sup>3</sup> Luther writes, then they that now scoff at them, curse them, persecute and revile them, shall be coheirs and brethren with them, or have any part of fellowship with their Messias, they would crucify their Messias ten times over, and God himself, his Angels, and all his creatures, if it were possible, though they endure a thousand hells for it. Such is their malice towards us. Now for Papists, what in a common cause for the advancement of their Religion they will endure, our Traitors and Pseudo-Catholicks will declare unto us; and how bitter on the other side to their adversaries, how violently bent, let those Marian times record, as those miserable slaughters at Merindol<sup>1</sup> and Cabriers,<sup>2</sup> the Spanish Inquisition, the Duke of Alva's tyranny in the Low Countries, the French Massacres and Civil Wars.

invectives and contentions. They had rather shake hands with a Jew, Turk, or as the Spaniards do, suffer Moors to live amongst them, and Jews than Protestants; my name (saith <sup>5</sup>Luther) is more odious to them than any thief or murderer. So it is with all hereticks and schismatics whatsoever: and none so passionate, violent in their tenents, opinions, obstinate, wilful, refractory, peevish, factious, singular and stiff in defence of them; they do not only persecute and hate, but pity all other Religions, account them damned, blind, as if they alone were the true Church, they are the true heirs, have the fee simple of heaven by a peculiar donation, 'tis entailed on them and their posterities, their doctrine sound, per funem aureum de cælo delapsa doctrina, they alone are to be saved. The Jews at this day are so incomprehensibly proud and churlish, saith <sup>6</sup>Luther, that solī salvari, solī domini terrarum salutari volunt.<sup>7</sup> And, as <sup>8</sup>Buxtorfius adds, so ignorant and self-willed withal, that amongst their most understanding Rabbins

you shall find nought but gross dotage, horrible hardness of heart, and stupend obstinacy, in all their actions, opinions, conversations: and yet so zealous withal, that no man living can be more, and vindicate themselves for the elect people of GOD. 'Tis so with all other superstitious sects, Mahometans, Gentiles in China, and Tartary; our ignorant Papists, Anabaptists, Separatists, and peculiar Churches of Amsterdam, they alone, and none but they can be saved. <sup>1</sup>Zealous (as Paul saith, Rom. 10. 2,) without knowledge, they will endure any misery, any trouble, suffer and do that which the Sun-beams will not endure to see, Religionis acti Furiis,<sup>2</sup> all extremities, losses and dangers, take any pains, fast, pray, vow chastity, wilful poverty, forsake all and follow their Idols, die a thousand deaths, as some Jews did to Pilate's soldiers, in like case, exsertos præbentes jugulos, et manifestè præ se ferentes, (as Josephus<sup>3</sup> hath it) cariorem esse vitâ sibi legis patriæ observationem, rather than abjure, or deny the least particle of that Religion which their Fathers profess, and they themselves have been brought up in, be it never so absurd, ridiculous, they will embrace it, and without further enquiry or examination of the truth, though it be prodigiously false, they will believe it: they will take much more pains to go to hell, than we shall do to heaven. Single out the most ignorant of them, convince his understanding, shew him his errors, grossness, and absurdities of his sect, non persuadebis etiamsi persuaseris,<sup>4</sup> he will not be persuaded. As those Pagans told the Jesuits in Japan,<sup>5</sup> they would do as their fore-fathers have done; and with Rutholde the Frisian Prince, go to hell for company, if most of their friends went thither: they will not be moved, no persuasion, no torture can stir them. So that Papists cannot brag of their vows, poverty, obedience, orders, merits, martyrdoms, fastings, alms, good works, pilgrimages: much and more than all this, I shall shew you, is, and hath been done by these superstitious Gentiles, Pagans, Idolaters and Jews: their blind zeal and idolatrous superstition in all kinds is much at one; little or no difference, and it is hard to say which is the greatest, which is the grossest. For if a man shall duly consider those superstitious rites amongst the Ethnicks in Japan, the Bannians in Guzerat, [or Goojerat,] the Chinese

idolaters, <sup>1</sup>Americans of old, in Mexico especially, Mahometan priests, he shall find the same government almost, the same orders and ceremonies, or so like, that they may seem all apparently to be derived from some heathen spirit, and the Roman Hierarchy no better than the rest. In a word, this is common to all superstition, there is nothing so mad and absurd, so ridiculous, impossible, incredible, which they will not believe, observe, and diligently perform as much as in them lies; nothing so monstrous to conceive, or intolerable to put in practice, so cruel to suffer, which they will not willingly undertake. So powerful a thing is superstition! <sup>2</sup>O Egypt (as Trismegistus exclaims) thy religion is fables, and such as posterity will not believe. I know that in true Religion itself many mysteries are so apprehended alone by faith, as that of the Trinity, which Turks especially deride, Christ's Incarnation, resurrection of the body at the last day, quod ideo credendum (saith Tertullian) quod incredibile, <sup>3</sup>&c. many miracles not to be controverted or disputed of. Mirari non rimari sapientia vera est, saith <sup>4</sup>Gerhardus; e. in divinis (as a good Father informs us) quædam credenda, quædam admiranda, &c. some things are to be believed, embraced, followed with all submission and obedience, some again admired. Though Julian the Apostate scoff at Christians in this point, quod captivemus intellectum in obsequium fidei, saying, that the Christian Creed is like the Pythagorean ipse dixit,<sup>5</sup> we make our will and understanding too slavishly subject to our faith, without farther examination of the truth; yet, as Saint Gregory truly answers, our Creed is altioris præstantiæ, and much more divine; and, as Thomas will, piè consideranti semper suppetunt rationes, ostendentes credibilitatem in mysteriis supernaturalibus, we do absolutely believe it, and upon good reasons, for, as Gregory well informeth us,<sup>6</sup> fides non habet meritum, ubi humana ratio quærit experimentum; that faith hath no merit, is not worth the name of faith, that will not apprehend without a certain demonstration: we must and will believe God's word; and if we be mistaken or err in our general belief, as <sup>7</sup>Richardus de sancto Victore vows he will say to Christ himself at the day of judgment; Lord, if we be deceived, thou alone hast deceived us: thus we plead. But for the rest I will not justify that pontifical transubstantiation, that which <sup>1</sup> Mahometans and Jews justly except at, as Campanella confesseth, Atheismi triumphat. cap. 12. fol. 125., difficillimum dogma esse, nec aliud subjectum magis hæreticorum blasphemiiis, et stultis irrisionibus politicorum reperiri. They hold it impossible, Deum in pane manducari; and besides they scoff at it, vide gentem comedentem Deum suum, inquit quidem Maurus. <sup>2</sup> Hunc Deum muscæ et vermes irrident, quum ipsum polluant et devorant, subditus est igni, aquæ, et latrones furantur, pyxidem auream humi prosternunt, et si tamen non defendit hic Deus. Quâ fieri potest, ut sit integer in singulis hostiæ particulis, idem corpus numero, tam multis locis, cælo, terrâ? &c. But he that shall read the <sup>3</sup> Turk's Alcoran, the Jews' Talmud, and Papists' Golden Legend, in the mean time will swear that such gross fictions, fables, vain traditions, prodigious paradoxes and ceremonies, could never proceed from any other spirit, than that of the devil himself, which is the Author of confusion and lies; and wonder withal how such wise men as have been of the Jews, such learned understanding men as Averroes, Avicenna, or those Heathen Philosophers, could ever be persuaded to believe, or subscribe to the least part of them: fraudem non detegere: but that as <sup>4</sup> Vanninus answers, ob publicæ potestatis formidinem allatrare philosophi non audebant, they durst not speak for fear of the law. But I will descend to particulars: read their several symptoms and then guess.

Of such symptoms as properly belong to superstition, or that irreligious Religion, I may say as of the rest, some are ridiculous, some again feral to relate. Of those ridiculous, there can be no better testimony than the multitude of their gods, those absurd names, actions, offices they put upon them, their feasts, holy days, sacrifices, adorations, and the like. The Egyptians that pretended so great antiquity, 300 Kings before Amasis: and as Mela writes, 13,000 years from the beginning of their Chronicles, that bragg'd so much of their knowledge of old, for they invented Arithmetick, Astronomy, Geometry: of their wealth and power, that vaunted of 20,000 Cities: yet at the same time their Idolatry and superstition was most gross: they worshipped, as Diodorus Siculus<sup>5</sup> records, Sun and Moon under the name of Isis and Osiris, and after, such men as were beneficial to them, or any creature that

Scoffing Lucian in his Vera Historia, which, as he confesseth himself, was not persuasively written as a truth, but in Comical fashion to glance at the monstrous fictions, and gross absurdities of writers and nations, to deride without doubt this prodigious Egyptian Idolatry, feigns this story of himself; that when he had seen the Elysian fields, and was now coming away, Rhadamanthus gave him a Mallow root, and bade him pray to that when he was in any peril or extremity; which he did accordingly; for when he came to Hydrarnardia in the Island of treacherous women, he made his prayers to his root, and was instantly delivered.<sup>4</sup> The Syrians, Chaldeans, had as many proper Gods of their own invention; see the said Lucian de Dea Syriâ, Mornay, cap. 22. de veritat. relig. Dii et Semi-dii. For so they were Semi-dii, demi-gods, some medii inter Deos et homines, as Max. <sup>1</sup>Tyrius, the Platonist, [Dissertatio xv.] maintains and justifies in many words. When a good man dies, his body is buried, but his soul ex homine dæmon evadit, becomes forthwith a Demi-god, nothing disparaged with malignity of air, or variety of forms, rejoiceth, exults and sees that perfect beauty with his eyes. Now being deified, in commiseration he helps his poor friends here on earth, his kindred and allies, informs, succours, &c. punisheth those that are bad, and do amiss, as a good Genius to protect and govern mortal men appointed by the gods, so they will have it, ordaining some for provinces, some for private men, some for one office, some for another. Hector and Achilles assist Soldiers to this day, Æsculapius all sick men, the DioscURI Seafaring men, &c. and sometimes upon occasion they shew themselves. The DioscURI, Hercules and Æsculapius, he saw himself (or the devil in their likeness) non somnians sed vigilans ipse vidi. So far Tyrius. all, but as Minerva start out of Jupiter's head. Hesiodus reckons up at least 30,000 gods, Varro 300 Jupiters. As Jeremy told them, their gods were to the multitude of Cities.<sup>1</sup>

Id dixere deos, colles, freta, flumina, flammas.

Whatever heavens, sea, and land begat,
Hills, seas and rivers, God was this and that.

And which was most absurd, they made gods upon such ridiculous occasions; As children make babies (so saith <sup>2</sup>Mornay) their Poets make Gods, et quos adorant in templis, ludunt in theatris, as Lactantius scoffs. Saturn a man, gelded himself, did eat his own children, a cruel tyrant driven out of his kingdom by his son Jupiter, as good a God as himself, a wicked lascivious paltry King of Crete, of whose rapes, lusts, murders, villanies, a whole volume is too little to relate. Venus a notorious strumpet, as common as a barber's chair, Mars's, Adonis's, Anchises's whore, is a great she-goddes as well as the rest, as much renowned by their Poets; with many such: and these gods so fabulously and foolishly made, cærimoniis, Hymnis, et Canticis celebrant; their errors, luctus et gaudia, amores, iras, nuptias et liberorum procreationes, (<sup>3</sup>as Eusebius well taxeth) weddings, mirth and mournings, loves, angers, and quarrelling they did celebrate in Hymns, and sing of in their ordinary songs, as it were publishing their villanies. But see more of their originals. When Romulus was made away by the sedition of the senators, to pacify the people, <sup>4</sup>Julius Proculus gave out that Romulus was taken up by Jupiter into Heaven, and therefore to be ever after adored for a God amongst the Romans. Syrophanes of Egypt had one only son, whom he dearly loved, he erected his statue in his house, which his servants did adorn with crowns and garlands, to pacify their master's wrath when he was angry, so by little and little he was adored for a god. This did Semiramis for her husband Belus, and Adrian the Emperor by his minion Antinous.<sup>5</sup> Flora was a rich harlot in Rome, and for that she made the Common-wealth her heir, her birth-day was solemnized long after; and to make it a more plausible holiday, they made her Goddess of flowers, and sacrificed to her amongst the rest. <sup>1</sup>The matrons of Rome, as Dionysius Halicarnasseus relates, because at their entreaty Coriolanus desisted from his Wars, consecrated a Church Fortunæ muliebri; <sup>2</sup> and <sup>3</sup>Venus Barbata had a temple erected, for that somewhat was amiss about [her] hair, and so the rest. The Citizens of Alabanda, a small town in Asia Minor, to curry favour with the Romans (who then warred in Greece with Perseus of Macedon, and were formidable to these parts) consecrated a temple to the City of Rome, and made her a goddess, with annual games and sacrifices: so a town of houses was deified, with shameful flattery of the one side to give, and intolerable arrogance on the other to accept, upon so vile and absurd an occasion. Tully writes to Atticus, <sup>4</sup> that his daughter Tulliola might be made a goddess, and adored as Juno and Minerva, and as well she deserved it. Their Holydays and adorations were all out as ridiculous; those Lupercalia of Pan, Floralia of Flora, [those of] Bona dea, Anna Perenna, Saturnalia, &c. as how they were celebrated, with what lascivious and wanton gestures, bald ceremonies, <sup>5</sup> by what bawdy Priests, how they hang their noses over the smoke of sacrifices, saith <sup>6</sup>Lucian, and lick blood like flies that was spilled about the altars. Their carved Idols, gilt Images of wood, iron, ivory, silver, brass, stone, olim truncus eram, <sup>7</sup> &c. were most absurd, as being their own workmanship; for, as Seneca notes, <sup>8</sup> adorant ligneos deos, et fabros interim qui fecerunt, contemnunt, they adore work, contemn the workman; and as Tertullian follows it, si homines non essent diis propitii, had it not been for men, they had never been gods, but blocks still, and stupid statues, in which mice, swallows, birds made their nests, spiders their webs, and in their very mouths laid their excrements. Those Images I say were all out as gross, as the shapes in which they did represent them: Jupiter with a ram's head, Mercury a dog's, Pan like a goat, Hecate with three heads, one with a beard, another without; see more in Carterius and <sup>9</sup>Verdurius of their monstrous forms and ugly pictures: and which was absurder yet, they told them these Images came from heaven, as that of Minerva in her temple at Athens, quod à cælo cecidisse credebant accolæ, saith Pausanias [i. 26.] They formed some like Storks, Apes, Bulls, and yet seriously believed; and that which was impious, and abominable, they made their Gods notorious whoremasters, incestuous Sodomites, (as commonly they were all, as well as Jupiter, Mars, Apollo, Mercury, Neptune, &c.) thieves, slaves, drudges, (for Apollo and Neptune made tiles in Phrygia,) kept sheep, Hercules emptied stables, Vulcan a black-smith, unfit to dwell upon the earth for their villanies, much less in heaven, as Mornay well saith, and yet they gave them out to be such; so weak and brutish, some to whine, lament, and roar, as Isis for her son and Cynocephalus, as also all her weeping Priests; Mars in Homer to be wounded, vexed; Venus run away crying, and the like; than which what can be more ridiculous?<sup>2</sup> Nonne ridiculum lugere quod colas, vel colere quod lugeas? (which Minucius objects) Si dii, cur plangitis? si mortui, cur adoratis? that it is no marvel if Lucian, that adamantine persecutor of superstition, and Pliny could so scoff at them and their horrible Idolatry as they did: if Diagoras took Hercules' Image, and put it under his pot to seeth his pottage, which was, as he said, his 13th Labour.<sup>4</sup> But see more of their fopperies in *Cypr. 4. tract. de Idol. varietat. rest of the Roman Emperors usually did with such labour and cost : and not Emperors only and great ones pro communi bono, were at this charge, but private men for their ordinary occasions Pythagoras offered an hundred Oxen for the invention of a Geometrical Problem, and it was an ordinary thing to sacrifice in <sup>1</sup>Lucian's time, a heifer for their good health, four Oxen for wealth, an hundred for a Kingdom, nine Bulls for their safe return from Troy to Pylos, &c. Every God almost hath a peculiar sacrifice, the Sun horses, Vulcan fire, Diana a white hart, Venus a turtle, Ceres an hog, Proserpina a black lamb, Neptune a bull, (read more in <sup>2</sup>Stuckius at large) besides sheep, cocks, corals, frankincense, to their undoings, as if their gods were affected with blood or smoke. And surely (<sup>3</sup>saith he) if one should but repeat the fopperies of mortal men, in their sacrifices, feasts, worshipping their Gods, their rites and ceremonies, what they think of them, of their diet, houses, orders, &c. what prayers and vows they make; if one should but observe their absurdity and madness, he would burst out a laughing, and pity their folly. For what can be more absurd than their ordinary prayers, petitions, <sup>4</sup>requests, sacrifices, oracles, devotions? of which we have a taste in Maximus Tyrius, Plato's Alcibiades Secundus, Persius Sat. 2, Juvenal Sat. 10, there likewise exploded, Maclant opimas et pingues hostias deo quasi esurienti, profundunt vina tanquam sitiendi, lumina accendunt velut in tenebris agenti (Lactantius lib. 2, cap. 6;) as if their Gods were an hungry, athirst, in the dark, they light candles, offer meat and drink. And what so base as to reveal their counsels and give oracles è viscerum sterquiliniis, out of the bowels and excremental parts of beasts? sordidos Deos Varro truly calls them therefore, and well he might. I say nothing of their magnificent and sumptuous temples, those majestical structures. To the roof of Apollo Didymæus' Temple, ad Branchidas, as <sup>5</sup>Strabo writes, a thousand oaks did not suffice. Who can relate the glorious splendour, and stupend magnificence, the sumptuous building of Diana at Ephesus, Jupiter Ammon's Temple in Africa, the Pantheon at

There were in old Jerusalem, as some write, 408 Synagogues; but new Cairo reckons up (if <sup>3</sup>Radzivilius may be believed) 6800 meskites; Fessa 400, whereof 50 are most magnificent, like Saint Paul's in London. Helena built 300 fair Churches in the holy Land, but one Bassa hath built 400 meskites. The Mahometans have 1000 Monks in a Monastery; the like saith Acosta of Americans; Riccius of the Chinese, for men and women, fairly built; and more richly endowed some of them than Arras in Artois, Fulda in Germany, or Saint Edmundsbury in England with us: who can describe those curious and costly Statues, Idols, Images, so frequently mentioned in Pausanias? I conceal their donaries, pendants, other offerings, presents, to these their fictitious Gods daily consecrated. <sup>4</sup>Alexander the son of Amyntas, K. of Macedonia, sent two statues of pure gold to Apollo at Delphi. <sup>5</sup>Cræsus King of Lydia dedicated an hundred golden Tiles in the same place, with a golden Altar: no man came empty-handed to their Shrines. But these are base offerings in respect; they offered men themselves alive. The Leucadians, as Strabo writes,<sup>6</sup> sacrificed every year a man, averruncandæ deorum iræ causa, to pacify their Gods, de montis præcipitio dejecerunt, &c. and they did voluntarily undergo it. The Decii did so sacrifice Diis manibus,<sup>7</sup> Curtius did leap into the gulf.<sup>8</sup> Were they not all strangely deluded to go so far to their Oracles, to be so gulled by them, both in war and peace, as Polybius relates<sup>9</sup> (which their Augurs, Priests, Vestal Virgins can witness) to be so superstitious, that they would rather lose goods and lives, than omit any ceremonies, or offend their Heathen Gods? Nicias that generous and valiant Captain of the Greeks, overthrew the Athenian Navy, by reason of his too much superstition,<sup>10</sup> because the Augurs told him it was ominous to set sail from the Haven of Syracuse whilst the Moon was eclipsed, he tarried so long, till his enemies besieged him, he and all his Army was overthrown. The <sup>1</sup>Parthians of old were so sottish in this kind, they would rather lose a victory, nay, lose their own lives, than fight in the night, 'twas against their Religion. The Jews would make no resistance on the Sabbath, when Pompey besieged Jerusalem; <sup>2</sup> and some Jewish Christians in Africa, set upon by the Goths, suffered themselves upon the same occasion to be utterly vanquished. The superstition of the Dibrenses, <sup>3</sup> a bordering-Town in Epirus, besieged by the Turks, is miraculous almost to report. Because a dead dog was flung into the only Fountain which the City had, they would die of thirst all, rather than drink of that 'unclean water, and yield up the City upon any conditions. Though the Prator and chief Citizens began to drink first, using all good persuasions, their superstition was such, no saying would serve, they must all forthwith die, or yield up the City. Vix ausim ipse credere (saith <sup>4</sup>Barletius) tantam superstitionem, vel affirmare levissimam hanc causam tantæ rei vel magis ridiculam, quum non dubitem risum potius quam admirationem posteris excitaturam. The story was too ridiculous, he was ashamed to report it, because he thought no body would believe it. It is stupend to relate what strange effects this Idolatry and superstition hath brought forth in these latter years in the Indies, and those bordering parts: <sup>5</sup> in what feral shapes the <sup>6</sup>Devil is adored, ne quid mali intentent, as they say; for in the mountains betwixt Scanderoon and Aleppo at this day, there are dwelling a certain kind of people called Coords, coming of the race of the ancient Parthians, who worship the Devil, and allege this reason in so doing; God is a good man, and will do no harm, but the Devil is bad, and must be pleased, lest he hurt them. It is wonderful to tell how the devil deludes them, how he terrifies them, how they offer men, and women sacrifices unto him, an hundred at once, as they did infants in Crete to Saturn of old, the finest children, like Agamemnon's Iphigenia, &c. At <sup>7</sup>Mexico, when the Spaniards first overcame them, they daily sacrificed viva hominum corda è viventium corporibus extracta, the hearts of men yet living, 20,000 in a year (Acosta and burn them alive, best goods, servants, horses, when a grandee dies, <sup>3</sup> 12,000 at once amongst the Tartars, when a great Cham departs, or an Emperor in America: how they plague themselves, which abstain from all that hath life, like those old Pythagoreans, with immoderate fasting, <sup>4</sup> as the Bannians about Surat, they of China, that for superstition's sake never eat flesh nor fish all their lives, never marry, but live in deserts and by-places, and some pray to their Idols 24 hours together, without any intermission, biting off their tongues when they have done, for devotion's sake. Some again are brought to that madness by their superstitious Priests, (that tell them such vain stories of immortality, and the joys of heaven in that other life) <sup>5</sup> that many thousands voluntarily break their own necks, as Cleombrotus Ambraciotes <sup>6</sup> Auditors of old, precipitate themselves, that they may participate of that unspeakable happiness in the other world. One poisons, another strangleth himself; and the King of China had done as much, deluded with this vain hope, had he not been detained by his servant. But who can sufficiently tell of their several superstitions, vexations, follies, torments? I may conclude with <sup>7</sup> Possevinus, Religio facit asperos mites, homines à feris, superstitio ex hominibus feras, Religion makes wild beasts civil, superstition makes wise men beasts and fools; and the discreetest that are, if they give way to it, are no better than dizzards; nay more, if that of Plotinus be true, is unus religionis scopus, ut ei quem colimus similes fiamus, that's the drift of religion, to make us like him whom we worship : what shall be the end of Idolaters, but to degenerate into stocks and stones? of such as worship these Heathen gods, for dii gentium daemonia,<sup>1</sup> but to become devils themselves? 'Tis therefore exitiosus error, et maxime periculosus, a most perilous and dangerous error of all others, as <sup>2</sup>Plutarch holds, turbulenta passio hominem consternans, a pestilent, a troublesome passion, that utterly undoeth men. Unhappy superstition, <sup>3</sup>Pliny calls it, morte non finitur, death takes away life, but not superstition. Impious and ignorant are far more happy than they which are superstitious, no torture like to it, none so continue, so general, so destructive, so violent.

In this superstitious row, Jews for antiquity may go next to Gentiles; what of old they have done, what Idolatries they have committed in their groves and high places, what their Pharisees, Sadducees, Scribes, Essai,<sup>4</sup> and such sectaries have maintained, I will not so much as mention: for the present, I presume, no Nation under Heaven can be more sottish, ignorant, blind, superstitious, wilful, obstinate and peevish, tiring themselves with vain ceremonies to no purpose; he that shall but read their Rabbins' ridiculous Comments, their strange interpretation of Scriptures, their absurd ceremonies, fables, childish tales, which they steadfastly believe, will think they be scarce rational creatures; their foolish <sup>5</sup>customs, when they rise in the morning, and how they prepare themselves to prayer, to meat, with what superstitious washings, how to their Sabbath, to their other feasts, weddings, burials, &c. Last of all, the expectation of their Messias, and those figments, miracles, vain pomp that shall attend him, as how he shall terrify the Gentiles, and overcome them by new diseases; how Michael the Arch-Angel shall sound his trumpet, how he shall gather all the scattered Jews into the Holy Land, and there make them a great banquet, <sup>6</sup>wherein shall be all the birds, beasts, fishes, that ever God made; a cup of wine that grew in Paradise, and that hath been kept in Adam's cellar ever since. At the first course shall

Mahometans are a compound of Gentiles, Jews, and Christians, and so absurd in their ceremonies, as if they had taken that which is most sottish out of every one of them, full of idle fables in their superstitious law, their Alcoran itself a gallimaufry <sup>4</sup> of lies, tales, ceremonies, traditions, precepts, stole from other sects, and confusedly heaped up to delude a company of rude and barbarous clowns. As how birds, beasts, stones, saluted Mahomet when he came from Mecca, the Moon came down from Heaven to visit him, <sup>5</sup>how God sent for him, spake to him, &c. with a company of stupend figments of the Angels, Sun, Moon, and Stars, &c. Of the day of judgment, and three sounds to prepare to it, which must last 50,000 years, of Paradise, which wholly consists in coeundi et comedendi voluptate, and pecorinis hominibus scriptum, bestialis beatitudo, is so ridiculous, that Virgil, Dante, Lucian, nor any Poet can be more fabulous. Their Rites and Ceremonies are most vain and superstitious, Wine and Swine's-flesh are utterly forbidden by their Law,<sup>1</sup> they must pray five times a day, and still towards the South; wash before and after all their bodies over, with many such. For fasting, vows, religious orders, peregrinations, they go far beyond any Papists,<sup>2</sup> they fast a month together many times, and must not eat a bit till Sun be set. Their Kalenders, Dervises, and Torlachers,<sup>3</sup> &c. are more<sup>4</sup> abstemious some of them, than Carthusians, Franciscans, Anachorites, forsake all, live solitary, fare hard, go naked, &c. 'Their Pilgrimages are as far as to the River Ganges (which the Gentiles of those Tracts likewise do) to wash themselves, for that River, as they hold, hath a sovereign virtue to purge them of all sins, and no man can be saved that hath not been washed in it. For which reason they come far and near from the Indies; maximus gentium omnium confluxus est, and infinite numbers yearly resort to it. Others go as far as Mecca to Mahomet's Tomb, which journey is both miraculous and meritorious. The ceremonies of flinging stones to stone the Devil, of eating a Camel at Cairo by the way; their fastings, their running till they sweat, their long prayers, Mahomet's Temple, Tomb, and building of it, would ask a whole volume to dilate; and for their pains taken in this holy Pilgrimage, all their sins are forgiven, and they reputed for so many Saints. And divers of them with hot bricks, when they return, will put out their eyes,<sup>7</sup> that they never after see any profane thing, bite out their tongues, &c. They look for their Prophet Mahomet, as Jews do for their Messias. 1. from the tenth to the four and twentieth chapter; Bredenbachius, cap. 4, 5, 6; Leo Afer, lib. 1. Busbequius, Sabellicus, Purchas, lib. 3. cap. 3, et 4, 5; Theodorus Bibliander, &c. Many foolish Ceremonies you shall find in them; and which is most to be lamented, the people are generally so curious in observing of them, that if the least Circumstance be omitted, they think they shall be damned, 'tis an irremissible offence, and can hardly be forgiven. I kept in my house amongst my followers (saith Busbequius, sometime the Turk's Orator in Constantinople) a Turkey boy, that by chance did eat shell-fish, a meat forbidden by their Law, but the next day when he knew what he had done, he was not only sick to cast and vomit, but very much troubled in mind, would weep and<sup>1</sup> grieve many days after, torment himself for his foul offence. Another Turk, being to drink a cup of wine in his Cellar, first made a huge noise, and filthy faces,<sup>2</sup> to warn his soul, as he said, that it should not be guilty of that foul fact which he was to commit. With such toys as these are men kept in awe, and so cowed, that they dare not resist, or offend the least circumstance of their Law, for conscience sake, misled by superstition, which no human edict otherwise, no force of arms, could have enforced.

In the last place are Pseudo-Christians, in describing of whose superstitious symptoms, as a mixture of the rest, I may say that which S. Benedict once saw in a vision, one Devil in the market-place, but ten in a Monastery, because there was more work; in populous Cities, they would swear and for-swear, lie, falsify, deceive fast enough of themselves, one Devil could circumvent a thousand; but in their religious houses, a thousand Devils could scarce tempt one silly Monk. All the principal Devils, I think, busy themselves in subverting Christians; Jews, Gentiles, and Mahometans are extra callem,<sup>3</sup> out of the fold, and need no such attendance, they make no resistance, eos enim pulsare negligit, quos quieto jure possidere se sentit, they are his own already; but Christians have that shield of Faith, sword of the Spirit to resist,<sup>4</sup> and must have a great deal of battery before they can be overcome. That the Devil is most busy amongst us that are of the true Church, appears by those several Oppositions, Heresies, Schisms, which in all ages he hath raised to subvert it, and in that of Rome especially, wherein

Antichrist himself now sits and plays his prize. This mystery of iniquity began to work even in the Apostles' time, many Antichrists and Hereticks were abroad, many sprung up since, many now present, and will be to the world's end, to dementate men's minds, to seduce and captivate their souls. Their symptoms I know not how better to express, than in that twofold division, of such as lead, and are led. Such as lead are Hereticks, Schismatics, false Prophets, Impostors, and their Ministers: they have some common symptoms, some peculiar. Common, as madness, folly, pride, insolency, arrogancy, singularity, peevishness, obstinacy, impudence, scorn, and contempt of all other sects:

Nullius addicti jurare in verba magistri; <sup>1</sup>

They will approve of nought but what they first invent themselves, no interpretation good, but what their infallible spirit dictates; none shall be in secundis, no not in tertiis, they are only wise, only learned in the truth, all damned but they and their followers, cædem scripturarum faciunt ad materiam suam, saith Tertullian,<sup>2</sup> they make a slaughter of Scriptures, and turn it, as a nose of wax, to their own ends. So irrefragable, in the mean time, that what they have once said, they must and will maintain, in whole Tomes, duplications, triplications, never yield to death, so self-conceited, say what you can. As <sup>3</sup>Bernard (erroneously some say) speaks of P. Aliardus, omnes patres sic, atque ego sic. Though all the Fathers, Councils, the whole world contradict it, they care not, they are all one: and as <sup>4</sup>Gregory well notes of such as are vertiginous, they think all turns round and moves, all err; when as the error is wholly in their own brains. Magallianus the Jesuit in his Comment on the first of Timothy, cap. 6. vers. 20. and Alphonsus de Castro, lib. 1. adversus hæreses, gives two more eminent notes, or probable conjectures to know such men by (they might have taken themselves by the noses when they said it), <sup>5</sup>First, they affect novelties and toys, and prefer falsehood before truth; 6 Secondly, they care not what they say, that which rashness and folly hath brought out, pride afterward, peevishness and contumacy shall maintain to the last gasp. Peculiar symptoms are prodigious paradoxes, new doctrines, vain phantasms, which are many and divers, as they themselves. <sup>1</sup>Nicholaites of old would have wives in common: Montanists will not marry at all, nor Tatians, forbidding all flesh, Severians wine; Adamians go naked, <sup>2</sup>because Adam did so in Paradise, and some <sup>3</sup>bare-foot all their lives, because God, Exodus 3. and Joshua 5. bid Moses [and Joshua] so to do, and [Isaiah] Isa. 20. was bid put off his shoes: Manichees hold that Pythagorean transmigration of souls from men to beasts; the <sup>4</sup>Circumcelliones in Africa with a mad cruelty made away themselves, some by fire, water, breaking their necks, and seduced others to do the like, threatening some if they did not, with a thousand such; as you may read in <sup>5</sup>Austin, (for there were fourscore and eleven Heresies in his time, besides Schisms and smaller factions) Epiphanius, Alphonsus de Castro, Danæus, Gab. Prateolus, &c. Of Prophets, Euthusians and Impostors, our Ecclesiastical stories afford many examples: of Eliases and Christs, as our <sup>6</sup>Eudo de Stellis, a Briton in King Stephen's time, that went invisible, translated himself from one to another in a moment, fed thousands with good cheer in the wilderness, and many such; nothing so common as miracles, visions, revelations, prophecies. Now what these brain-sick Hereticks once broach, and Impostors set on foot, be it never so absurd, false, and prodigious, the common people will follow and believe. It will run along like Murrain in cattle, scab in sheep. Nulla scabies, as <sup>7</sup>he said, superstitione scabiosior: as he that is bitten with a mad dog bites others, and all in the end become mad; either out of affection of novelty, simplicity, blind zeal, hope and fear, the giddy-headed multitude will embrace it, and without farther examination approve it.

Sed vetera querimur,<sup>8</sup> these are old, hæc prius fuere.<sup>9</sup> In our days we have a new scene of superstitious Impostors and Hereticks, a new company of Actors, of Antichrists, that great Antichrist himself: a rope of Popes, that by their greatness and authority bear down all before them: who from that time they proclaimed

Their Vigils and Fasts, their Ceremonies at Christmas, Shrove-tide, Candlemas, Palm-Sunday, S. Blase, S. Martin, S. Nicholas' day ; their adorations, exorcisms, &c. will think all those Grecian, Pagan, Mahometan superstitions, gods, Idols and Ceremonies, the Name, Time and Place, habit only altered, to have degenerated into Christians. Whilst they prefer Traditions before Scriptures ; those Evangelical Councils, poverty, obedience, vows, alms, fasting, supererogations, before God's Commandments ; their own Ordinances instead of his Precepts, and keep them in ignorance, blindness, they have brought the common people into such a case by their cunning conveyances, strict discipline, and servile education, that upon pain of damnation they dare not break the least ceremony, tradition, edict : hold it a greater sin to eat a bit of meat in Lent than kill a man : their consciences are so terrified, that they are ready to despair if a small ceremony be omitted ; and will accuse their own Father, Mother, Brother, Sister, nearest and dearest friends, of heresy, if they do not as they do, will be their chief executioners, and help first to bring a fagot to burn them. What mulct, what penance soever is enjoined, they dare not but do it, tumble with S. Francis in the mire amongst hogs, if they be appointed, go woolward, whip themselves, build Hospitals, Abbies, &c. go to the East or West-Indies, kill a King, or run upon a sword point : they perform all, without any muttering or hesitation, believe all.

George, S. Christopher, S. Winifred, S. Denis, &c. It is a wonder to see now *Nich. Whether he can produce respect without a foundation or term, make a Whore a Virgin? Such, saith Keminisius, are most of your School-men (mere Alchemists) 200 Commentators on Peter Lombard; (Pitsius, catal. scriptorum Anglic. reckons up 180 English Commentators alone, on the matter of the sentences), Scotists, Thomists, Reals, Nominals,<sup>4</sup> &c. and so perhaps that of Saint<sup>5</sup> Austin may be verified, Indocti rapiunt cælum, docti interim descendunt ad infernum.<sup>7</sup> Thus they continued in such error, blindness, decrees, sophisms, superstitions; idle ceremonies and traditions were the sum of their new-coined holiness and religion, and by these knaveries and stratagems they were able to involve multitudes, to deceive the most sanctified souls, and if it were possible the very Elect. In the mean time the true Church, as wine and water mixt, lay hid and obscure to speak of till Luther's time, who began upon a sudden to defecate,<sup>8</sup> and, as another Sun, to drive away those foggy mists of superstition, to restore it to that purity of the Primitive Church. giddy-pated Commentators.]

revelations shall suggest, and precisely set down when the world shall come to an end, what year, what month, what day. Some of them again have such strong faith, so presumptuous, they will go into infected houses, expel devils, and fast forty days, as Christ himself did ; some call God and his Attributes into question, as Vorstius and Socinus, some Princes, Civil Magistrates, and their authorities, as Anabaptists, will do all their own private spirit dictates, and nothing else. Brownists, Barrowists, Familists, and those Amsterdamian sects and sectaries, are led all by so many private spirits. It is a wonder to reveal what passages Sleidan relates in his Commentaries, of Cretink, Knipperdoling, and their associates, those mad men of Munster in Germany ; what strange Enthusiasms, sottish Revelations they had, how absurdly they carried themselves, deluded others ; and as profane Machiavel in his Political Disputations holds of Christian Religion in general, it doth enervate, debilitate, take away men's spirits and courage from them, simpliciores reddit homines,<sup>1</sup> breeds nothing so courageous Soldiers as that Roman : we may say of these peculiar sects, their Religion takes away not spirits only, but wit and judgment, and deprives them of their understanding : for some of them are so far gone with their private Enthusiasms and Revelations, that they are quite mad, out of their wits.

What greater madness can there be, than for a man to take upon him to be God, as some do ? to be the Holy Ghost, Elias, and what not ? In <sup>2</sup>Poland 1518, in the Reign of King Sigismund, one said he was Christ, and got him twelve Apostles, came to judge the world, and strangely deluded the Commons. <sup>3</sup>One David George, an illiterate Painter, not many years since, did as much in Holland, took upon him to be the Messias, and had many followers. Benedictus Victorinus Faventinus, consil. 15, writes as much of one Honorius, that thought he was not only inspired as a Prophet, but that he was a God himself, and had <sup>4</sup>familiar conference with God and his Angels. Lavat. de spect. c. 2. part. 8, hath a story of one John Sartorius, that thought he was the Prophet Elias, and cap. 7, of divers others that had conference with Angels, were Saints, Prophets ; Wierus lib. 3. de Lamiis c. 7, makes mention of a Prophet of Groningen that said he was God the Father ; of an Italian and Spanish Prophet that held as much. We need not rove so far abroad, we have familiar examples at home; Hacket that said he was Christ, Coppinger and Arthington, his disciples: 'Burchet and Hovatus, burned at Norwich. We are never likely seven years together without some such new Prophets, that have several inspirations, some to convert the Jews, some fast forty days, [some] go with Daniel to the Lion's den; some foretell strange things, some for one thing, some for another. Great Precisians of mean conditions and very illiterate, most part by a preposterous zeal, fasting, meditation, melancholy, are brought into these gross errors and inconveniences. Of these men I may conclude generally, that howsoever they may seem to be discreet, and men of understanding in other matters, discourse well, lesam habent imaginationem,<sup>1</sup> they are like comets, round in all places but only where they blaze, cetera sani, they have impregnable wits many of them, and discreet otherwise, but in this their madness and folly breaks out beyond measure, in infinitum erumpit stultitia. They are certainly far gone with melancholy, if not quite mad, and have more need of physick than many a man that keeps his bed, more need of Hellebore than those that are in Bedlam.

SUBJECT 4.—Prognosticks of Religious Melancholy.

YOU may guess at the Prognosticks by the Symptoms. What can these signs foretell otherwise than folly, dotage, madness, gross ignorance, despair, obstinacy, a reprobate sense, 'a bad end? What else can superstition, heresy produce, but wars, tumults, uproars, torture of souls, and despair, a desolate land, as Jeremy teacheth, cap. 7. 34, when they commit Idolatry, and walk after their own ways? how should it be otherwise with them? What can they expect but blasting, famine, dearth, and all the plagues of Egypt, as Amos denounceth, cap. 4. vers. 9, 10; to be led into captivity? If our hopes be frustrate, we sow much, and bring in little, eat, and have not enough, drink, and are not filled, clothe, and be not warm, &c. Haggai 1. 6, we look for much, and it comes to little, whence is it? His house was waste, they came to their own houses, vers. 9, [10,] therefore the Heaven staid his dew, the Earth his fruit. Because we are superstitious, irreligious, we do not serve God as we ought, all these plagues and miseries come upon us; what can we look for else but mutual wars, slaughters, fearful ends in this life, and in the life to come eternal damnation? What is it that hath caused so many feral battles to be fought, so much Christian blood shed, but superstition? That Spanish Inquisition, Racks, Wheels, Tortures, Torments, whence do they proceed? from superstition. Bodine the Frenchman in his <sup>1</sup> method. hist. accounts Englishmen Barbarians for their civil wars: but let him but read those Pharsalian fields<sup>2</sup> fought of late in France for Religion, their Massacres, wherein by their own relations in four and twenty years I know not how many millions have been consumed, whole Families and Cities, and he shall find ours to have been but velitations<sup>3</sup> to theirs. But it hath ever been the custom of Hereticks and Idolaters, when they are plagued for their sins, and God's just judgments come upon them, not to acknowledge any fault in themselves, but still impute it unto others. In Cyprian's time it was much controverted betwixt him and Demetrius an Idolater, who should be the cause of those present calamities. Demetrius laid all the fault on Christians (and so they did ever in the primitive Church, as appears by the first book of Arnobius) that there were not such ordinary showers in Winter, the ripening heat in Summer, so seasonable Springs, fruitful Autumns, no Marble Mines in the Mountains, less gold and silver than of old; that husbandmen, sea-men, soldiers, all were scantied,<sup>4</sup> justice, friendship, skill in Arts, all was decayed, and that through Christians' default, and all their other miseries from them, quod dii nostri à vobis non colantur, because they did not worship their gods. But Cyprian retorts all upon him again, as appears by his Tract against him. 'Tis true, the world is miserably tormented and shaken with wars, dearth, famine, fire, inundations, plagues, and many feral diseases rage amongst us, sed non, ut tu quereris, ista accidunt quod dii vestri a nobis non colantur, sed quod à vobis non colatur Deus, à quibus nec quæritur, nec timetur, not as thou complainest, that we do not worship your Gods, but because you are Idolaters, and do not serve the true God, neither seek him, nor fear him as you ought. Our Papists object as much to us, and account us hereticks, we them; the Turks esteem of both as Infidels, and we them as a company of Pagans, Jews against all; when indeed there is a general fault in us all, and something in the very best, which may justly deserve God's wrath, and pull these miseries upon our heads. I will say nothing here of those vain cares, torments, needless works, penance, pilgrimages, pseudomartyrdom, &c. We heap upon ourselves unnecessary troubles, observations; we punish our bodies, as in Turkey (saith <sup>1</sup>Busbequius, leg. Turcic. ep. 3.) one did, that was much affected with Musick, and to hear Boys sing, but very superstitious; an old Sibyl coming to his house, or an holy woman (as that place yields many) took him down for it, and told him, that in that other world he should suffer for it; thereupon he flung his rich and costly Instruments which he had bedeckt with Jewels, all at once into the fire. He was served in silver plate, and had goodly household-stuff: a little after another religious man reprehended him in like sort, and from thenceforth he was served in earthen vessels. Last of all, a decree came forth, because Turks might not drink wine themselves, that neither Jew nor Christian then living in Constantinople might drink any wine at all. In like sort amongst Papists, fasting at first was generally proposed as a good thing; after, from such meats at set times, and then last of all so rigourously proposed, to bind the consciences upon pain of damnation. First Friday, saith Erasmus,<sup>2</sup> then Saturday, et nunc periclitatur dies Mercurii, and Wednesday now is in danger of a fast. <sup>3</sup>And for such like toys some so miserably afflict themselves, to despair, and death itself, rather than offend, and think themselves good Christians in it, when as indeed they are superstitious Jews. So saith Leonardus Fuchs, a great Physician in his time. <sup>4</sup>We are tortured in Germany with these Popish edicts, our bodies so taken down, our goods so diminished, that if God had not sent Luther, a worthy man, in time to redress these mischiefs, we should have eaten hay with our horses before this. <sup>1</sup> As in fasting, so in all other superstitious edicts, we crucify one another without a cause, barring ourselves of many good and lawful things, honest disports, pleasures and recreations; for wherefore did God create them but for our use? Feasts, mirth, musick, hawking, hunting, singing, dancing, &c. non tam necessitatibus nostris Deus inservit, sed in deliciis amamur, as Seneca notes,<sup>2</sup> God would have it so. And as Plato 2. de Legibus [p. 653.] gives out, Deos laboriosam hominum vitam miseratos, the gods, in commiseration of human estate, sent Apollo, Bacchus, and the Muses, qui cum voluptate tripudia et saltationes nobis ducant, to be merry with mortals, to sing and dance with us. So that he that will not rejoice and enjoy himself, making good use of such things as are lawfully permitted, non est temperatus,<sup>3</sup> as he will, sed superstitiosus.<sup>4</sup> There is nothing better for a man, than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his Soul enjoy good in his labour, Eccles. 2. 24. And as <sup>5</sup> one said of hawking and hunting, tot solatia in hac ægri orbis calamitate mortalibus tædiis deus objecit. I say of all honest recreations, God hath therefore indulged them to refresh, ease, solace and comfort us. But we are some of us too stern, too rigid, too precise, too grossly superstitious, and whilst we make a conscience of every toy, with touch not, taste not,<sup>6</sup> &c. as those Pythagoreans of old, and some Indians now that will eat no flesh, or suffer any living creature to be killed, the Bannians about Guzarat [or Goojerat]; we tyrannize over our brother's soul, lose the right use of many good gifts, honest <sup>7</sup> sports, games and pleasant recreations, <sup>8</sup> punish ourselves without a cause, lose <sup>7</sup> Some explode all human authors, arts, and sciences, poets, histories, &c., so precise, their zeal overruns their wits; and so stupid, they oppose all human learning, because they are ignorant themselves and illiterate, nothing must be read but Scriptures; but these men deserve to be pited, rather than confuted. Others are so strict they will admit of no honest game and pleasure, no dancing, singing, other plays, recreations and games, hawking, hunting, cock-fighting, bear-baiting, &c., because to see one beast kill another is the fruit of our rebellion against God, &c.

our liberties, and sometimes our lives. Anno 1270, at <sup>1</sup> Magdeburg in Germany, a Jew fell into a Privy upon a Saturday, and without help could not possibly get out; he called to his fellows for succour, but they denied it, because it was their Sabbath, non licebat opus manuum exercere, the Bishop hearing of it the next day forbade him to be pulled out, because it was our Sunday: in the mean time the wretch died before Monday. We have myriads of examples in this kind amongst those rigid Sabbatarians, and therefore not without good cause, <sup>2</sup> intolerabilem perturbationem Seneca calls it, as well he might, an intolerable perturbation, that causeth such dire events, folly, madness, sickness, despair, death of body and soul, and hell itself.

SUBJECT. 5.—Cure of Religious Melancholy.

To purge the world of Idolatry and superstition, will require some monster-taming Hercules, a divine Æsculapius, or CHRIST himself to come in his own person, to reign a thousand years on earth before the end, as the Millenaries <sup>3</sup> will have him. They are generally so refractory, self-conceited, obstinate, so firmly addicted to that religion in which they have been bred and brought up, that no persuasion, no terror, no persecution can divert them. The consideration of which hath induced many commonwealths to suffer them to enjoy their consciences as they will themselves. A toleration of Jews is in most Provinces of Europe: in Asia they have their Synagogues: Spaniards permit Moors to live amongst them: the Mogullians, Gentiles: the Turks, all religions. In Europe, Poland and Amsterdam are the common Sanctuaries. Some are of opinion, that no man ought to be compelled for conscience sake, but let him be of what religion he will, he may be saved, as Cornelius was formerly accepted, Jew, Turk, Anabaptists, &c. If he be an honest man, live soberly and civilly in his profession, (Volkelius, Crellius, and the rest of the Socinians, that now nestle themselves about Cracow and Rakow in Poland, have renewed this opinion) serve his own God, with that fear and reverence as he ought. Sua cuique civitati (Læli) religio sit, nostra nobis; Tully thought fit every city should be free in this behalf, adore their own Custodes et Topicos Deos, tutelar and local gods, as Symmachus calls them. Isocrates adviseth Demonicus, when he came to a strange city, to <sup>1</sup> worship by all means the Gods of the place, et unumquemque Topicum Deum sic coli oportere, quomodo ipse præceperit: which Cæcilius in <sup>2</sup> Minucius labours, and would have every nation, sacrorum ritus gentiles habere, et deos colere municipes, keep their own ceremonies, worship their peculiar gods, which Pomponius Mela reports of the Africans, Deos suos patrio more venerantur, they worship their own gods according to their own ordination. For why should any one nation, as he there pleads, challenge that universality of God, Deum suum quem nec ostendunt, nec vident, discurrentem scilicet et ubique præsentem, in omnium mores, actus, et occultas cogitationes inquirentem, &c. as Christians do? Let every Province enjoy their liberty in this behalf, worship one God, or all as they will, and are informed. The Romans built Altars Diis Asiæ, Europæ, Libyæ, Diis ignotis et peregrinis: others otherwise, &c. Plinius Secundus, as appears by his Epistle to Trajan, would not have the Christians so persecuted, and in some time of the reign of Maximin, as we find it registered in Eusebius, lib. 9. cap. 9, there was a decree made to this purpose, Nullus cogatur invitus ad hunc vel illum deorum cultum,<sup>3</sup> and by Constantine in the 19th year of his reign, as <sup>4</sup> Baronius informeth us, nemo alteri exhibeat molestiam, quod cujusque animus vult, hoc quisque transigat, new gods, new law-givers, new Priests will have new ceremonies, customs and religions, to which every wise man as a good Formalist should accommodate himself.

Edict came forth in the reign of Arcadius and Honorius. <sup>1</sup> Symmachus the Orator, in his days, to procure a general toleration, used this argument, <sup>2</sup> Because God is immense and infinite, and his nature cannot perfectly be known, it is convenient he should be as diversely worshipped, as every man shall perceive or understand. It was impossible he thought for one religion to be universal: you see that one small Province can hardly be ruled by one law civil or spiritual; and how shall so many distinct and vast Empires of the world be united into one? It never was, never will be. Besides, if there be infinite planetary and firmamental worlds, as <sup>3</sup> some will, there be infinite Genii or commanding Spirits belonging to each of them: and so per consequens <sup>4</sup> (for they will be all adored) infinite religions. And therefore let every Territory keep their proper rites and ceremonies, as their dii tutelares <sup>5</sup> will, so Tyrius calls them, and according to the quarter they hold, their own institutions, revelations, orders, Oracles, which they dictate to from time to time, or teach their Priests or Ministers. This tenent was stiffly maintained in Turkey not long since, as you may read in the third Epistle of Busbequius, <sup>6</sup> that all those should participate of eternal happiness, that lived an holy and innocent life, what religion soever they professed: Rustan Bassa was a great Patron of it; though Mahomet himself was sent virtute gladii, to enforce all, as he writes in his Alcoran, to follow him. Some again will approve of this for Jews, Gentiles, Infidels, that are out of the fold, they can be content to give them all respect and favour, but by no means to such as are within the precincts of our own Church, and called Christians, to no Hereticks, Schismatics, or the like; let the Spanish Inquisition, that fourth Fury; speak of some of them, the civil wars and Massacres in France, our Marian times. <sup>7</sup> Magallianus the Jesuit will not admit of conference with an heretick, but severity and rigour to be used, non illis verba reddere, sed furcas figere oportet; and Theodosius is commended in Nicephorus, lib. 12. cap. 15, <sup>8</sup> that he put all Hereticks to silence. Bernard, Epist. 190, will have club law, fire and sword for Hereticks, <sup>1</sup> compel them, stop their mouths, not with disputations, or refute them with reasons, but with fists; and this is their ordinary practice. Another company are as mild, on the other side, to avoid all heart-burning, and contentious wars and uproars, they would have a general toleration in every kingdom, no mulct at all, no man for religion or conscience be put to death, which <sup>2</sup> Thuanus the French Historian much favours: our late Socinians defend Vaticanus against Calvin, in a large Treatise in behalf of Servetus, vindicates; Castalio &c., Martin Bellius,<sup>3</sup> and his companions, maintained this opinion not long since in France, whose error is confuted by Beza in a just Volume. The medium is best, and that which Paul prescribes, Gal. 6. 1. If any man shall fall by occasion, restore such a one with the spirit of meekness, by all fair means, gentle admonitions: but if that will not take place, post unam et alteram admonitionem hæreticum devota, he must be excommunicate, as Paul did by Hymenæus,<sup>4</sup> delivered over to Satan. Immedicabile vulnus ense recidendum est.<sup>5</sup> As Hippocrates said in Physick, I may well say in Divinity, quæ ferro non curantur, ignis curat.<sup>6</sup> For the vulgar, restrain them by laws, mulcts, burn their books, forbid their conventicles: for when the cause is taken away, the effect will soon cease. Now for Prophets, dreamers, and such rude silly fellows, that through fasting, too much meditation, preciseness, or by Melancholy are dis-tempered: the best means to reduce them ad sanam mentem<sup>7</sup> is to alter their course of life, and with conference, threats, promises, persuasions, to intermix Physick. Hercules de Saxonîâ had such a Prophet committed to his charge in Venice, that thought he was Elias, and would fast as he did: he dressed a fellow in Angel's attire, that said he came from heaven to bring him divine food, and by that means staid his fast, administered his Physick: so by the mediation of this forged Angel he was cured. <sup>8</sup> Rhasis, an Arabian, cont. lib. 1. cap. 9,

For the rest of Heaven and Hell, let children and superstitious fools believe it : for their parts they are so far from trembling at the dreadful day of judgment, that they wish with Nero, me vivo fiat,<sup>8</sup> let it come in their times : so secure, so desperate, so immoderate in lust and pleasure, so prone to revenge, that as Paterculus [ii. 24.] said of some Caitiffs in his time in Rome, quod nequiter ausi fortiter executi : it shall not be so wickedly attempted, but as desperately performed, whate'er they take in hand. These are most impious, and commonly professed Atheists, that never use the name of God, but to swear by it : that express nought else but Epicurism in their carriage, or hypocrisy ; with Pentheus, they neglect and contemn these rites and religious ceremonies of the Gods, they will be Gods themselves, or at least socii deorum ;<sup>10</sup>

And as <sup>4</sup>Jovius relates of Mahomet the Second, that sacked Constantinople, he so behaved himself, that he believed neither Christ nor Mahomet, and thence it came to pass, that he kept his word and promise no further than for his advantage, neither did he care to commit any offence to satisfy his lust. I could say the like of many Princes, many private men (our stories are full of them) in times past, this present age, that love, fear, obey, and perform all civil duties, as they shall find them expedient or behoveful to their own ends. Securi adversus Deos, securi adversus homines, votis non est opus, which <sup>5</sup>Tacitus reports of some Germans, they need not pray, fear, hope, for they are secure to their thinking, both from God and men. Bulco Opiliensis, sometime Duke of <sup>6</sup>Silesia, was such a one to an hair, he lived (saith <sup>7</sup>Æneas Sylvius) at <sup>8</sup>Uratislavia, and was so mad to satisfy his lust, that he believed neither Heaven nor Hell, or that the soul was immortal, but married wives, and turned them up as he thought fit, did murder and mischief, and what he list himself. Let them take Heaven, Paradise, and that future happiness that will, bonum est esse hic,<sup>3</sup> it is good being here: there is no talking to such, no hope of their conversion, they are in a reprobate sense, mere carnalists, fleshly-minded men, which howsoever they may be applauded in this life by some few Parasites, and held for worldly wise men, they seem to me (saith Melancthon) to be as mad as Hercules was, when he raved and killed his wife and children. A milder sort of these Atheistical spirits there are that profess Religion, but timidè et hæsitanter,<sup>4</sup> tempted thereunto out of that horrible consideration of diversity of Religions, which are and have been in the world (which argument Campanella, Atheismus Triumphatus, cap. 9, both urgeth and answers), besides the covetousness, imposture and knavery of Priests, quæ faciunt (as Postellus observes) ut rebus sacris minis faciant fidem; and those religions some of them so fantastical, exorbitant, so violently maintained with equal constancy and assurance; whence they infer, that if there be so many religious sects, and denied by the rest, why may they not be all false? or why should this or that be preferred before the rest? The Scepticks urge this, and amongst others it is the conclusion of Sextus Empiricus lib. 8. advers. Mathematicos: after many Philosophical arguments and reasons pro and con that there are Gods, and again that there are no Gods, he so concludes, cum tot inter se pugnent, &c., una tantum potest esse vera, as Tully likewise disputes: Christians say they alone worship the true God, pity all other sects, lament their case; and yet those old Greeks and Romans that worshipped the Devil, as the Chinese do now, aut Deos Topicos, [or] their own gods; as Julian the Apostate, 1 Cæcilius in Minucius, Celsus and Porphyry the Philosopher object; and as Machiavel contends, were much more noble, generous, victorious, had a more flourishing Commonwealth, better Cities, better Soldiers, better Scholars, better Wits. Their Gods often overcame our Gods, did as many miracles, &c. Saint Cyril, Arnobius, Minucius, with many other ancients, of late Lessius, Mornay, Grotius de verit. Relig. Christianæ, Savanarola de verit. fidei Christianæ, well defend; but Zanchius, 2 Campanella, Martinus Marcennus, Bozius, and Gentilettus answer all their Atheistical arguments at large. But this again troubles many, as of old, wicked men generally thrive, professed Atheists thrive.

* Nullos esse Deos, inane cælum,
Affirmat Segius, probatque, quòd se
Factum, dum negat hæc, videt beatum.

There are no Gods, Heavens are toys,
Segius in public justifies;
Because that whilst he thus denies
Their Deities, he better thrives.

This is a prime Argument: and most part your most sincere, upright, honest, and 'good men are depressed. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong (Eccles. 9. 11,) nor yet bread to the wise, favour nor riches to men of understanding, but time and chance comes to all. There was a great plague in Athens (as Thucydides, lib. 2. relates) in which at last every man with great licentiousness did what he list, not caring at all for God's or men's Laws. Neither the fear of God, nor Laws of men (saith he) awed any man, because the plague swept all away alike, good and bad; they thence concluded, it was alike to worship or not worship the Gods, since they perished all alike.<sup>5</sup> Some cavil and make doubts of Scripture itself, it cannot stand with God's mercy, that so many should be damned, so many bad, so few good, such have and hold about Religions, all stiff on their side, factious alike, thrive alike, and yet bitterly persecuting and damning each other. It cannot stand with God's goodness, protection and providence (as <sup>1</sup> Saint Chrysostom in the dialect of such discontented persons) to see and suffer one man to be lame, another mad, a third poor and miserable all the days of his life, a fourth grievously tormented with sickness and aches to his last hour. Are these signs and works of God's providence, to let one man be deaf, another dumb? A poor honest fellow lives in disgrace, woe and want, wretched he is; when as a wicked Caitiff abounds in superfluity of wealth, keeps whores, parasites, and what he will himself. Audis, Jupiter, hæc?<sup>2</sup> Talia multa connectentes, longum reprehensionis sermonem erga dei providentiam contexunt. Thus they mutter and object (see the rest of their Arguments in Marcennus in Genesin, and in Campanella, amply confuted), with many such vain cavils, well known, not worthy the recapitulation or answering, whatsoever they pretend, they are interim<sup>3</sup> of little or no Religion.

Couzin-germans to these men are many of our great Philosophers and Deists, who, though they be more temperate in this life, give many good moral precepts, honest, upright, and sober in their conversation, yet in effect they are the same (accounting no man a good Scholar that is not an Atheist) nimis altum sapiunt, too much learning makes them mad. Whiles they attribute all to natural causes, <sup>4</sup>contingence of all things, as Melancthon calls them, pertinax hominum genus, a peevish Generation of men, that misled by Philosophy, and the Devil's suggestion, their own innate blindness, deny God as much as the rest, hold all Religion a fiction, opposite to Reason and Philosophy, though for fear of Magistrates, saith <sup>5</sup>Vaninus, they durst not publicly profess it. Ask one of them of what Religion he is, he scoffingly replies, a Philosopher, a Galenist, an <sup>6</sup>Averroist, and with Rabelais a Physician, a Peripatetick, an Epicure. In spiritual things God must demonstrate all to sense, leave a pawn with them, or else seek some other creditor. They will acknowledge nature and fortune, yet not God: though in effect they grant both: for as Scaliger defines, Nature signifies God's ordinary power; or as Calvin writes, Nature is God's order, and so things extraordinary may be called unnatural: Fortune his unrevealed will; and so we call things changeable that are beside reason and expectation. To this purpose<sup>1</sup> Minucius in Octaviano, and <sup>2</sup>Seneca well discourseth with them, lib. 4. de beneficiis cap. 5, 6, 7. They do not understand what they say; what is Nature but God? Call him what thou wilt, Nature, Jupiter, he hath as many Names as Offices. It comes all to one pass, God is the fountain of all, the first Giver and Preserver, from whom all things depend, à quo et per quem omnia,

Nam quodcunque vides Deus est, quocunque moveris,<sup>4</sup>

God is all in all, God is everywhere, in every place. And yet this Seneca that could confute and blame them, is all out as much to be blamed and confuted himself, as mad himself; for he holds fatum Stoicum, that inevitable necessity, in the other extreme, as those Chaldean Astrologers of old did, against whom the Prophet Jeremiah so often thunders, and those Heathen Mathematicians, Nigidius Figulus,<sup>5</sup> Magicians, and Pricilianists, whom *S. (for which he is soundly lashed by Marinus Marcennus, as well he deserves), to natural causes (for spirits he will not acknowledge), to that light, motion, influences of Heavens and Stars, and to the Intelligences that move the Quid nunc vile magis et execrandum ? Ita cælestia corpora pro mortalium beneficio religiones ædificant, et cum cessat influxus, cessat lex, &c.* And because, according to their Tenents, the world is eternal, intelligences eternal, influences of Stars eternal, Kingdoms, Religions, Alterations shall be likewise eternal, and run round after many Ages ; Atque iterum ad Trojam magnus mittetur Achilles ;<sup>1</sup> renascentur Religiones, et Cærimoniae, res humanæ in idem recident, nihil nunc quod non olim fuit, et post sæculorum revolutiones alias est, erit, &c. idem specie, saith Vaninus, non individuo quod Plato significavit. These (saith mine<sup>2</sup> Author) these are the Decrees of Peripateticks, which though I recite, in obsequium Christianæ fidei detestor, as I am a Christian I detest and hate. Thus Peripateticks, and Astrologians held in former times, and to this effect of old in Rome, saith Dionysius Halicarnasseus, lib. 7, [cap. 68] when those Meteors and Prodigies appeared in the Air, after the banishment of Coriolanus, men were diversely affected, some said they were God's just judgments for the execution of that good man, some referred all to natural causes, some to Stars, some thought they came by chance, some by necessity decreed ab initio,<sup>3</sup> and could not be altered. The two last Opinions of Necessity and Chance were, it seems, of greater note than the rest.

For the first of Chance, as <sup>1</sup>Sallust likewise informeth us, those old Romans generally received. They supposed Fortune alone gave Kingdoms and Empires, Wealth, Honours, Offices; and that for two causes, first, because every wicked, base, unworthy wretch was preferred, rich, potent, &c. Secondly, because of their uncertainty, though never so good, scarce any one enjoyed them long: but after they began upon better advice to think otherwise, that every man made his own fortune. The last of Necessity was Seneca's tenent,<sup>2</sup> that God was alligatus causis secundis, so tied to second causes, to that inexorable necessity, that he could alter nothing of that which was once decreed, sic erat in fatis,<sup>3</sup> it cannot be altered, semel jussit, semper paret Deus, nulla vis rumpit, nulle preces, nec ipsum fulmen, God hath once said it, and it must for ever stand good, no prayers, no threats, nor power, nor thunder itself can alter it. Zeno, Chrysippus, and those other Stoicks, as you may read in Tully 2, de divinatione, A. Gellius, lib. 6, cap. 2. &c. maintained as much. In all ages, there have been such, that either deny God in all, or in part; some deride him, they could have made a better world, and rule it more orderly themselves, blaspheme him, derogate at their pleasure from him. 'Twas so in Plato's times, Some say there be no gods, others, that they care not for men, a middle sort grant both. Si non sit Deus, unde bona? si sit Deus, unde mala? So Cotta argues in Tully, why made he not all good, or at least tenders not the welfare of such as are good?<sup>4</sup> As the woman told Alexander, if he be not at leisure to hear Causes, and redress them, why doth he reign? <sup>5</sup>Sextus Empiricus hath many such Arguments. Thus perverse men cavil. So it will ever be, some of all sorts, good, bad, indifferent, true, false, zealous, Ambidexters,<sup>7</sup> Neutralists, lukewarm Libertines, Atheists, &c. They will see these religious Sectaries agree amongst themselves, be reconciled all, before they will participate with, or believe any. They think in the mean time (which <sup>6</sup>Celsus objects, and whom Origen confutes)

To these professed Atheists we may well add that impious and carnal crew of worldly-minded men, impenitent sinners, that go to Hell in a lethargy, or in a dream, who though they be professed Christians, yet they will nulla pallescere culpa,<sup>1</sup> make a conscience of nothing they do, they have cauterized consciences,<sup>2</sup> and are indeed in a reprobate sense, past all feeling, have given themselves over to wantonness, to work all manner of uncleanness even with greediness, Ephes. 4. 19. They do know there is a God, a day of Judgment to come, and yet for all that, as Hugo saith, ita comedunt ac dormiunt, ac si diem judicii evasissent; ita ludunt ac rident, ac si in cælis cum Deo regnarent; they are as merry for all the sorrow, as if they had escaped all dangers, and were in Heaven already.

vices, men so immoderate in lust, unspeakable in malice, furious in their rage, flattering and dissembling (all for their own ends) will surely think they are not truly religious, but of an obdurate heart, most part in a reprobate sense, as in this Age. But let them carry it as they will for the present, dissemble as they can, a time will come when they shall be called to an account, their melancholy is at hand, they pull a plague and curse upon their own heads, thesaurisant [sibi] iram Dei.<sup>1</sup> Besides all such as are in deos contumeliosi, blaspheme, contemn, neglect God, or scoff at him, as the Poets feign of Salmonæus,<sup>2</sup> that would in derision imitate Jupiter's Thunder, he was precipitated for his pains, Jupiter intonuit contra, &c. so shall they certainly rue it in the end (in se spuit, qui in cælum spuit) their doom's at hand, and Hell is ready to receive them.

Some are of Opinion, that it is in vain to dispute with such Atheistical spirits in the mean time, 'tis not the best way to reclaim them. Atheism, Idolatry, Heresy, Hypocrisy, though they have one common root, that is indulgence to corrupt affection, yet their growth is different, they have divers symptoms, occasions, and must have several cures and remedies. 'Tis true, some deny there is any God, some confess, yet believe it not; a third sort confess and believe, but will not live after his Laws, Worship and obey him: others allow God and Gods subordinate, but not one God, no such general God, non talem deum, but several Topick 'Gods for several places, and those not to persecute one another for any differences, as Socinus will, but rather [to] love and cherish.

To describe them in particular, to produce their Arguments and reasons, would require a just volume, I refer them therefore that expect a more ample satisfaction, to those subtil and elaborate Treatises, devout and famous Tracts of our learned Divines (Schoolmen amongst the rest, and Casuists) that have abundance of reasons to prove there is a God, the immortality of the soul, &c. out of the strength of wit and Philosophy bring irrefragable Arguments to such as are ingenious and well disposed; at the least, answer all cavils and objections to confute their folly and madness, and to reduce them, si fieri posset,<sup>3</sup> ad sanam mentem, to a better mind; though to small purpose many times.

Amongst others consult with Julius Cæsar Lagalla, Professor of Philosophy in Rome, who hath written a large Volume of late to confute Atheists: of the Immortality of the Soul, Hierome: Montanus de immortalitate Animæ: Lelius Vincentius of the same subject: Thomas Giaminus, and Franciscus Collius de Paganorum animabus post mortem, a famous Doctor of the Ambrosian College in Milan. Bishop Fotherby<sup>1</sup> in his Atheomastix, Doctor Dove, Doctor Jackson, Abernethy, Corderoy, have written well of this subject in our mother tongue: in Latin, Colerus, Zanchius, Palearius, Illyricus, <sup>2</sup>Philippus, Faber, Faventinus, &c. But instar omnium,<sup>3</sup> the most copious confuter of Atheists, is Marinus Marcennus in his Commentaries on Genesis: 'with Campanella's Atheismus Triumphatus. He sets down at large the causes of this brutish passion (seventeen in number I take it) answers all their Arguments and Sophisms, which he reduceth to twenty-six heads, proving withal his own Assertion; There is a God, such a God, the true and sole God, by five and thirty reasons. His Colophon<sup>4</sup> is how to resist and repress Atheism, and to that purpose he adds four especial means or ways, which whoso will may profitably peruse.

SUBJECT. 2.—Despair. Despairs, Equivocations, Definitions, Parties and Parts affected.

THERE be many kinds of desperation, whereof some be holy, some unholy, as 'one distinguisheth; that unholy he defines out of Tully<sup>5</sup> to be ægritudinem animi sine ulla rerum expectatione meliore, a sickness of the soul without any hope or expectation of amendment: which commonly succeeds fear; for whilst evil is expected, we fear; but when it is certain, we despair. According to Thomas, 2. 2æ. distinct. 40 art. 4. it is recessus à re desiderata, propter impossibilitatem existimatam, a restraint from the thing desired, for some impossibility supposed. Because they cannot obtain what they would, they become desperate, and many times either yield to the passion by death itself, or else attempt impossibilities, not to be performed by men. In some cases this desperate humour is not much to be discommended, as in Wars it is a cause many times of extraordinary valour; as Joseph. lib. 1. de bello Jud. cap. 14, L. Danaus in Aphoris. polit. p. 226, and many Politicians hold. It makes them improve their worth beyond itself, and of a forlorn impotent Company become Conquerors in a moment.

In such courses when they see no remedy, but that they must either kill or be killed, they take courage, and oftentimes præter spem, beyond all hope vindicate themselves. Fifteen thousand Locrenses fought against a hundred thousand Crotonienses, and seeing now no way but one, they must all die, <sup>2</sup>thought they would not depart unrevenged, and thereupon desperately giving an assault, conquered their Enemies. Nec alia causa victoriæ (saith Justin mine Author) quàm quodd desperaverant. William the Conqueror, when he first landed in England, sent back his ships, that his Soldiers might have no hope of retiring back. <sup>3</sup>Bodine excuseth his Countrymen's overthrow at that famous Battle at Agin-court, in Henry the Fifth his time (cui simile saith Froissart, tota historia producere non possit, which no History can parallel almost, wherein one handful of English-men overthrew a Royal Army of French-men) with this refuge of despair, pauci desperati, a few desperate fellows being compassed in by their Enemies, past all hope of life, fought like so many Devils; and gives a caution, that no soldiers hereafter set upon desperate persons, which after <sup>4</sup>Frontinus and Vigeti, Guicciardini likewise admonisheth, Hypomnes. part. 2. pag. 25, not to stop an enemy that is going his way. Many such kinds there are of desperation, when men are past hope of obtaining any suit, or in despair of better fortune; Desperatio facit Monachum,<sup>5</sup> as the saying is, and desperation causeth death itself; how many thousands in such distress have made away themselves, and many others! For he that cares not for his own, is Master of another man's life. A Tuscan Soothsayer, as <sup>6</sup>Paterculus tells the story, perceiving himself and Fulvius Flaccus his dear friend, now both carried to prison by Opimius, and in despair of pardon, seeing the young man weep, quin tu

potius hoc, inquit, facis, [said,] do as I do; and with that knockt out his brains against the door-cheek,<sup>1</sup> as he was entring into Prison, protinusque illiso capite in carceris januam effuso cerebro expiravit, and so desperately died. But these are equivocal, unproper. When I speak of despair, saith <sup>2</sup>Zanchius, I speak not of every kind, but of that alone which concerns God. It is opposite to hope, and a most pernicious sin, wherewith the Devil seeks to entrap men. Musculus makes four kinds of Desperation, of God, ourselves, our Neighbour, or any thing to be done; but this division of his may be reduced easily to the former: all kinds are opposite to hope, that sweet Moderator of Passions, as Simonides calls it; I do not mean that vain hope which phantastical fellows feign to themselves, which according to Aristotle<sup>3</sup> is insomnium vigilantium, a waking dream; but this Divine hope which proceeds from confidence, and is an Anchor to a floating soul; spes alit agricolas,<sup>4</sup> even in our temporal affairs, hope revives us, but in spiritual it further animateth; and were it not for hope, we of all others were the most miserable, as Paul saith,<sup>5</sup> in this life; were it not for hope, the heart would break; for though they be punished in the sight of men, (Wisdom 3. 4.) yet is their hope full of immortality: yet doth it not so rear, as Despair doth deject; this violent and sour passion of Despair, is of all perturbations most grievous, as Patricius holds. Some divide it into final and temporal; <sup>7</sup>final is incurable, which befalleth Reprobates; temporal is a rejection of hope and comfort for a time, which may befall the best of God's children, and it commonly proceeds<sup>8</sup> from weakness of Faith, as in David, when he was oppressed, he cried out, O Lord, thou hast forsaken me,<sup>9</sup> but this [is?] for a time. This ebbs and flows with hope and fear; it is a grievous sin howsoever: although some kind of Despair be not amiss, when, saith Zanchius, we despair of our own means, and rely wholly upon God: but that species is not here meant. This pernicious kind of desperation is the subject of our Discourse, homicida animæ, the murderer of the soul, as Austin terms it, a fearful passion, wherein the party oppressed thinks he can get no ease but by death, and is fully resolved to offer violence unto himself, so sensible of his burthen, and impatient of his cross, that he hopes by death alone to be freed of his calamity (though it prove otherwise) and chooseth with Job 6. 8, 9; 7. 15, rather to be strangled and die than to be in his bonds. <sup>1</sup>The part affected is the whole soul, and all the faculties of it; there is a privation of joy, hope, trust, confidence, of present and future good, and in their place succeed fear, sorrow, &c. as in the Symptoms shall be shewed. The heart is grieved, the conscience wounded, and the mind eclipsed with black fumes arising from those perpetual terrors.

THE principal agent and procurer of this mischief is the Devil; those whom God forsakes, the Devil, by his permission, lays hold on. Sometimes he persecutes them with that worm of conscience, as he did Judas, <sup>2</sup>Saul, and others. The Poets call it Nemesis, but it is indeed God's just judgment, sero sed serio,<sup>3</sup> he strikes home at last, and setteth upon them as a thief in the night, <sup>1</sup>Thes. [v.] 2. 'This temporary passion made David cry out, Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thine heavy displeasure; for thine arrows have lit upon me, &c. There is nothing sound in my flesh, because of thine anger. Again, I roar for the very grief of my heart; and Psal. 22. My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, and art so far from my health, and the words of my crying? I am like to water poured out, my bones are out of joint, mine heart is like wax, that is molten in the midst of my bowels. So Psal. 88. 15. and 16. vers. and Psal. 102. I am in misery, at the point of death, from my youth I suffer thy terrors, doubting for my life; thine indignations have gone over me, and thy fear hath cut me off. Job doth often complain in this kind; and those God doth not assist, the Devil is ready to try and torment, still seeking whom he may devour.<sup>4</sup> If he find them merry, saith Gregory, he tempts them forthwith to some dissolute act; if pensive and sad, to a desperate end. Aut suadendo blanditur, aut minando terret, sometimes by fair means, sometimes again by foul, as he perceives men severally inclined. His ordinary engine by which he produceth this effect, is the melancholy humour itself, which is balneum Diaboli, the Devil's bath; and as in Saul,<sup>1</sup> those evil spirits get in, <sup>2</sup>as it were, and take possession of us. Black choler is a shoeing-horn, a bait to allure them, insomuch that many writers make melancholy an ordinary cause, and a symptom of despair, for that such men are most apt by reason of their ill-disposed temper, to distrust, fear, grieve, mistake, and amplify whatsoever they preposterously conceive, or falsely apprehend. Conscientia scrupulosa nascitur ex vitio naturali, complexione melancholica (saith Navarrus cap. 27. num. 282. Tom. 2. cas. conscien.) The body works upon the mind, by obfuscating the spirits and corrupted instruments, which <sup>3</sup>Perkins illustrates by simile of an Artificer, that hath a bad tool, his skill is good, ability correspondent, by reason of ill tools his work must needs be lame and unperfect. But melancholy and despair, though often, do not always concur; there is much difference; melancholy fears without a cause, this upon great occasion; melancholy is caused by fear and grief, but this torment procures them all extremity of bitterness; much melancholy is without affliction of conscience, as <sup>4</sup>Bright and Perkins illustrate by four reasons; and yet melancholy alone again may be sometimes a sufficient cause of this terror of conscience. <sup>5</sup>Felix Plater so found it in his observations, è melancholicis alii damnatos se putant, Deo curæ non esse, nec prædestinatos, &c. They think they are not predestinate, God hath forsaken them; and yet otherwise very zealous and religious; and 'tis common to be seen, melancholy for fear of God's judgment and hell fire, drives men to desperation; fear and sorrow, if they be immoderate, end often with it. Intolerable pain and anguish, long sickness, captivity, misery, loss of goods, loss of friends, and those lesser griefs, do sometimes effect it, or such dismal accidents. Si non statim relevantur, saith <sup>6</sup>Marcennus, dubitant an sit Deus, if they be not eased forthwith, they doubt whether there be any God, they rave, curse, and are desperately mad, because good men are oppressed, wicked men flourish, they have not as they think to their desert, and through impatience of calamities are so misaffected. Democritus put out his eyes,<sup>1</sup> ne malorum civium prosperos videret successus, because he could not abide to see wicked men prosper, and was therefore ready to make away himself, as <sup>2</sup>A. Gellius writes of him. Felix Plater hath a memorable example in this kind, of a Painter's wife in Basil, that was melancholy for her son's death, and for melancholy became desperate, she thought God would not pardon her sins,<sup>3</sup> and for four months, still raved, that she was in hell fire, already damned. When the humour is stirred up, every small object aggravates and incenseth it, as the parties are addicted. 'The same Author hath an example of a merchant-man, that for the loss of a little wheat, which he had over-long kept, was troubled in conscience, for that he had not sold it sooner, or given it to the poor, yet a good Scholar and a great Divine; no persuasion would serve to the contrary, but that for this fact he was damned; in other matters very judicious and discreet. Solitariness, much fasting, divine meditations, and contemplations of God's judgments, most part accompany this melancholy, and are main causes, as <sup>4</sup>Navarrus holds; to converse with such kind of persons so troubled, is sufficient occasion of trouble to some men. Nonnulli ob longas inedias, studia et meditationes coelestes de rebus sacris et religione, semper agitant[ur], &c. Many (saith P. Forestus) through long fasting, serious meditations of heavenly things, fall into such fits; and, as Lemnius adds, lib. 4. cap. 21, 'if they be solitary given, superstitious, precise, or very devout: seldom shall you find a Merchant, a Soldier, an Inn-keeper, a Barred, an Host, an Usurer so troubled in mind, they have cheverel' consciences that will stretch, they are seldom moved in this kind or molested: young men and middle age are more wild, and less apprehensive; but old folks, most part, such as are timorous and religiously given. Pet. Forestus, observat. lib. 10. cap. 12 de morbis cerebri, hath a fearful example of a Minister, that through precise fasting in Lent, and overmuch meditation, contracted this mischief, and in the end became desperate, thought he saw devils in his chamber, and that he could not be saved; he smelled nothing, as he said, but fire and brimstone, was already in hell, and would ask them still, if they did not 'smell as much. I told him he was melancholy, but he laughed me to scorn, and replied, that he saw devils, talked with them in good earnest, would spit in my face, and ask me if I did not smell brimstone, but at last he was by him cured. Such another story I find in Plater, observat. lib. 1. A poor fellow had done some foul offence, and for fourteen days would eat no meat, in the end became desperate, the Divines about him could not ease him,<sup>2</sup> but so he died. Continual meditation of God's judgments troubles many. Multi ob timorem futuri judicii, saith Guatinerius, cap. 5. tract. 15, et suspicionem desperabundi sunt: David himself complains that God's judgments terrified his Soul, Psal. 119. part. 15, vers. 8, My flesh trembleth for fear of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgments. Quoties diem illum cogito (saith <sup>3</sup> Hierome) toto corpore contremisco, I tremble as often as I think of it. The terrible meditation of hell-fire, and eternal punishment, much torments a sinful silly soul. What's a thousand years to eternity? Ubi mæror, ubi fletus, ubi dolor sempiternus; mors sine morte, finis sine fine; a finger burnt by chance we may not endure, the pain is so grievous, we may not abide an hour, a night is intolerable; and what shall this unspeakable fire then be that burns for ever, innumerable infinite millions of years, in omne ævum, in æternum! O eternity!

This meditation terrifies these poor distressed souls, especially if their bodies be predisposed by melancholy, they religiously given, and have tender consciences, every small object affrights them, the very inconsiderate reading of Scripture itself, and misinterpretation of some places of it, as Many are called, few are chosen.<sup>1</sup> Not every one that saith Lord [Lord].<sup>2</sup> Fear not little flock.<sup>3</sup> He that stands, let him take heed lest he fall.<sup>4</sup> Work out your salvation with fear and trembling.<sup>5</sup> That night two shall be in a bed, one received, the other left.<sup>6</sup> Straight is the way that leads to Heaven, and few there are that enter therein.<sup>7</sup> The parable of the seed, and of the sower, some fell on barren ground, some was choked.<sup>8</sup> Whom he hath predestinated, he hath chosen.<sup>9</sup> He will have mercy on whom he will have mercy.<sup>10</sup> Non est volentis nec currentis, sed miserentis Dei.<sup>11</sup> These and the like places terrify the souls of many; election, predestination, reprobation, preposterously conceived, offend divers, with a deal of foolish presumption, curiosity, needless speculation, contemplation, solicitude, wherein they trouble and puzzle themselves about those questions of grace, free-will, perseverance, God's secrets; they will know more than is revealed by God in his word, human capacity, or ignorance can apprehend, and too importunate inquiry after that which is revealed; mysteries, ceremonies, observation of Sabbaths, laws, duties, &c. with many such which the Casuists discuss, and School-men broach, which divers mistake, misconstrue, misapply to themselves, to their own undoing, and so fall into this gulf. They doubt of their Election, how they shall know it, by what signs. And so far forth, saith Luther, with such nice points, torture and crucify themselves, that they are almost mad, and all they get by it is this, they lay open a gap to the Devil by Desperation to carry them to Hell. But the greatest harm of all proceeds from those thundering Ministers, a most frequent cause they are of this malady: <sup>12</sup>and do more harm in the Church (saith Erasmus) than they that flatter; great danger on both sides, the one lulls them asleep in carnal security, the other drives them to despair. Whereas S. well adviseth, 'We should not meddle with the one without the other, nor speak of judgment without mercy; the one alone brings Desperation, the other Security. But these men are wholly for judgment, of a rigid disposition themselves, there is no mercy with them, no salvation, no balsam for their diseased souls, they can speak of nothing but reprobation, hell-fire, and damnation, as they did, Luke 11. 46, lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, which they themselves touch not with a finger. 'Tis familiar with our Papists to terrify men's souls with purgatory, tales, visions, apparitions, to daunt even the most generous spirits, to 'require charity, as Brentius observes, of others, bounty, meekness, love, patience, when they themselves breathe out nought but lust, envy, covetousness. They teach others to fast, give alms, do penance, and crucify their mind with superstitious observations, bread and water, hair-cloths, whips, and the like, when they themselves have all the dainties the world can afford, lie on a down bed with a Courtesan in their arms. Heu quantum patimur pro Christo, as 'he said, what a cruel tyranny is this, so to insult over, and terrify men's souls! Our indiscreet Pastors many of them come not far behind, whilst in their ordinary Sermons they speak so much of election, predestination, reprobation ab æterno,<sup>4</sup> subtraction of grace, præterition, voluntary permission, &c. by what signs and tokens they shall discern and try themselves, whether they be God's true children elect, an sint reprobi, prædestinati,<sup>5</sup> &c. with such scrupulous points, they still aggravate sin, thunder out God's judgments without respect, intempestively rail at, and pronounce them damned in all auditories, for giving so much to sports and honest recreations, making every small fault and thing indifferent an irremissible offence, they so rent, tear, and wound men's consciences, that they are almost mad, and at their wits' ends.

These bitter potions (saith 'Erasmus) are still in their mouths, nothing but gall and horror, and a mad noise, they make all their auditors desperate, many are wounded by this means, and they commonly that are most devout and precise, have been formerly presumptuous, and certain of their salvation; they that have tender consciences, that follow Sermons, frequent Lectures, that have indeed least cause, they are most apt to mistake, and fall into these miseries. I have heard some complain of Parsons' Resolution, and other books of like nature (good otherwise) they are too tragical, too much dejecting men, aggravating offences; great care and choice, much discretion is required in this kind.

The last and greatest cause of this malady, is our own conscience, sense of our sins, and God's anger justly deserved, a guilty conscience for some foul offence formerly committed.

Or: Conscience, for I am conscious of ill deeds.]

A good conscience is a continual feast, but a galled conscience is as great a torment as can possibly happen, a still baking oven, (so Pierius in his Hieroglyph, compares it) another hell. Our conscience, which is a great ledger book, wherein are written all our offences, a register to lay them up, (which those <sup>2</sup>Egyptians in their Hieroglyphicks expressed by a mill, as well for the continuance as for the torture of it) grinds our souls with the remembrance of some precedent sins, makes us reflect upon, accuse and condemn our own selves. <sup>3</sup>Sin lies at door, &c. I know there be many other causes assigned by Zanchius, <sup>4</sup>Musculus, and the rest; as incredulity, infidelity, presumption, ignorance, blindness, ingratitude, discontent, those five grand miseries in Aristotle, ignominy, need, sickness, enmity, death, &c., but this of conscience is the greatest, <sup>5</sup>instar ulceris corpus jugiter percellens: this scrupulous conscience (as <sup>6</sup>Peter Forestus calls it) which tortures so many, that either out of a deep apprehension of their unworthiness, and consideration of their own dissolute life, accuse themselves, and aggravate every small offence, when there is no such cause, misdoubting in the mean time God's mercies, they fall into these inconveniences. The Poets call them <sup>7</sup>Furies, Diræ,<sup>8</sup> but it is the conscience alone which is a thousand witnesses to accuse us,<sup>9</sup>

A continual testor to give in evidence, to empanel a Jury to examine us, to cry guilty, a persecutor with hue and cry to follow, an apparitor to summon us, a bailiff to carry us, a Serjeant to arrest, an Attorney to plead against us, a gaoler to torment, a Judge to condemn, still accusing, denouncing, torturing and molesting. And as the statue of Juno in that holy city near Euphrates in <sup>2</sup> Assyria will look still towards you, sit where you will in her temple, she stares full upon you, if you go by, she follows with her eye, in all sites, places, conventicles, actions, our conscience will be still ready to accuse us. After many pleasant days, and fortunate adventures, merry tides, this conscience at last doth arrest us. Well he may escape temporal punishment, <sup>3</sup> bribe a corrupt judge, and avoid the censure of law, and flourish for a time; for <sup>4</sup> who ever saw (saith Chrysostom) a covetous man troubled in mind when he is telling of his money, an adulterer mourn with his mistress in his arms? we are then drunk with pleasure, and perceive nothing: yet as the prodigal Son<sup>5</sup> had dainty fare, sweet musick at first, merry company, jovial entertainment, but a cruel reckoning in the end, as bitter as wormwood, a fearful visitation commonly follows. And the devil that then told thee that it was a light sin, or no sin at all, now aggravates on the other side, and telleth thee that it is a most irremissible offence, as he did by Cain and Judas, to bring them to despair; every small circumstance before neglected and contemned, will now amplify itself, rise up in judgment and accuse, the dust of their shoes, dumb creatures, as to Lucian's tyrant lectus et candela,<sup>6</sup> the bed and candle, did bear witness, to torment their souls for their sins past. Tragical examples in this kind are too familiar and common: Adrian, Galba, Nero, Otho, Vitellius, Caracalla, were in such horror of conscience for their offences committed, murders, rapes, extortions, injuries, that they were weary of their lives, and could get no body to kill them. <sup>7</sup> Kenneth III., King of Scotland, when he had murdered his Nephew Malcolm, King Duff's son, Prince of Cumberland, and with counterfeit tears and protestations dissembled the matter a long time, <sup>1</sup>at last his conscience accused him, his unquiet soul could not rest day or night, he was terrified with fearful dreams, visions, and so miserably tormented all his life. It is strange to read what Commines hath written of Lewes the XI., that French King,<sup>2</sup> of Charles the VIII.,<sup>3</sup> of Alphonso King of Naples,<sup>4</sup> in the fury of his passion how he came into Sicily, and what pranks he played. Guicciardini, a man most unapt to believe lies, relates how that Ferdinand his father's ghost, who before had died for grief, came and told him that he could not resist the French King, he thought every man cried France, France; the reason of it (saith Commines) was because he was a vile tyrant, a murderer, an oppressor of his subjects, he bought up all commodities, and sold them at his own price, sold Abbies to Jews and Falconers; both Ferdinand his father, and he himself, never made conscience of any committed sin; and to conclude, saith he, it was impossible to do worse than they did. Why were Pausanias, the Spartan Tyrant, Nero, Otho, Galba, so persecuted with spirits in every house they came, but for their murders which they had committed? <sup>5</sup>Why doth the devil haunt many men's houses after their deaths, appear to them living, and take possession of their habitations, as it were, of their palaces, but because of their several villainies? Why had Richard the III. such fearful dreams, saith Polydore, but for his frequent murders? Why was Herod so tortured in his mind? because he had made away Mariamne his wife. Why was Theodoricus the King of the Goths so suspicious, and so affrighted with a fish head alone, but that he had murdered Symmachus, and Boethius his son-in-law, those worthy Romans? Cælius, lib. 27. cap. 22. of a guilty soul, as by Saul and Judas, which the Poets expressed by Adrastea, or Nemesis :

Assequitur Nemesisque virum vestigia servat,
Ne male quid facias. —————

[That you may do no evil, Nemesis
Pursues and dogs the footsteps of ill-doers.]

And she is, as <sup>1</sup>Ammianus [Marcellinus,] lib. 14. [cap. 11.] describes her, the Queen of causes, and moderator of things, now she pulls down the proud, now she rears and encourageth those that are good; he gives instance in his Eusebius; Nicephorus lib. 10. cap. 35. Eccles. Hist. in Maximin and Julian. Fearful examples of God's just judgment, wrath and vengeance, are to be found in all histories, of some that have been eaten to death with Rats and Mice, as <sup>2</sup>Popelius the second King of Poland, anno 830, his wife and children; the like story is of Hatto Archbishop of Mentz, anno 969, so devoured by these vermin, which howsoever Serrarius the Jesuit, Mogunt. rerum lib. 4. cap. 5. impugn by 22 arguments, Trithemius, <sup>3</sup>Munster, Magdeburgenses, and many others relate for a truth. Such another example I find in Giraldus Cambrensis, Itin. Camb. lib. 2. cap. 2, and where not?

And yet for all these terrors of conscience, affrighting punishments which are so frequent, or whatsoever else may cause or aggravate this fearful malady in other Religions, I see no reason at all why a Papist at any time should despair, or be troubled for his sins; for let him be never so dissolute a Caitiff, so notorious a villain, so monstrous a sinner, out of that Treasure of Indulgences and merits of which the Pope is Dispensator, he may have free pardon, and plenary remission of all his sins. There be so many general pardons for ages to come, 40,000 years to come, so many Jubilees, so frequent Gaol-deliveries out of Purgatory for all souls now living, or after dissolution of the body so many particular Masses daily said in several Churches, so many Altars consecrated to this purpose, that if a man have either money or friends, or will take any pains to come to such an Altar, hear a Mass, say so many Pater-nosters, undergo such and such penance, he cannot do amiss, it is impossible his mind should be troubled, or he have any scruple to molest him. Besides that Taxa Camera

Apostolica,<sup>1</sup> which was first published to get money in the days of Leo Decimus, that sharking Pope, and since divulged to the same ends, sets down such easy rates and dispensations for all offences, for perjury, murder, incest, adultery, &c. for so many groschens or dollars (able to invite any man to sin, and provoke him to offend, methinks, that otherwise would not) such comfortable remission, so gentle and parable<sup>2</sup> a pardon, so ready at hand, with so small cost and suit obtained, that I cannot see how he that hath any friends amongst them (as I say) or money in his purse, or will at least to ease himself, can any way miscarry or be misaffected, how he should be desperate, in danger of damnation, or troubled in mind. Their ghostly Fathers can so readily apply remedies, so cunningly string and unstring, wind and unwind their devotions, play upon their consciences with plausible speeches, and terrible threats, for their best advantage settle and remove, erect with such facility and deject, let in and out, that I cannot perceive how any man amongst them should much or often labour of this disease, or finally miscarry. The causes above named must more frequently therefore take hold in others.

SUBJECT. 4.—Symptoms of Despair, Fear, Sorrow, Suspicion, Anxiety, Horror of conscience, fearful dreams and visions.

As Shoe-makers do when they bring home shoes, still cry, Leather is dearer and dearer; may I justly say of those melancholy Symptoms, these of Despair are most violent, tragical and grievous, far beyond the rest, not to be expressed, but negatively, as it is privation of all happiness, not to be endured; for a wounded spirit who can bear? Prov. 18. 14. What therefore <sup>3</sup>Timanthes did in his picture of Iphigenia, now ready to be sacrificed, when he had painted Calchas mourning, Ulysses sad, but most sorrowful Menelaus, and shewed all his art in expressing variety of affections, he covered the maid's father, Agamemnon's head, with a veil, and left it to every spectator to conceive what he would himself; for that true passion and sorrow in summo gradu,<sup>4</sup> such as his was, could not by any art be deciphered. What he did in his picture, I will do in describing the Symptoms of Despair; imagine what thou canst, fear, sorrow, furies, grief, pain, terror, anger, dismal, ghastly, tedious, irksome, &c. it is not sufficient, it comes far short, no tongue can tell, no heart conceive it. 'Tis an Epitome of hell, an extract, a quintessence, a compound, a mixture of all feral maladies, tyrannical tortures, plagues and perplexities. There is no sickness, almost, but Physick provideth a remedy for it; to every sore Chirurgery will provide a salve: friendship helps poverty; hope of liberty easeth imprisonment; suit and favour revoke banishment; authority and time wear away reproach: but what Physick, what Chirurgery, what wealth, favour, authority can relieve, bear out, assuage, or expel a troubled conscience? A quiet mind cureth all them, but all they cannot comfort a distressed soul: who can put to silence the voice of desperation? All that is single in other melancholy, horribile, dirum, pestilens, atrox, ferum,<sup>1</sup> concur in this, it is more than melancholy in the highest degree; a burning fever of the soul; so mad, saith <sup>2</sup>Jacchinus, by this misery; fear, sorrow, and despair he puts for ordinary symptoms of Melancholy. They are in great pain and horror of mind, distraction of soul, restless, full of continual fears, cares, torments, anxieties, they can neither eat, drink, nor sleep for them, take no rest,

Fear takes away their content, and dries the blood, wasteth the marrow, alters their countenance, even in their greatest delights, singing, dancing, dalliance they are still (saith <sup>5</sup>Lemnius) tortured in their souls. It consumes them to nought, I am like a Pelican in the wilderness (saith David of himself, temporally afflicted) an Owl because of thine indignation. Psal. 102. vers. 6. 10, and Psal. 55. 4, My heart trembleth within me, and the terrors of death have come upon me; fear and trembling are come upon me, &c. at death's door, Psal. 107. 18, Their soul abhors all manner of meats. Their <sup>1</sup>sleep is (if it be any) unquiet, subject to fearful dreams and terrors. Peter in his bonds slept secure, [Acts, xii. 6.] for he knew God protected him; and Tully makes it an Argument of Roscius Amerinus' innocency, that he killed not his Father, because he so securely slept [cap. 23.] Those Martyrs in the Primitive Church were most <sup>2</sup>cheerful and merry in the midst of their persecutions; but it is far otherwise with these men, tossed in a Sea, and that continually without rest or intermission, they can think of nought that is pleasant, <sup>3</sup>their conscience will not let them be quiet, in perpetual fear, anxiety, if they be not yet apprehended, they are in doubt still they shall be ready to betray themselves, as Cain did, he thinks every man will kill him [Gen. iv. 14.]: and roar for the grief of heart, Psal. 38. 8. as David did, as Job did, 3. 20, 21, 22, &c. Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life to them that have heavy hearts? Which long for death, and if it come not, search it more than treasures, and rejoice when they can find the grave. They are generally weary of their lives, a trembling heart they have, a sorrowful mind, and little or no rest.

Terror ubique tremor, timor undique et undique terror.

Fears, terrors, and affrights in all places, at all times and seasons. Cibum et potum pertinaciter aversantur multi, nodum in scirpo queritantes,<sup>4</sup> et culpam imaginantes ubi nulla est, as Wierus writes, de Lamiis, lib. 3. c. 7, they refuse many of them meat and drink, cannot rest, aggravating still and supposing grievous offences, where there are none. God's heavy wrath is kindled in their souls, and notwithstanding their continual prayers and supplications to Christ Jesus, they have no release or ease at all, but a most intolerable torment, and insufferable anguish of conscience, and that makes them through impatience, to murmur against God many times, to rave, to blaspheme, turn Atheists, and seek to offer violence to themselves. Deut. 28. 65, 66, 67, In the morning they wish for evening, and for morning in the evening, for the sight of their eyes which they see, and fear of hearts. <sup>1</sup> Marinus Marcennus in his Comment on Genesis, makes mention of a desperate friend of his, whom amongst others he came to visit, and exhort to patience, that broke out into most blasphemous Atheistical speeches, too fearful to relate, when they wished him to trust in God. Quis est ille Deus (inquit) ut serviam illi, quid proderit si oraverim? si præsens est, cur non succurrit? cur non me carcere, inediâ, squalore confectum liberat? quid ego feci? &c. absit à me hujusmodi Deus! Another of his acquaintance brake out into like Atheistical blasphemies upon his Wife's death, raved, cursed, said and did he car'd not what. And so, for the most part, it is with them all, many of them in their extremity think they hear and see visions, outcries, confer with Devils, that they are tormented, possessed, and in hell fire, already damned, quite forsaken of God, they have no sense or feeling of mercy, or grace, hope of salvation, their sentence of condemnation is already past, and not to be revoked, the Devil will certainly have them. Never was any living creature in such torment before, in such a miserable estate, in such distress of mind, no hope, no faith, past cure, reprobate, continually tempted to make away themselves: Something talks with them, they spit fire and brimstone, they cannot but blaspheme, they cannot repent, believe, or think a good thought, so far carried, ut cogantur ad impia cogitanda etiam contra voluntatem, said <sup>2</sup> Felix Plater, ad blasphemiam erga Deum, ad multa horrenda perpetranda, ad manus violentas sibi inferendas, &c. and in their distracted fits, and desperate humours, to offer violence to others, their familiar and dear friends sometimes, or to mere strangers, upon very small or no occasion: for he that cares not for his own is master of another man's life. They think evil against their wills; that which they abhor themselves, they must needs think, do, and speak. He gives instance in a Patient of his, that when he would pray, had such evil thoughts still suggested to him, and wicked <sup>3</sup> meditations. Another instance he hath, of a woman that was often tempted to curse God, to blaspheme and kill herself. Sometimes the Devil (as they say) stands without and talks with them; sometimes he is within them, as they think, and there speaks and talks, as to such as are possessed : so Apollodorus, in Plutarch, thought his heart spake within him.<sup>1</sup> There is a most memorable example of Francis Spira an Advocate of Padua; Ann. 1545, that being desperate, by no counsel of learned men could be comforted ; he felt (as he said) the pains of hell in his soul, in all other things he discoursed aright, but in this most mad. Frismelica, Bullovat, and some other excellent Physicians, could neither make him eat, drink, or sleep, no persuasion could ease him. Never pleaded any man so well for himself, as this man did against himself, and so he desperately died. Springer a Lawyer hath written his life. Cardinal Crescence died so likewise desperate at Verona, still he thought a black dog followed him to his death-bed, no man could drive the dog away, Sleidan, com. 23. cap. lib. 3. Whilst I was writing this Treatise, saith Montaltus, cap. 2. de mel., a Nun came to me for help, well for all other matters, but troubled in conscience for five years last past ; she is almost mad, and not able to resist, thinks she hath offended God, and is certainly damned. Felix Plater hath store of instances of such as thought themselves damned, ‘forsaken of God, &c. One amongst the rest, that durst not go to Church, or come near the Rhine, for fear to make away himself, because then he was most especially tempted. These, and such like symptoms, are intended and remitted, as the malady itself is more or less ; some will hear good counsel, some will not ; some desire help, some reject all, and will not be eased.

MOST part, these kind of persons make ‘away themselves, some are mad, blaspheme, curse, deny God, but most offer violence to their own persons, and sometimes to others. A wounded spirit who can bear? Prov. 18. 14. as Cain, Saul, Ahitophel, Judas, blasphemed and died. Bede saith, Pilate died desperate, eight years after Christ. <sup>1</sup> Felix Plater hath collected many examples. <sup>2</sup> A Merchant's wife that was long troubled with such temptations, in the night rose from her bed, and out of the window broke her neck into the street: another drowned himself, desperate as he was, in the Rhine; some cut their throats, many hang themselves. But this needs no illustration. It is controverted by some, whether a man so offering violence to himself, dying desperate, may be saved, aye or no? If they die so obstinately and suddenly, that they cannot so much as wish for mercy, the worst is to be suspected, because they die impenitent. <sup>3</sup> If their death had been a little more lingering, wherein they might have some leisure in their hearts to cry for mercy, charity may judge the best; divers have been recovered out of the very act of hanging and drowning themselves, and so brought ad sanam mentem,<sup>4</sup> they have been very penitent, much abhorred their former fact, confessed that they have repented in an instant, and cried for mercy in their hearts. If a man put desperate hands upon himself, by occasion of madness or melancholy, if he have given testimony before of his Regeneration, in regard he doth this not so much out of his will, as ex vi morbi,<sup>5</sup> we must make the best construction of it, as <sup>6</sup> Turks do, that think all fools and mad men go directly to heaven.

EXPERIENCE teacheth us, that though many die obstinate and wilful in this malady, yet multitudes again are able to resist and overcome, seek for help, and find comfort, are taken è faucibus Erebi, from the chops of Hell, and out of the Devil's paws, though they have by <sup>1</sup> obligation given themselves to him. Some out of their own strength, and God's assistance, though he kill me (saith Job)<sup>2</sup> yet will I trust in him, out of good counsel, advice, and Physick. <sup>3</sup> Bellovacus cured a Monk, by altering his habit, and course of life: Plater many by Physick alone. But for the most part they must concur: and they take a wrong course, that think to overcome this feral passion by sole Physick; and they are as much out, that think to work this effect by good advice alone, though both be forcible in themselves, yet vis unita fortior, they must go hand in hand to this disease:

For Physick, the like course is to be taken with this, as in other Melancholy: diet, air, exercise, all those passions and perturbations of the mind, &c. are to be rectified by the same means. They must not be left solitary, or to themselves, never idle, never out of company. Counsel, good comfort is to be applied, as they shall see the parties inclined, or to the causes, whether it be loss, fear, grief, discontent, or some such feral accident, a guilty conscience, or otherwise by frequent meditation, too grievous an apprehension, and consideration of his former life; by hearing, reading of Scriptures, good Divines, good advice and conference, applying God's Word to their distressed souls, it must be corrected and counter-poised. Many excellent Exhortations, parænetical Discourses are extant to this purpose, for such as are any way troubled in mind: Perkins, Greenham, Hayward, Bright, Abernethy, Bolton, Culmannus, Hemmingius, Cælius Secundus, Nicholas Laurentius, are copious in this subject: Azorius, Navarrus, Sayrus, &c. and such as have written cases of Conscience amongst our Pontifical Writers. But because these men's works are not to all parties at hand, so parable<sup>2</sup> at all times, I will for the benefit and ease of such as are afflicted, at the request of some <sup>3</sup>friends, recollect out of their voluminous Treatises, some few such comfortable speeches, exhortations, arguments, advice, tending to this subject, and out of God's Word, knowing, as Culmannus saith upon the like occasion, 'how unavailable and vain men's counsels are, to comfort an afflicted conscience, except God's Word concur and be annexed, from which comes life, ease, repentance, &c. Presupposing first that which Beza, Greenham, Perkins, Bolton, give in charge, the parties to whom counsel is given be sufficiently prepared, humbled for their sins, fit for comfort, confessed, tried how they are more or less afflicted, how they stand affected, or capable of good advice, before any remedies be applied. To such therefore as are so thoroughly searched and examined, I address this following Discourse.

Two main Antidotes, <sup>1</sup>Hemmingius observes, opposite to Despair, good Hope out of God's Word, to be embraced; perverse Security and Presumption from the Devil's treachery, to be rejected; Illa salus animæ, hæc pestis; one saves, the other kills, occidit animam, saith Austin, and doth as much harm as Despair itself. <sup>2</sup>Navarrus the Casuist reckons up ten special cures out of Anton. 1. part. Tit. 3. cap. 10. 1. God. 2. Physick. 3. <sup>3</sup>Avoiding such Objects as have caused it. 4. Submission of himself to other men's judgments. 5. Answer of all Objections, &c. All which Cajetan, Gerson, lib. de vit. spirit. Sayrus, lib. 1. cas. cons. cap. 14, repeat and approve out of Emanuel Roderiques, cap. 51 & 52. Greenham prescribes six special rules, Culmannus 7. 1. To acknowledge all help comes from God. 2. That the cause of their present misery is sin. 3. To repent and be heartily sorry for their sins. 4. To pray earnestly to God they may be eased. 5. To expect and implore the prayers of the Church, and good men's advice. 6. Physick. 7. To commend themselves to God, and rely upon his mercy: others otherwise, but all to this effect. But forasmuch as most men in this malady are spiritually sick, void of reason almost, over-borne by their miseries, and too deep an apprehension of their sins, they cannot apply themselves to good counsel, pray, believe, repent, we must, as much as in us lies, occur and help their peculiar infirmities, according to their several Causes and Symptoms, as we shall find them distressed and complain.

The main matter which terrifies and torments most that are troubled in mind, is the enormity of their offences, the intolerable burthen of their sins, God's heavy wrath and displeasure so deeply apprehended, that they account themselves Reprobates, quite forsaken of God, already damned, past all hope of grace, incapable of mercy, diaboli mancipia, slaves of sin, and their offences so great, they cannot be forgiven. But these men must know, there is no sin so heinous, which is not pardonable in itself ; no crime so great, but by God's mercy it may be forgiven. Where sin aboundeth, grace aboundeth much more, Rom. 5. 20. And what the Lord said unto Paul in his extremity, 2 Cor. 12. 9, My grace is sufficient for thee, for my power is made perfect through weakness ; concerns every man in like case. His promises are made indefinite to all Believers, generally spoken to all, touching remission of sins, that are truly penitent, grieved for their offences, and desire to be reconciled, Matth. 9, 12, 13, I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance, that is, such as are truly touched in conscience for their sins. Again, Mat. 11. 28, Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden, and I will ease you. Ezek. 18. 27, At what time soever a sinner shall repent him of his sins from the bottom of his heart, I will blot out all his wickedness out of my remembrance, saith the Lord. Isa. 43. 25. I, even I, am he that put away thine iniquity for mine own sake, and will not remember thy sins. As a father (saith David, Psal. 103. 13.) hath compassion on his children, so hath the Lord compassion on them that fear him. And will receive them again as the Prodigal Son was entertained, Luke 15. If they shall so come with tears in their eyes, and a penitent heart. Peccator agnoscat, Deus ignoscit.<sup>1</sup> The Lord is full of compassion and mercy, slow to anger, of great kindness, Psalm 103. 8. He will not always chide, neither keep his anger for ever, v. 9. As high as the heaven is above the earth, so great is his mercy towards them that fear him, v. 11. As far as the East is from the West, so far hath he removed our sins from us, v. 12. Though Cain cry out in the anguish of his soul, my punishment is greater than I can bear, 'tis not so : Thou liest Cain (saith Austin) God's mercy is greater than thy sins. His mercy is above all his works, Psalm 145. 9, able to satisfy for all men's sins, antidote,<sup>2</sup> 1. Tim. 2. 6. His mercy is a panacea, a balsam for an afflicted soul, a sovereign Medicine, an Alexipharmacum<sup>3</sup> for all sin, a charm for the Devil ; his mercy was great to Solomon, to Manasses, to Peter, great to all Offenders, and whosoever thou art, it may be so to thee. For why should God bid us pray (as Austin infers) Deliver us from all evil, nisi ipse misericors perseveraret, if he did not intend to help us ? He therefore that 'doubts of the remission of his sins, denies God's mercy, and doth him injury, saith

Austin. Yea, but thou repliest, I am a notorious sinner, mine offences are not so great as infinite. Hear Fulgentius, <sup>1</sup>God's invincible goodness cannot be overcome by sin, his infinite mercy cannot be terminated by any: the multitude of his mercy is equivalent to his magnitude. Hear <sup>2</sup>Chrysostom, Thy malice may be measured, but God's mercy cannot be defined; thy malice is circumscribed, his mercy is infinite. As a drop of water is to the Sea, so are thy misdeeds to his mercy; nay, there is no such proportion to be given; for the Sea, though great, it may be measured, but God's mercy cannot be circumscribed. Whatsoever thy sins be then in quantity, or quality, multitude, or magnitude, fear them not, distrust not. I speak not this, saith <sup>3</sup>Chrysostom, to make thee secure and negligent, but to cheer thee up. Yea, but thou urgest again, I have little comfort of this which is said, it concerns me not: inanis pœnitentia quam sequens culpa coinquinat, 'tis to no purpose for me to repent, and to do worse than ever I did before, to persevere in sin, and to return to my lusts, as a Dog to his vomit, or a Swine to the mire: <sup>4</sup> 'to what end is it to ask forgiveness of my sins, and yet daily to sin again and again, to do evil out of an habit? I daily and hourly offend in thought, word, and deed, in a relapse by mine own weakness and wilfulness: my bonus Genius, my good protecting Angel is gone, I am fallen from that I was, or would be, worse and worse, my latter end is worse than my beginning. Si quotidie peccas, quotidie, saith Chrysostom, pœnitentiam age, If thou daily offend, daily repent: <sup>5</sup> if twice, thrice, an hundred, an hundred thousand times, twice, thrice, an hundred thousand times repent. As they do by an old house that is out of repair, still mend some part or other; so do by thy soul, still reform some vice, repair it by repentance, call to him for grace, and thou shalt have it; for we are freely justified by his grace, Rom. 3. 24. If thine enemy repent, as our Saviour enjoined Peter, forgive him seventy seven times [Matt. xviii. 22.]; and why shouldest thou think God will not forgive thee? Why should the enormity of thy sins trouble thee? God can do it, he will do it. My conscience

(saith <sup>1</sup>Anselm) dictates to me, that I deserve damnation, my repentance will not suffice for satisfaction; but thy mercy, O Lord, quite overcomes all my transgressions. The gods once (as the Poets feign) with a gold chain would pull Jupiter out of Heaven, but all they together could not stir him, and yet he could draw and turn them as he would himself; maugre all the force and fury of these infernal fiends, and crying sins, his grace is sufficient. [2 Cor. xii. 9.] Confer the debt and the payment; Christ and Adam; sin and the cure of it; the disease and the medicine; confer the sick man to the Physician, and thou shalt soon perceive that his power is infinitely beyond it. God is better able, as <sup>2</sup>Bernard informeth us, to help, than sin to do us hurt; Christ is better able to save, than the Devil to destroy. <sup>3</sup>If he be a skilful Physician, as Fulgentius adds, he can cure all diseases; if merciful, he will. Non est perfecta bonitas à qua non omnis malitia vincitur, his goodness is not absolute and perfect, if it be not able to overcome all malice. Submit thyself unto him, as Saint Austin adviseth, he knoweth best what he doth; and be not so much pleased when he sustains thee, as patient when he corrects thee; he is Omnipotent, and can cure all diseases when he sees his own time. He looks down from Heaven upon Earth, that he may hear the mourning of prisoners, and deliver the children of death, Psal. 102. 19, 20. And though our sins be as red as scarlet, he can make them as white as snow, Isa. 1. 18. Doubt not of this, or ask how it shall be done; he is all-sufficient that promiseth; qui fecit mundum de immundo, saith Chrysostom, he that made a fair world of nought, can do this and much more for his part: do thou only believe, trust in him, rely on him, be penitent, and heartily sorry for thy sins. Repentance is a sovereign remedy for all sins, a spiritual wing to erear us, a charm for our miseries, a protecting Amulet to expel sin's venom, an attractive loadstone to draw God's mercy and graces unto us. <sup>4</sup>Peccatum vulnus, pœnitentia medicinam: sin made the breach, repentance must help it; howsoever thine offence came, by error, sloth, obstinacy, ignorance, exitur per pœnitentiam, this is the sole means to be relieved. <sup>1</sup>Hence comes our hope of safety, by this alone sinners are saved, God is provoked to mercy. This unlooseth all that is bound, enlighteneth darkness, mends that is broken, puts life to that which was desperately dying: makes no respect of offences, or of persons. <sup>2</sup>This doth not repel a fornicator, reject a drunkard, resist a proud fellow, turn away an idolater, but entertains all, communicates itself to all. Who persecuted the Church more than Paul, offended more than Peter? and yet by repentance (saith Chrysologus) they got both magisterium et ministerium sanctitatis, the magistrery of Holiness. The Prodigal Son went far, but by Repentance he came home at last. <sup>3</sup>This alone will turn a Wolf into a Sheep, make a Publican a Preacher, turn a Thorn into an Olive, make a deboist fellow Religious, a Blasphemer sing Hallelujah, make Alexander the Copper-smith truly devout, make a Devil a Saint. <sup>4</sup>And him that polluted his mouth with calumnies, lying, swearing, and filthy tunes and tones, to purge his throat with divine Psalms. Repentance will effect prodigious cures, make a stupend metamorphosis. An Hawk came into the Ark, and went out again an Hawk; a Lion came in, went out a Lion; a Bear, a Bear; a Wolf, a Wolf; but if an Hawk come into this sacred Temple of Repentance, he will go forth a Dove (saith <sup>5</sup>Chrysostom,) a Wolf go out a Sheep, a Lion a Lamb. <sup>6</sup>This gives sight to the blind, legs to the lame, cures all diseases, confers grace, expels vice, inserts virtue, comforts and fortifies the soul. Shall I say, let thy sin be what it will, do but repent, it is sufficient?

'Tis true indeed, and all-sufficient this, they do confess, if they could repent, but they are obdurate, they have cauterized consciences, [1 Tim. iv. 2.] they are in a reprobate sense, they cannot think a good thought, they cannot hope for grace, pray, believe, repent, or be sorry for their sins, they find no grief for sin in themselves, but rather a delight, no groaning of spirit, but are carried head-long to their own destruction, heaping wrath to themselves against the day of wrath, Rom. 2. 5. 'Tis a grievous case this, I do yield, and yet not to be despaired; God of his bounty and mercy calls all to repentance, Rom. 2. 4. Thou mayest be called at length, restored, taken to his grace, as the Thief upon the Cross at the last hour, [Luke, xxiii. 42, 43.] as Mary Magdalene, [Mark, xvi. 9.] and many other sinners have been, that were buried in sin. God (saith Fulgentius) is delighted in the conversion of a sinner, he sets no time; prolixitas temporis Deo non præjudicat, aut gravitas peccati, deferring of time, or grievousness of sin, do not prejudicate his grace, things past and to come are all one to him, as present, 'tis never too late to repent. This Heaven of Repentance is still open for all distressed souls; and howsoever as yet no signs appear, thou mayest repent in good time. Hear a comfortable speech of St. Austin, Whatsoever thou shalt do, how great a sinner soever, thou art yet living; if God would not help thee, he would surely take thee away; but in sparing thy life, he gives thee leisure, and invites thee to repentance. Howsoever as yet, I say, thou perceivest no fruit, no feeling, findest no likelihood of it in thyself, patiently abide the Lord's good leisure, despair not, or think thou art a Reprobate; he came to call sinners to repentance, Luke 5. 32. of which number thou art one; he came to call thee, and in his time will surely call thee. And although as yet thou hast no inclination to pray, to repent, thy Faith be cold and dead, and thou wholly averse from all divine functions, yet it may revive, as Trees are dead in Winter, but flourish in the Spring; these Virtues may lie hid in thee for the present, yet hereafter shew themselves, and peradventure already bud, howsoever thou dost not perceive it. 'Tis Satan's policy to plead against, suppress and aggravate, to conceal those sparks of Faith in thee. Thou dost not believe, thou sayest, yet thou wouldest believe if thou couldst, 'tis thy desire to believe; then pray, Lord help mine unbelief; and hereafter thou shalt certainly believe : <sup>1</sup>Dabitur sitienti, It shall be given to him that thirsteth. Thou canst not yet repent, hereafter thou shalt ; a black cloud of sin as yet obnubilates thy soul, terrifies thy conscience, but this cloud may conceive a Rain-bow at the last, and be quite dissipated by repentance. Be of good cheer ; a child is rational in power, not in act ; and so art thou penitent in affection, though not yet in action. 'Tis thy desire to please God, to be heartily sorry ; comfort thyself, no time is over-past, 'tis never too late. A desire to repent, is repentance itself, though not in nature, yet in God's acceptance ; a willing mind is sufficient. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after Righteousness, Mat. 5. 6. He that is destitute of God's Grace, and wisheth for it, shall have it. The Lord (saith David, Psal. 10. 17.) will hear the desire of the poor, that is, of such as are in distress of body and mind. 'Tis true, thou canst not as yet grieve for thy sin, thou hast no feeling of Faith, I yield ; yet canst thou grieve thou dost not grieve ? It troubles thee, I am sure, thine heart should be so impenitent and hard, thou wouldest have it otherwise ; 'tis thy desire to grieve, to repent and believe. Thou lovest God's children and Saints in the mean time, hatest them not, persecutest them not, but rather wishest thyself a true Professor, to be as they are, as thou thyself hast been heretofore ; which is an evident token thou art in no such desperate case. 'Tis a good sign of thy conversion, thy sins are pardonable, thou art, or shalt surely be reconciled. The Lord is near them that are of a contrite heart, Luke 4. 18. <sup>2</sup>A true desire of mercy in the want of mercy, is mercy itself ; a desire of grace in the want of grace, is grace itself ; a constant and earnest desire to believe, repent, and to be reconciled to God, if it be in a touched heart, is an acceptation of God, a reconciliation, Faith and Repentance itself. For it is not thy Faith and Repentance, as <sup>3</sup>Chrysostom truly teacheth, that is vailable, but God's mercy that is annexed to it, he accepts the will for the deed. So that I conclude, to feel in ourselves the want of grace, and to be grieved for it, is grace itself. I am troubled with fear my sins are not forgiven, Careless objects ; but Bradford answers, they are ; for God hath given thee a penitent and believing heart, that is, an heart which desireth to repent and believe ; for such a one is taken of him (he accepting the will for the deed) <sup>4</sup>for a truly penitent and believing heart.

All this is true, thou repliest, but yet it concerns not thee, 'tis verified in ordinary offenders, in common sins, but thine are of an higher strain, even against the Holy Ghost himself, irremissible sins, sins of the first magnitude, written with a pen of Iron, engraven with the point of a Diamond. Thou art worse than a Pagan, Infidel, Jew, or Turk, for thou art an Apostate and more, thou hast voluntarily blasphemed, renounced God and all Religion, thou art worse than Judas himself, or they that crucified Christ: for they did offend out of ignorance, but thou hast thought in thine heart there is no God.<sup>1</sup> Thou hast given thy soul to the Devil, as Witches and Conjurers do, explicitè and implicitè, by compact, band, and obligation (a desperate, a fearful case) to satisfy thy lust, or to be revenged of thine enemies, thou didst never pray, come to Church, hear, read, or do any divine duties with any devotion, but for formality and fashion sake, with a kind of reluctancy, 'twas troublesome and painful to thee to perform any such thing, præter voluntatem, against thy will. Thou never mad'st any conscience of lying, swearing, bearing false witness, murder, adultery, bribery, oppression, theft, drunkenness, idolatry, but hast ever done all duties for fear of punishment, as they were most advantageous, and to thine own ends, and committed all such notorious sins, with an extraordinary delight, hating that thou shouldest love, and loving that thou shouldest hate. Instead of Faith, fear, and love of God, repentance, &c. blasphemous thoughts have been ever harboured in his mind, even against God himself, the blessed Trinity: the <sup>2</sup>Scripture false, rude, harsh, immethodical: Heaven, hell, resurrection, mere toys and fables, <sup>3</sup>incredible, impossible, absurd, vain, ill contrived; Religion, Policy, an human invention, to keep men in obedience, or for profit, invented by Priests and Law-givers to that purpose. If there be any such supreme power he takes no notice of our doings, hears not our prayers, regardeth them not, will not, cannot help, or else he is partial, an excepter of persons, author of sin, a cruel, a destructive God, to create our souls, and destinate<sup>4</sup> them to eternal damnation, to make us worse than our dogs and horses, why doth he not govern things better, protect

Why doth he suffer Turks to overcome Christians, the enemy to triumph over his Church, Paganism to domineer in all places as it doth, heresies to multiply, such enormities to be committed, and so many such bloody wars, murders, massacres, plagues, feral diseases? why doth he not make us all good, able, sound? why makes he <sup>3</sup>venomous creatures, rocks, sands, deserts, this earth itself the muckhill of the world, a prison, an house of correction?

with many such horrible and execrable conceits, not fit to be uttered; terribilia de fide, horribilia de Divinitate.<sup>5</sup> They cannot some of them but think evil, they are compelled, volentes nolentes, to blaspheme, especially when they come to Church and pray, read, &c. such foul and prodigious suggestions come into their hearts.

These are abominable, unspeakable offences, and most opposite to God, tentationes fœdæ et impiæ,<sup>6</sup> yet in this case, he or they that shall be tempted and so affected, must know, that no man living is free from such thoughts in part, or at some times, the most divine spirits have been so tempted in some sort, evil custom, omission of holy exercises, ill company, idleness, solitariness, melancholy, or depraved nature, and the Devil is still ready to corrupt, trouble, and divert our souls, to suggest such blasphemous thoughts into our phantasies, ungodly, profane, monstrous and wicked conceits. If they come from Satan, they are more speedy, fearful and violent, the parties cannot avoid them : they are more frequent, I say, and monstrous when they come ; for the Devil he is a spirit, and hath means and opportunity to mingle himself with our spirits, and sometimes more slyly, sometimes more abruptly, and openly, to suggest such devilish thoughts into our hearts ; he insults and domineers in Melancholy distempered phantasies, and persons especially : Melancholy is balneum diaboli, as Serapio holds, the Devil's bath, and invites him to come to it. As a sick man frets, raves in his fits, speaks and doth he knows not what, the Devil violently compels such crazed souls, to think such damned thoughts against their wills, they cannot but do it ; sometimes more continueate, or by fits, he takes his advantage, as the subject is less able to resist, he aggravates, extenuates, affirms denies, damns, confounds the spirits, troubles heart, brain, humors organs, senses, and wholly domineers in their imaginations. If they proceed from themselves, such thoughts, they are remiss and moderate, not so violent and monstrous, not so frequent. The Devil commonly suggests things opposite to nature, opposite to God and his word, impious, absurd, such as a man would never of himself, or could not conceive, they strike terror and horror into the party's own heart. For if he or they be asked, whether they do approve of such like thoughts or no? they answer (and their own souls truly dictate as much) they abhor them as Hell, and the Devil himself, they would fain think otherwise if they could ; he hath thought otherwise, and with all his soul desire so to think again ; he doth resist, and hath some good motion: intermixt now and then : so that such blasphemous, impious, unclean thoughts, are not his own, but the Devil's ; they proceed not from him, but from a crazed phantasy, distempered humours, black fumes which offend his brain :<sup>1</sup> they are thy crosses, the Devil's sins, and he shall answer for them, he doth enforce thee to do that which thou dost abhor, and didst never give consent to : and although he hath sometimes so slyly set upon thee, and so far prevailed, as to make thee in some sort to assent to, to delight in such wicked thoughts, yet they have not proceeded from a confirmed will in thee, but are of that nature which thou dost afterwards reject and abhor. Therefore be not overmuch troubled and dismayed with such kind of suggestions, at least if they please thee not, because they are not thy personal sins, for which thou shalt incur the wrath of God, or his displeasure : contemn, neglect them, let them go as they come, strive not too violently, or trouble thyself too much, but as our Saviour said to Satan in like case, say thou, Avoid, Satan,<sup>1</sup> I detest thee and them. Satanæ est mala ingerere (saith Austin) nostrum non consentire : as Satan labours to suggest, so must we strive not to give consent, and it will be sufficient : the more anxious and solicitous thou art, the more perplexed, the more thou shalt otherwise be troubled, and intangled. Besides, they must know this, all so molested and distempered, that, although these be most execrable and grievous sins, they are pardonable yet, through God's mercy and goodness they may be forgiven, if they be penitent and sorry for them. Paul himself confesseth, Rom. 7. 19, [20.] He did not the good he would do, but the evil which he would not do ; 'tis not I, but sin that dwelleth in me. 'Tis not thou, but Satan's suggestions, his craft and subtilty, his malice. Comfort thyself then, if thou be penitent and grieved, or desirous to be so, these heinous sins shall not be laid to thy charge ; God's mercy is above all sins, which if thou do not finally contemn, without doubt thou shalt be saved. <sup>2</sup>No man sins against the Holy Ghost, but he that wilfully and finally renounceth Christ, and condemneth him and his word to the last, without which there is no salvation, from which grievous sin, God of his infinite mercy deliver us. Take hold of this to be thy comfort, and meditate withal on God's word, labour to pray, to repent, to be renewed in mind, keep thine heart with all diligence, Prov. 4. 13. Resist the Devil, and he will fly from thee,<sup>3</sup> pour out thy soul unto the Lord with sorrowful Hannah ; pray continually, as Paul enjoins,<sup>4</sup> and as David did, Psal. 1. meditate on his Law day and night.

Yea, but this meditation is that that mars all, and mistaken, makes many men far worse, misconceiving all they read or hear, to their own overthrow ; the more they search and read Scriptures, or divine Treatises, the more they puzzle themselves, as a bird in a net, the more they are intangled and precipitated into this posterous gulf. Many are called, but few are chosen, Mat. 20. 16, and 22. 14, with such like places of Scripture misinterpreted, strike them with horror, they doubt presently whether they be of this number or no: God's eternal decree of predestination, absolute reprobation, and such fatal tables<sup>1</sup> they form to their own ruin, and impinge upon this rock of despair. How shall they be assured of their salvation, by what signs? If the righteous scarcely be saved, where shall the ungodly and sinners appear? 1. Pet. 4. 18. Who knows, saith Solomon, whether he be elect? This grinds their souls, how shall they discern they are not reprobates? But I say again, how shall they discern they are? From the Devil can be no certainty, for he is a liar from the beginning:<sup>2</sup> if he suggest any such thing, as too frequently he doth, reject him as a deceiver, an enemy of human kind, dispute not with him, give no credit to him, obstinately refuse him, as S. Anthony did in the wilderness, whom the Devil set upon in several shapes, or as the Collier did, so do thou by him. For when the Devil tempted him with the weakness of his faith, and told him, he could not be saved, as being ignorant in the principles of Religion; and urged him moreover to know what he believed, what he thought of such and such points and Mysteries: the Collier told him, he believed as the Church did; but what (said the Devil again) doth the Church believe? as I do (said the Collier) and what's that thou believest? as the Church doth, &c. when the Devil could get no other answer, he left him. If Satan summon thee to answer, send him to Christ: he is thy liberty, thy protector against cruel death, raging sin, that roaring Lion;<sup>3</sup> he is thy righteousness, thy Saviour, and thy life. Though he say, thou art not of the number of the Elect, a Reprobate, forsaken of God, hold thine own still, let his be as a Bulwark, a Brazen Wall to defend thee, stay thyself in that certainty of faith; let that be thy comfort, CHRIST will protect thee, vindicate thee, thou art one of his flock, he will triumph over the Law, vanquish Death, overcome the Devil, and destroy Hell. If he say thou art none of the Elect, no Believer, reject him, defy him, thou hast thought otherwise, and mayest so be resolved again; comfort thyself; this persuasion cannot come from the Devil, and much less can it be grounded from thyself; men are liars, and why shouldest thou distrust? A denying Peter, a persecuting Paul, an adulterous cruel David, have been received; an Apostate Solomon may be converted; no sin at all but impenitency can give testimony of final reprobation. Why shouldest thou then distrust, misdoubt thyself, upon what ground, what suspicion? This opinion alone of particularity? Against that, and for the certainty of Election and salvation on the other side, see God's good will toward men, hear how generally his grace is proposed to him, and him, and them, each man in particular, and to all, 1. Tim. 2. 4. God wills that all men be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth. 'Tis an universal promise, God sent not his Son into the world, to condemn the world, but that through him the world might be saved, John 3. 17. He then that acknowledgeth himself a man in the world, must likewise acknowledge, he is of that number that is to be saved: Ezek. 33. 11. I will not the death of a sinner, but that he repent and live. But thou art a sinner, therefore he will not thy death. This is the will of him that sent me, that every man that believeth in the Son, should have everlasting life, John 6. 40. He would have no man perish, but all come to repentance, 2 Pet. 3. 9. Besides, remission of sins is to be preached, not to a few, but universally to all men. Go therefore and tell all Nations, baptizing them, &c. Matth. 28. 19. Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature, Mark 16. 15. Now there cannot be contradictory wills in God; he will have all saved, and not all, how can this stand together? be secure then, believe, trust in him, hope well, and be saved. Yea, that's the main matter, how shall I believe, or discern my security, from carnal presumption? my faith is weak and faint, I want those signs and fruits of Sanctification, <sup>1</sup>sorrow for sin, thirsting for Grace, groanings of the Spirit, love of Christians as Christians, avoiding occasion of sin, endeavour of new obedience, charity, love of God, perseverance. Though these signs be languishing in thee, and not seated in thine heart, thou must not therefore be dejected or terrified; the effects of faith and the Spirit are not yet so fully felt in thee; conclude not therefore thou art a Reprobate, or doubt of thine Election, because the Elect themselves are without them, before their conversion. Thou mayest in the Lord's good time be converted ; some are called at the eleventh hour.<sup>1</sup> Use, I say, the means of thy conversion, expect the Lord's leisure,<sup>2</sup> if not yet called, pray thou mayest be, or at least wish and desire thou mayest be.

Notwithstanding all this which might be said to this effect, to ease their afflicted minds, what comfort our best Divines can afford in this case, Zanchius, Beza, &c. this furious curiosity, needless speculation, fruitless meditation about election, reprobation, free-will, grace, such places of Scripture preposterously conceived, torment still, and crucify the souls of too many, and set all the world together by the ears. To avoid which inconveniences, and to settle their distressed minds, to mitigate those divine Aphorisms (though in another extreme somewhat) our late Arminians have revived that plausible doctrine of universal grace, which many Fathers, our late Lutherans and modern Papists do still maintain, that we have free-will of our selves, and that grace is common to all that will believe. Some again, though less orthodoxal, will have a far greater part saved, than shall be damned (as Caëlius Secundus stiffly maintains in his Book, De amplitudine regni celestis, or some Impostor under his name) beatorum numerus multò major quàm damnatorum. 'He calls that other Tenent of special Election and Reprobation, a prejudicate, envious, and malicious opinion, apt to draw all men to desperation. Many are called, few chosen,<sup>3</sup> &c. He opposeth some opposite parts of Scripture to it, Christ came into the world to save sinners,<sup>4</sup> &c. And four especial Arguments he produceth, one from God's power. If more be damned than saved, he erroneously concludes. 'the Devil hath the greatest Sovereignty ; for what is power but to protect ? and Majesty consists in multitude. If the Devil have the greater part, where is his mercy ? where is his power ? how is he Deus Optimus Maximus, misericors ? &c. Where is his greatness ? where his goodness ? He proceeds, We account him a murderer that is accessary only, or doth not help when he can ; which may not be supposed of God without great offence, because he may do what he will, and is otherwise accessary, and the author of sin. The nature of good is to be communicated, God is good, and will not then be contracted in his goodness; for how is he the Father of mercy and comfort, if his good concern but a few? O envious and unthankful men to think otherwise! <sup>1</sup> Why should we pray to God that are Gentiles, and thank him for his mercies and benefits, that hath damned us all innocuous for Adam's offence, one man's offence, one small offence, eating of an Apple? why should we acknowledge him for our Governor, that hath wholly neglected the salvation of our souls, condemned us, and sent no Prophets or Instructors to teach us, as he hath done to the Hebrews? So Julian the Apostate objects. Why should these Christians (Cælius urgeth) reject us, and appropriate God unto themselves, Deum illum suum unicum, &c. But to return to our forged Cælius. At last he comes to that, he will have those saved that never heard of, or believed in Christ, ex puris naturalibus, with the Pelagians, and proves it out of Origen and others. They (saith <sup>2</sup>Origen) that never heard God's word, are to be excused for their ignorance: we may not think God will be so hard, angry, cruel or unjust as to condemn any man indictâ causâ.<sup>3</sup> They alone (he holds) are in the state of damnation that refuse Christ's mercy and grace, when it is offered. Many worthy Greeks and Romans, good moral honest men, that kept the Law of Nature, did to others as they would be done to themselves, are as certainly saved, he concludes, as they were that lived uprightly before the Law of Moses. They were acceptable in God's sight, as Job was, the Magi, the Queen of Sheba, Darius of Persia, Socrates, Aristides, Cato, Curius, Tully, Seneca, and many other Philosophers, upright livers, no matter of what Religion, as Cornelius,<sup>4</sup> out of any Nation, so that he live honestly, call on God, trust in him, fear him, he shall be saved. This Opinion was formerly maintained by the Valentinian and Basilidian Hereticks, revived of late in <sup>5</sup>Turkey, of which sect Rustan Bassa was Patron, defended by <sup>6</sup>Galeatius, Martius, and some ancient Fathers, and of later times favoured by <sup>7</sup>Erasmus, by Zuinglius in exposit. fidei ad Regem Gallie, whose Tenent Bullinger vindicates, and Gualter approves in a just Apology with many Arguments. There be many Jesuits that follow these Calvinists in this behalf, Franciscus Buchsius Moguntinus, Andradius Consil. Trident. many schoolmen, that out of the Rom. ii. 14, 15, are verily persuaded, that those good works of the Gentiles did so far please God, that they might vitam æternam promereri,<sup>1</sup> and be saved in the end. Sesellius, and Benedictus Justinianus in his Comment on the first of the Romans, Mathias Ditmarsh the Politician, with many others, hold a mediocrity, they may be salute non indiguit,<sup>2</sup> but they will not absolutely decree it. Hofmannus, a Lutheran Professor of Helmstadt, and many of his Followers, with most of our Church. and Papists, are stiff against it. Franciscus Collius hath fully censured all Opinions in his five Books de Paganorum animabus post mortem, and amply dilated this question, which who so will, may peruse. But to return to my Author, his Conclusion is, that not only wicked Livers, Blasphemers, Reprobates, and such as reject God's grace, but that the Devils themselves shall be saved at last, as <sup>3</sup>Origen long since delivered in his works, and our late <sup>4</sup>Socinians defend, Ostorodius, cap. 41. institut. Smaltius, &c. Those terms of all and for ever in Scripture, are not eternal, but only denote a longer time, which by many Examples they prove. The world shall end like a Comedy, and we shall meet at last in Heaven, and live in bliss altogether; or else in conclusion, in nihil evanescere.<sup>5</sup> For how can he be merciful that shall condemn any creature to eternal unspeakable punishment, for one small temporary fault, all posterity, so many myriads, for one and another man's offence, quid meruistis oves?<sup>6</sup> But these absurd paradoxes are exploded by our Church, we teach otherwise. That this vocation, predestination, election, reprobation, non ex corruptâ massâ, prævisa fide, as our Arminians, or ex prævisis operibus, as our Papists, non ex præteritione, but God's absolute decree ante mundum creatum (as many of our Church hold) was from the beginning, before the foundation of the world was laid, or homo conditus (or from Adam's fall, as others will, homo lapsus obiectum est reprobationis) with perseverantia sanctorum, we must be certain of our salvation, we may fall, but not finally, which our Arminians will not admit. According to his immutable, eternal, just decree and counsel of saving men and Angels, God calls all, and would have all to be saved according to the efficacy of vocation : all are invited, but only the elect apprehended : the rest that are unbelieving, impenitent, whom God in his just judgment leaves to be punished for their sins, are in a reprobate sense ; yet we must not determine who are such, condemn ourselves, or others, because we have an universal invitation ; all are commanded to believe, and we know not how soon or late before our end we may be received. I might have said more of this subject ; but forasmuch as it is a forbidden question, and in the Preface or Declaration to the Articles of the Church, printed 1633, to avoid factions and altercations, we that are University Divines especially, are prohibited all curious search, to print or preach, or draw the Article aside by our own sense and Comments, upon pain of Ecclesiastical censure, I will surcease, and conclude with <sup>1</sup> Erasmus of such controversies : Pugnet qui volet, ego censeo leges majorum reverenter suscipiendas, et religiosè observandas, velut à Deo profectas ; nec esse tutum, nec esse pium, de potestate publicâ sinistram concipere aut serere suspicionem. Et siquid est tyrannidis, quod tamen non cogat ad impietatem, satè is est ferre, quàm seditiose reluctari.

But to my former task. The last main torture and trouble of a distressed mind, is, not so much this doubt of Election, and that the promises of grace are smothered and extinct in them, nay quite blotted out, as they suppose, but withal God's heavy wrath, a most intolerable pain and grief of heart seizeth on them : to their thinking they are already damned, they suffer the pains of Hell, and more than possibly can be expressed, they smell brimstone, talk familiarly with Devils, hear and see Chimeras, prodigious, uncouth shapes, Bears, Owls, Anticks, black dogs, fiends, hideous out-cries, fearful noises, shrieks, lamentable complaints, they are possessed, <sup>2</sup> and through impatience they roar and howl, curse, blaspheme, deny God, call his power in question, abjure Religion, and are still ready to offer violence unto themselves, by hanging, drowning, &c. Never any miserable wretch from the beginning of the world, was in such a woful case. To such persons I oppose God's mercy, and his justice ; judicia Dei occulta, non injusta :<sup>1</sup> his secret counsel, and just judgment, by which he spares some, and sore afflicts others again in this life : his judgment is to be adored, trembled at, not to be searched or enquired after by mortal men : he hath reasons reserved to himself, which our frailty cannot apprehend. He may punish all, if he will, and that justly for sin ; in that he doth it in some, is to make a way for his mercy that they repent and be saved, to heal them, to try them, exercise their patience, and make them call upon him, to confess their sins, and pray unto him, as David did, Psal. 119. 137, Righteous art thou, O Lord, and just are thy judgments. As the poor Publican, Luke. 18. 13, Lord have mercy upon me a miserable sinner. To put confidence, and have an assured hope in him, as Job had, 13. 15, Though he kill me, I will trust in him : Ure, seca, occide, O Domine, (saith Austin) modo serves animam, kill, cut in pieces, burn my body (O Lord) to save my soul. A small sickness, one dash of affliction, a little misery, many times, will more humiliate a man, sooner convert, bring him home to know himself, than all those parænetical discourses, the whole Theory of Philosophy, Law, Physick and Divinity, or a world of instances and examples. So that this, which they take to be such an insupportable plague, is an evident sign of God's mercy and justice, of his love and goodness : periissent nisi periissent,<sup>2</sup> had they not thus been undone, they had finally been undone. Many a carnal man is lulled asleep in perverse security, foolish presumption, is stupified in his sins, and hath no feeling at all of them : I have sinned (he saith) and what evil shall come unto me ? Eccles. 5. 4. and tush, how shall God know it ?<sup>3</sup> And so in a reprobate sense goes down to Hell.

But here, Cynthiaus aurem vellit,<sup>4</sup> God pulls them by the ear, by affliction, he will bring them to Heaven and Happiness ; Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted, Mat. 5. 4, a blessed and an happy state, if considered aright, it is, to be so troubled. It is good for me that I have been afflicted, Psal. 119. [71,] Before I was afflicted I went astray : but now I keep thy word, [v. 67.] Tribulation works patience, patience hope, Rom. 5. 3, 4. and by such like crosses and calamities we are driven from the stake of security. So that affliction is a School or Academy, wherein the best Scholars are prepared to the Commencements of the Deity. And though it be most troublesome and grievous for the time, yet know this, it comes by God's permission and providence, he is a spectator of thy groans and tears, still present with thee, the very hairs of thy head are numbered,<sup>1</sup> not one of them can fall to the ground, without the express will of God: he will not suffer thee to be tempted above measure,<sup>2</sup> he corrects us all numero, pondere, et mensurâ,<sup>3</sup> the Lord will not quench the smoking flax, or break the buised reed,<sup>4</sup> Tentat (saith Austin) non ut obruat, sed ut coronet, He suffers thee to be tempted for thy good. And as a Mother doth handle her child sick and weak, not reject it, but with all tenderness observe and keep it, so doth God by us, not forsake us in our miseries, or relinquish us for our imperfections, but with all piety and compassion, support and receive us; whom he loves, he loves to the end. [John. 13. 1.] Rom. 8. [29, 30.] Whom he hath elected, those he hath called, justified, sanctified, and glorified. Think not then thou hast lost the Spirit, that thou art forsaken of God, be not overcome with heaviness of heart, but as David said, I will not fear, though I walk in the shadows of death [Ps. 23. 4]. We must all go, non à deliciis ad delicias,<sup>5</sup> but from the Cross to the Crown, by Hell to Heaven, as the old Romans put Virtue's Temple in the way to that of Honour: we must endure sorrow and misery in this life. 'Tis no new thing this, God's best servants and dearest children have been so visited and tried. Christ in the Garden cried out, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? [Matt. 27. 46,] his son by nature, as thou art by adoption and grace. Job in his anguish said, The arrows of the Almighty God were in him, Job 6. 4. his terrors fought against him, the venom drank up his spirit. Cap. 13. 26, he saith, God was his enemy, writ bitter things against him, (16. 9.) hated him. His heavy wrath had so seized on his soul. David complains, His eyes were eaten up, sunk into his head. Psal. 6. 7: his moisture became as the drought in Summer, [Ps. 32. 4.] his flesh was consumed, his bones vexed: yet neither Job nor David did finally despair. Job would not leave his hold, but still trusted in him, acknowledging him to be his good God. The Lord gives, the Lord takes, blessed be the name of the Lord, Job. 1. 21. Behold I am vile, I abhor myself, repent in dust and ashes, Job 42. 6. David humbled himself, Psal. 31. [22.] and upon his confession received mercy. Faith, hope, repentance, are the sovereign cures and remedies, the sole comforts in this case; confess, humble thyself, repent, it is sufficient. Quod purpura non potest, saccus potest, saith Chrysostom; the King of Nineveh's sackcloth and ashes did that which his Purple Robes and Crown could not effect; quod diadema non potuit, cinis perfecit. Turn to him, he will turn to thee; the Lord is near those that are of a contrite heart, and will save such as be afflicted in spirit, Psal. 34. 18. He came to the lost sheep of Israel, Mat. 15. 24. Si cadentem intuetur, clementiæ manum protendit, he is at all times ready to assist. Nunquam spernit Deus pœnitentiam, si sincerè et simpliciter offeratur, he never rejects a penitent sinner; though he have come to the full height of iniquity, wallowed and delighted in sin; yet if he will forsake his former ways, libenter amplexatur, he will receive him. Parcam huic homini, saith <sup>1</sup> Austin (ex persona Dei) quia sibi ipsi non pepercit; ignoscam, quia peccatum agnovit. I will spare him, because he hath not spared himself; I will pardon him, because he doth acknowledge his offence; let it be never so enormous a sin, his grace is sufficient, 2. Cor. 12. 9. Despair not then, faint not at all, be not dejected, but rely on God, call on him in thy trouble, and he will hear thee, he will assist, help, and deliver thee. Draw near to him, and He will draw near to thee, Jam. 4. 8. Lazarus was poor, and full of boils, and yet still he relied upon God, Abraham did hope beyond hope.

Thou exceptest, these were chief men, divine spirits, Deo cari, beloved of God, especially respected; but I am a contemptible and forlorn wretch, forsaken of God, and left to the merciless fury of evil spirits. I cannot hope, pray, repent, &c. How often shall I say it! thou mayest perform all these duties, Christian-offices, and be restored in good time. A sick man loseth his appetite, strength and ability, his disease prevaileth so far, that all his faculties are spent, hand and foot perform not their duties, his eyes are dim, hearing dull, tongue distastes things of pleasant relish, yet nature lies hid, recovereth again, and expelleth all those feculent matters by vomit, sweat, or some such like evacuations. Thou art spiritually sick, thine heart is heavy, thy mind distressed, thou mayest happily recover again, expel those dismal passions of fear and grief; God did not suffer thee to be tempted above measure; <sup>1</sup> whom he loves (I say) he loves to the end; <sup>2</sup> hope the best. David in his misery prayed to the Lord, remembering how he had formerly dealt with him; and with that meditation of God's mercy confirmed his Faith, and pacified his own tumultuous heart in his greatest agony. O my soul, why art thou so disquieted within me, &c.<sup>3</sup> Thy soul is eclipsed for a time, I yield, as the Sun is shadowed by a cloud; no doubt but those gracious beams of God's mercy will shine upon thee again, as they have formerly done; those embers of Faith, Hope and Repentance, now buried in ashes, will flame out afresh, and be fully revived. Want of Faith, no feeling of grace for the present, are not fit directions; we must live by Faith, not by feeling; 'tis the beginning of grace to wish for grace: we must expect and tarry. David, a man after God's own heart, was so troubled himself; Awake, why sleepest thou? O Lord, arise, cast me not off; wherefore hidest thou thy face, and forgettest mine affliction and oppression? My soul is bowed down to the dust. Arise, redeem us, &c. Psal. 44. 23-26. He prayed long before he was heard, expectans expectavit; <sup>4</sup> endured much before he was relieved, Psal. 69. 3. He complains, I am weary of crying, and my throat is dry, mine eyes fail, whilst I wait on the Lord; and yet he perseveres. Be not dismayed, thou shalt be respected at last. God often works by contrarieties, he first kills, and then makes alive, he woundeth first, and then healeth, he makes man sow in tears, that he may reap in joy; 'tis God's method: he that is so visited, must with patience endure and rest satisfied for the present. The Paschal Lamb was eaten with sour herbs; <sup>5</sup> we shall feel no sweetness of his blood, till we first feel the smart of our sins. Thy pains are great, intolerable for the time; thou art destitute of grace and comfort, stay the Lord's leisure, he will not (I say) suffer thee to be tempted above what thou art able to bear, 1. Cor. 10. 13, but will give an issue to temptation. He works all for the best to them that love God, Rom. 8. 28. Doubt not of thine election, it is an immutable decree; a mark never to be defaced; you have been otherwise, you may and shall be. And for your present affliction, hope the best, it will shortly end. He is present with his servants in their affliction, Psal. 91. 15. Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of all, Psal. 34. 19. Our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh in us an eternal weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4. 17. Not answerable to that glory which is to come; though now in heaviness, saith 1 Pet. 1. 6. you shall rejoice.

Now last of all to those external impediments, terrible objects, which they hear and see many times, Devils, Bugbears, and Mormoluces,<sup>1</sup> noisome smells, &c. These may come, as I have formerly declared in my precedent discourse of the Symptoms of Melancholy, from inward causes; as a concave glass reflects solid bodies, a troubled brain for want of sleep, nutriment, and by reason of that agitation of spirits to which Hercules de Saxoniâ attributes all Symptoms almost, may reflect and shew prodigious shapes, as our vain fear and crazed phantasy shall suggest and feign, as many silly weak women and children in the dark, sick folks, and frantick for want of repast and sleep, suppose they see that they see not: many times such terriculaments<sup>2</sup> may proceed from natural causes, and all other senses may be deluded. Besides, as I have said, this humour is balneum Diaboli, the Devil's Bath, by reason of the distemper of humours, and infirm Organs in us: he may so possess us inwardly to molest us, as he did Saul and others, by God's permission; he is Prince of the Air, and can transform himself into several shapes, delude all our senses for a time, but his power is determined,<sup>3</sup> he may terrify us, but not hurt: God hath given his Angels charge over us, Psal. 91. 11. 12. He is a wall round about his people.<sup>4</sup> There be those that prescribe Physick in such cases, 'tis God's instrument, and not unfit. The Devil works by mediation of humours, and mixt diseases must have mixt remedies. Levinus Lemnius cap. 57 & 58. exhort. ad vit. ep. instit. is very copious in this subject, besides that chief remedy of confidence in God, prayer, hearty repentance, &c. of which, for your comfort and instruction, read Lavater de spectris part. 3. cap. 5, & 6; Wierus de præstigiis dæmonum lib. 5. to Philip Melancthon, and others, and that Christian armour which Paul prescribes;<sup>5</sup> he sets down certain Amulets, herbs, and precious stones, which have marvellous virtues all profligandis dæmonibus, to drive away

John's wort, perforata herba, which by a divine virtue drives away Devils, and is therefore called fuga dæmonum:<sup>1</sup> all which rightly used by their suffitus,<sup>2</sup> Dæmonum vexationibus obsistunt, afflictas mentes à dæmonibus relevant, et venenatis fumis, expel Devils themselves, and all devilish illusions. Anthony Musa, the Emperor Augustus his Physician, cap. 6. de Betonia, approves of Betony to this purpose; <sup>3</sup>the antients used therefore to plant it in Church-yards, because it was held to be an holy herb, and good against fearful visions, did secure such places it grew in, and sanctified those persons that carried it about them. Idem fere Mathiolus in Dioscoridem. Others commend accurate musick; so Saul was helped by David's harp.<sup>4</sup> Fires to be made in such rooms where spirits haunt, good store of lights to be set up, odours, perfumes, and suffumigations, as the Angel taught Tobias,<sup>5</sup> of brimstone and bitumen, thus, myrrha, briony-root, with many such simples which Wecker hath collected, lib. 15. de secretis cap. 15. R sulphuris drachmam unam, recoquatur in vitis albæ aqua, ut dilutius sit sulphur; detur ægro; nam dæmones sunt morbi (saith Rich. Argentine, lib. de præstigiis dæmonum cap. ult.) Viget hath a far larger receipt to this purpose, which the said Wecker cites out of Wierus. R sulphuris, vini, bituminis, opoponacis, galbani, castorei, &c. Why sweet perfumes, fires and so many lights should be used in such places, Ernestus Burgravius, lucerna vitæ et mortis, and Fortunius Lycetus assigns this cause, quod his boni Genii provocentur, mali arceantur; because good spirits are well pleased with, but evil abhor them. And therefore those old Gentiles, present Mahometans, and Papists have continual lamps burning in their Churches all day, and all night, lights at funerals, and in their graves; lucernæ ardentes ex auro liquefacto for many ages to endure (saith Lazius) ne dæmones corpus

ledant ; lights ever burning, as those Vestal Virgins, Pythonissæ <sup>1</sup> maintained heretofore, with many such, of which read Tostatus in 2 Reg. cap. 6. quæst. 43 ; Thyreus cap. 57. 58. 62, &c. de locis infestis, Pictorius Isagog. de dæmonibus, &c. see more in them. Cardan would have the party affected wink altogether in such a case, if he see ought that offends him, or cut the Air with a sword in such places they walk and abide ; gladiis enim et lanceis terrentur, shoot a pistol at them, for being aerial bodies (as Cælius Rhodiginus lib. 1. cap. 29. Tertullian, Origen, Psellas, and many hold) if stricken, they feel pain. Papists commonly enjoin and apply crosses, holy-water, sanctified beads, Amulets, musick, ringing of bells, for to that end are they consecrated, and by them baptized, Characters, counterfeit relicks, so many Masses, Peregrinations, oblations, adjurations, and what not? Alexander Albertinus à Rocha, Petrus Thyreus, and Hieronymus Mengus, with many other Pontifical writers, prescribe and set down several forms of exorcisms, as well to houses possessed with Devils, as to demoniacal persons ; but I am of <sup>2</sup> Lemnius’ mind, ’tis but damnosa adjuratio, aut potius ludificatio, a mere mockage, a counterfeit charm, to no purpose, they are fopperies and fictions, as that absurd <sup>3</sup> story is amongst the rest, of a penitent woman seduced by a Magician in France, at S. Bawn, exorcised by Domphius, Michaelis, and a company of circumventing Friars. If any man (saith Lemnius) will attempt such a thing, without all those juggling circumstances, Astrological elections of time, place, prodigious habits, fustian, big, sesquipedal words, spells, crosses, characters, which exorcists ordinarily use, let him follow the example of Peter and John, that without any ambitious swelling terms, cured a lame man, Act. 3. 6. In the name of Jesus Christ rise and walk. His Name alone is the best and only charm against all such diabolical illusions ; so doth Origen advise, and so Chrysostom, Hæc erit tibi baculus, hæc turris inexpugnabilis, hæc armatura. Nos quid ad hæc dicemus, plures fortasse expectabunt, saith S. Austin, many men will desire my counsel and opinion, what’s to be done in this behalf? I can say no more, quam ut verâ fide, quæ per dilectionem operatur, ad Deum unum fugiamus, let them fly to God alone for help. Athanasius, in his book De variis quæst. prescribes as a present charm against Devils, the beginning of the 67. Psalm, Exsurgat Deus, dissipentur inimici, &c. But the best remedy is to fly to God, to call on him, hope, pray, trust, rely on him, to commit ourselves wholly to him. What the practice of the Primitive Church was in this behalf, et quis dæmonia ejiciendi modus, read Wierus at large, lib. 5. de Cura. Lam. meles. cap. 38. et deinceps.

Last of all : if the party affected shall certainly know this malady to have proceeded from too much fasting, meditation, precise life, contemplation of God's judgments (for the Devil deceives many by such means) in that other extreme he circumvents Melancholy itself, reading some Books, Treatises, hearing rigid Preachers, &c. If he shall perceive that it hath begun first from some great loss, grievous accident, disaster, seeing others in like case, or any such terrible object, let him speedily remove the cause, which to the cure of this disease Navarrus so much commends, 'avertat cogitationem à re scrupulosa, by all opposite means, art, and industry, let him laxare animum,<sup>2</sup> by all honest recreations, refresh and recreate his distressed soul ; let him direct his thoughts, by himself and other of his friends. Let him read no more such tracts or subjects, hear no more such fearful tones, avoid such companies, and by all means open himself, submit himself to the advice of good Physicians and Divines, which is contraventio scrupulorum,<sup>3</sup> as <sup>4</sup>he calls it, hear them speak to whom the Lord hath given the tongue of the learned, to be able to minister a word to him that is weary, <sup>5</sup>whose words are as flagons of wine. Let him not be obstinate, head-strong, peevish, wilful, self-conceited (as in this malady they are) but give ear to good advice, be ruled and persuaded ; and no doubt but such good counsel may prove as prosperous to his soul, as the Angel was to Peter, that opened the Iron-gates, loosed his bands, brought him out of prison, and delivered him from bodily thralldom ;<sup>6</sup> they may ease his afflicted mind, relieve his wounded soul, and take him out of the jaws of Hell itself. I can say no more, or give better advice to such as are any way distressed in this kind, than what I have given and said. Only take this for a corollary and conclusion, as thou tenderest thine own welfare in this, and all other melancholy, thy
